Welcome the Washing Day!

SOMETHING ENTIRELY NEW!
Washing reduced to a Science
by using the

CHAMPION

Wash Boiler!

Patented by C. W. HERMANCE, Mar. 30, 1869.

A few among the many advantages this Boiler has over other devices for Washing
are:

1st. It dissolves the dirt and cleanses the garments by turning hot water through them.

2d. There is no wear while undergoing this process.

3d. It produces a better and more thorough action than any other device yet invented for washing.

4th. It washes the whole garments at once.

5th. It will do your washing easier, and less than one-half the time usually required.

6th. It saves money, for it saves soap, time and energy.

7th. It is worth of soap is sufficient, with this Boiler to do a large washing.

8th. It takes less fuel, the water, and when done
you are not half so tired, and consequently better prepared for your washing is better done.

Poetry.

A NEW YEAR ODE.

Wind, oh! grandeur, wind the clock,
Though thy years are running down;
Count the hours till death shall knock,
Win faith's smile to meet his frown—
Wind the clock, wind the clock,
Wind the cross and win the crown.

Wind, oh! mother, wind the clock,
Though thy years run brightly still;
Tend thy little flock,
Keep thy steps down the hill
Wind the clock, wind the clock,
Autumn's rain, and Winter's chill!

Wind, fair youth, old wind the clock,
Though thy years run sweet and strong;
Soon will come Life's battle-bush,
Drowning Pleasure's siren song;
Wind the clock, wind the clock,
Joy is short, remorse is long!

Wind, sweet child, old wind the clock,
Though thy years are scarce begun—
Tender lambkin of the flock,
Morning's gold is easy won!
Wind the clock, wind the clock,
For the shadow tracks the sun.

Wind, oh! prophet, wind the clock,
Ere the running year be gone;
Wisdom's secret stores unlock,
Meditations of the years unborn;
Wind the clock, wind the clock,
Night and morning, wind and warn!

Wind, oh! Saviour, wind the clock,
For our lives are running down
One more year, old stand and knock,
One more year delay thy frown!
Wind the clock, wind the clock,
Fruit may yet the fig-tree crown!

Miscellany.

FOUND IN THE STREET.

"Do you know, sir, that I am almost starved, that I have had nothing to eat
for the last twenty-four hours?"

The young man started at this unexpected address, then turned, and regarded
the speaker for a moment curiously.

The scene was in North Avenue, and the time near midnight.

Horses and carriages were dashing
over the pavement, conveying gay parties
from theatre or supper.

The air was crisp and chill; the stars
shone cheerfully above, the lamps gleamed brilliantly below; yet the young man
was thus accosted, in the most fashionable thoroughfare in New York, by a stranger who was almost starved, and had eaten
nothing for twenty-four hours.

No wonder he turned to look curiously
at her!

Caleb, or Caleb Gordon, as his intimates called him, was a hard working young journalist, hard working, but well paid,
for he was a vastly clever and rapid writer, and found a ready market for all he wrote, besides being on the regular staff of one morning paper as musical and dramatic critic.

And in pursuit of this part of his vocation he had that evening been to the French opera to hear "Genevieve"—had stepped into Delmonico's for a light supper, and was now on his way to the office
to write up his evening's work.

He had no one but himself to take care of; made money enough to supply all his wants, including light suppers at Delmonico's when he desired them, and knew very little about the poverty and wretchedness of the under world of the great city he lived in.

Therefore he queried, in a tone of surprise, after looking at the questioner for a moment, "You say you have eaten
nothing for twenty-four hours?"

"A bit of bread and some coffee last evening, and nothing before that since the day before," and the girl gave a sigh
and a sob, and turned her face away.

"Bless my soul!" said Caleb: "come right along with me and get something."

You see Caleb was quite green—he had only been in the city about six months, having come well recommended
from a country newspaper, or else he would have given a quarter and sent her on her way to get something.

A married man, however, something worse might have come of it, who knows?
But as it was, he took her hand and placed it on his arm, and walked her rapidly down a side street towards a point where he knew there was an oyster saloon that kept open all night.

It was not exactly the place to take a lady; but it did not occur to Caleb to take her to Delmonico's—besides, they were past it.

She had said nothing further; but Caleb noticed that she leaned rather heavily on his arm, and as they passed a street lamp, and its light shone full in her face, he observed that she was very pale.

He hurried her along, and presently
they arrived at the saloon and were soon
seated opposite each other in a small private room or box, with a table between them.

Caleb called a waiter and ordered a glass of sherry, and when that was provided, gave it to the girl, who seemed absolutely about to faint, and begged her to drink it, which she did—then he ordered a substantial supper for her.

The waiter left them, and Caleb had opportunity of looking at his companion.
The wine had revived her, and a little color tinged her cheeks.

She seemed very young. Caleb thought of his little sister at the old homestead in the country, and guessed this girl must be of her age—about seventeen.

Thinking of his little sister, too, he could not help reflecting how he would feel if she were in such a strait as this poor creature and he felt a strange sensation under his watch pocket, and did not care to speak for a moment.

Then he said kindly and in a low voice,
"And now you must tell me how all this has been brought about, and perhaps I can help you."

But the girl folded her arms on the table, laid her head on them, and cried—
not loudly, but very bitterly.

"I don't like to see you cry," said
Caleb—and his voice was a little tremulous; that was a soft point in Caleb's

character; he never liked to see anybody cry.

The girl raised her head, and threw
the long, soft curling hair back from her face, and said: "You are very kind to me and I won't cry," and she didn't; she stopped instantly, which pleased him in more ways than one.

Caleb wasn't far wrong about her age
—probably his memories of his little sister had aided him in some occult way.

She was just about seventeen, and now that she had gained a little color, which between the wine and the tears, was manifestly pretty, or so, at least, Caleb
thought, but so thin—so thin!

She had pretty, soft, brown hair, and tender violet eyes—very large, and as they looked at Caleb, through the mist
of her late weeping, he thought he had never seen any half so expressive.

Her figure was trim and neatly clad, but poorly. Her hands were small but they bore the marks of labor, and the forefinger of her right hand was dotted over with little black specks, as Caleb remembered his mother's to have been when he was a boy at home, and sat in the arm chair sewing for him.

Then the nice hot supper came in, and
with an apology, she began to eat.

And how she did eat.

Caleb had never seen any one very hungry before, and he felt his own eyes grow dim as he watched her. And sometimes in the interior of his being he registered a little oath that she should never be hungry again not if he could help it;
and then he thought of his little sister
once more.

And at last the supper was eaten (of course Caleb took nothing, for Delmonico
had supplied him) and as she looked up,
and he asked her if she would have anything else, she said: "I am ashamed of myself for eating so much—but I was so hungry," and then she went to crying again, but still silently. And then, after a time, Caleb got her story out of her.

How she was crying because she had a widowed mother and little brother at home, who were as hungry as she was,
and who would not have any kind friend
to give them food; and how she had come out this night with a wicked purpose in her heart because she could not bear longer that they should starve; and how that when she spoke to Caleb her own hunger overcame her—and she was so selfish, so wickedly selfish—and now she must go. But Caleb started up and called back the waiter, and gave him
sundry orders very rapidly, and when he went away to fill them, put his hand on her shoulder and told her to sit quietly
a few moments, and he would go with her.
And then she sat down, like a very child,
as she was, and told him the rest of her story. Poor green Caleb had never heard one of those stories before.

They were very poor, she said,
ever since her father died, and that was when she was about ten years old. Her mother had supported them for a good while with her needle, and then Josey—
that was her name, Josey—had been able to sew, too; and thus they had managed to live, but that was all. And then her mother was taken sick, and she was left alone, and she had to take care of her mother, and after he had paid the bill
he tucked Josey under one arm, and they hurried up the steep saloon stairs and out into the starlight and the glare of street lamps again.

They took a car, and about twenty minutes later were finding their way up a dark court yard, into a narrow alleyway,
up flights of rickety stairs, and so to a room on the top floor of a tumble down
tenement house, which was Josey's home.

There was no fire in the little stove—a spluttering bit of candle burned on a rough pine table; and on the floor, upon
a mattress and covered with a few old quilts and rags, lay huddled the widowed mother and the poor little brother.

Caleb dropped his basket, and saying that he would be back in a moment, fled to a corner grocery which he had seen a boy about closing as he passed.

Five minutes later he was back in the room, with the boy following, laden with coal, wood and candles.

Then he made the fire with his own hands—for he had learned that accomplishment when he was a boy at the old homestead.

The candles were lighted, the table was spread, the mother and little boy were seated; when they were fairly at

what you have the most of; but my name name is Alph. Chestro—for quick, they call me Cheesy. But I have waited more time than common; I hear the old man giving tongue and I must worm
off, or the old boy will be here and lick
us both. So, captain, consider me yours, and if you'll eddy around some Sunday
I'll show you fun."

A New Year's Sermon to Young Men.

You are the architects of your own futures. Rely upon your own strength of body and soul. Take for your motto, self-reliance, honesty and industry; for your star, faith, perseverance and pluck; inscribe on your banner, "Be just and fear not." Don't take too much advice; keep at the helm and steer your own ship. Strike out. Think well of yourself. Fire above the mark you intend to hit. Assume your position. Don't practice excessive humility; you can't get above your level—
water don't run up hills—put potatoes in a cart over a rough road and the small ones will go to the bottom. Energy, invincible determination, with a right motive, are the levers that rule the world. The great art of commanding is to take a fair share of the work. Civility costs nothing and buys everything. Don't drink;
don't smoke; don't swear; don't gamble;
don't steal; don't deceive; don't tattle.
Be polite; be generous; be kind. Study hard; play hard. Be in earnest. Be selfreliant. Read good books. Love your fellow-men as your God; love your country and obey the laws; love truth; love virtue. Always do what your conscience tells you to be a duty, and leave the consequences with God.

THUNDERGUST.

Don't's Journal of Health has the following:

"Don't come down into the breakfast-room of a morning with a thunder-cloud over your pitiful phiz. What are you mad at? Have you a note to pay in the bank and not a dime to meet it? Have you the headache? Did the baby wake you from a sound sleep? Has the newsman failed to leave you the morning paper? or has a bill been presented at your door, bright and early, which you know very well ought to have been paid
long ago to the patient baker, the needy dressmaker, or the begrimed mechanic?
May be you have cut your face while shaving, or stumped your toe against the cat, or broke your watch spring in winding it up. May be you are ruffled because you have suddenly remembered that you failed to meet a business engagement yesterday; or took a short turn on a friend, or cheated somebody, and that it is about being found out, otherwise you would not have cared the snap of your finger about it. Perhaps as you entered the door and scanned the breakfast table
you missed some favorite dish."

But, does one of all these occurrences justify you in clouding the whole household, in hurting the feelings of your children, in discouraging the servants, and outraging the guests at your table? The man or woman who comes to the family
table with a scowl is a brute in nature,
and only wants an opportunity to bring out his littleness and meanness."

If, when you come to the breakfast-room you are sad from discouragement,
from fatigue, from illness, or from losses,
you are excusable, and you have our sympathy; but to meet the family with a frown, and cast a gloom over the whole household, simply because everything has not gone exactly according to your sovereign pleasure—you a poor, pitiful worm
of the hour; why, it is supremely ridiculous that anything else than contempt for it is simply impossible."

WHAT EDITORS HAVE TO DO.

If we reflect upon the variety of matter,
in a newspaper; that the work has to be done rapidly, and cannot in many particulars have the deliberation of the closet,
from the very nature of the case; that,
no matter what takes place, the comment
thereon must be made, the demands of the situation being as remorseless as tide
or time, moving on regardless of affliction, misfortune, death—when we consider these things and more that we might mention, all will understand that the general accuracy of the press and its general character for literary excellence are something remarkable. That, under these circumstances, the daily press of the country makes a few blunders; mixes

How Young America Speaks the Lingo.

"Young man, inquired a puzzled traveller, at a point of his journey where the way diverged in different directions,
"which of these roads will take me to Manchester?"

"Neither, sir; but, if you wait an hour, the stage will be along to take you to town for a quarter."

"You appear to be a shrewd boy, but not particularly charged with manners.
How old are you?"

"I'm hacin' around my fifteenth year;
and as for being shrewd, they reckon me that way round here. I have knocked the spots off old Dabad, and beat the schoolmaster at 'seven up' and parsing,
but when you talk about charged with manners, I'm well loaded and rammed, too!"

"Have you parents living?"

"Parents living! If you mean the old man and woman—no. I thank you, they slid and left me to play the thing
alone."

"With whom do you reside—I mean
with whom do you live?"

"Well, thar! if you call living being bound out till you're one-and-twenty to one of the meanest men that ever sat down to a life dinner, I live up the hill
there, to old Waggoner's who farms it with me and a yoke of roan stags."

"My young friend, your early culture
seems to have been sadly neglected.
Have you ever enjoyed Sabbath privileges?"

"You'd better think so; there ain't a hedgehog nor woodchuck within three miles of here but Waggoner has the meat
and I have the hide and tallow."

"What may I call your name, my lad?"

"You can't make any mistake; call me

up dates or facts badly; kills a dead man now and then, or buries a live one; misrepresents an opponent, or too warmly eulogizes a friend; or cuts other fantastic tricks, is not surprising. If it did not, the gods and not men would be the conductors of the press. That it performs its general duties of chronicling the goings on of the whole world, in events and in ideas, and makes valuable additions besides to the best of general literature, is matter about which those growlers at the press and those pretenders in it, who could not write an advertisement for a lost puppy so that it could be parsed, had better stop to think about.—Chicago Evening Post.

The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, JAN. 7, 1871.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."
TO OUR PATRONS.

Just thirty-five years ago to-day the PATRIOT, was launched on its first voyage, and in looking back at its salutary, we find the following paragraph:

"We do not enter upon our undertaking with any very high-raised expectations. We would, however, indulge the belief, that by an assiduous attention to our business and an earnest endeavor to make the best use of the means afforded us, we shall be enabled to furnish an acceptable weekly offering, and that an enterprising and growing community, among whom is the chosen scene of our labors and our hopes, will reward us with a liberal patronage."

An enterprising and growing community appreciated his humble efforts, and not only has its circle of readers constantly increased, but as a medium for advertising, it has always received a large share of public patronage; and now, as we enter the year 1871, we find our subscription list on the gain, and in such a prosperous condition that it would have gladdened the heart of the editor of 1837, and made him feel as though he had entered the golden days of his profession, and that his weekly offering had been acceptable and had indeed surpassed his expectations.

In glancing over a few numbers of its first volume we find the advertisement of the Quincy and Boston stage line which was quite an institution in those days, but would be thought at the present time to be a slow and tedious ride.

How few are among us who started with the little craft, as subscribers, advertisers or contributors. Most of the advertisers have stepped aside from the business circles for others to take their places, and very many who

"Life's troubled dreams o'er" have folded their hands and been laid away to quiet rest.

Our labors have not always been remunerative and pleasant; we have had our trials and vexations as others have had before us. But it gives us great encouragement to see so many of our patrons calling in to pay their little bills, telling us how they should miss their weekly visitor. It shall be our endeavor in the future as it has ever been our desire to make our paper a welcome guest, and we look forward to the time that there will be no borrowers, every family will have one of their own.

THANKS. Our news boys wish us to thank our subscribers for the very liberal remembrance of them last week. Several returned to our office with their pockets completely lined with currency, and happier little fellows are seldom seen. We hope it will encourage them to be more faithful in the delivery of the Patriot, and so we shall feel equally as well pleased. It is our aim that they shall put their papers into the hands of the subscribers and if they do not we would thank any of our patrons if they will inform us.—We think a kind word, or some other little thing will help them much to do their work. Our printer says he still kindly remembers one lady in the south part of the town who generously treated him one morning to a piece of warm mince pie, about twenty years ago, when he carried the Patriots.

NATIONAL MOUNT WOLLASTON BANK. At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the National Mount Wollaston Bank of this town, held on Tuesday last, the following gentlemen were elected Directors for the ensuing year:—

Lewis Bass, Joseph W. Robertson, Edward Turner, John Q. Adams, Wm. S. Perry, Eleazer Frederick, and Lemuel Baxter. At a subsequent meeting of the directors Edward Turner was re-elected President.

DEDICATION. The W. M. French Hose Company will dedicate their new house, recently built by Mr. Amos Litchfield at the head of the canal, on Monday evening next, as will be seen by a notice in another column.

SUDDEN DEATHS.

Since we went to press last week there has been two sudden deaths in this place. The first was that of Mr. George Blanchard who was found dead in his bed on Saturday morning last. The day previous he was on the roads shoveling snow and appeared as well as usual, and in good spirits. The next morning he was found dead in bed,—his body was warm but life had fled. It is supposed he died of heart disease. Mr. Blanchard owned for many years a very pleasant estate on Liberty street in the south part of the town, where he and his family resided; but more recently he has been employed by the town and stopped at the town farm. On Monday morning, Col. John J. May who boarded at the Hancock House was found dead in his room. From appearances he rose during the night and went toward the window, to open the same, and dropped dead of heart disease it is supposed; but as he occupied the room alone, and was not found until the next day, the facts are not known.

He was for many years cashier of the Merchant Bank, Boston, and boarded at that time with Col. Geo. H. French, then landlord of the Hancock House. After resigning his cashiership he went West and was absent several years. Since his return to this place he has occupied the position of Corresponding Clerk of the Merchants' Bank, and resided with Mrs. Prince, until some months since when he returned to the Hancock House. His health has been precarious for some years. He was a pleasant intelligent gentleman, and much respected by all who became acquainted with him. His remains were carried to Roxbury for interment.

Since writing the above there has been another death, more shocking than either of the others. It is that of Mr. Joseph E. Bowditch, son of Mr. Galen Bowditch, who shot himself on Thursday evening. The facts as far as we have been able to learn are these: He went to Boston in the morning on the express wagon, delivered his load and collected another and drove out as usual. On arriving at the stable he told his father his head ached and made the request that he should deliver the articles while he took care of the stable. Accordingly his father drove about the village delivering the parcels which had been collected during the day in the city and left Joseph to see to feeding the horses, &c. On returning he noticed a light up stairs in the stable, and immediately hurried to find the cause, when to his horror, he found his son lying in a pool of blood,—he had shot himself through the head with an army pistol. He was a fine young man and much respected by those acquainted with him. He enlisted in the army during the rebellion, and served with much credit to himself. He was naturally nervous,—small matters usually worried him considerably, and at times he showed that his mind was not quite right.

GOOD TO EAT. Those of our readers who are desirous of purchasing good meats, vegetables and groceries, should call on Tutman & Son, Elm street, as they always keep a full supply of excellent articles fit for an epicure. Their superior home made sausages need only to be tasted to be pronounced first-rate.—Try them.

BRIEF LOCALS. Sleighing is gone,—water and ice are plenty in our streets. Probate Court will be held in this town on Wednesday next. Jacob F. Eaton commenced cutting ice on Totman & Son, Elm street, next. He is giving good satisfaction in this place.

Prof. Kennedy commences his next term of Dancing School on Saturday next. He is giving good satisfaction in this place.

The National Granite Bank choose their officers for the ensuing year on Tuesday next. J. Q. A. Wild is prepared to accommodate his patrons with anything in the carriage, blacksmith, and painting business. See notice.

We learn that Mr. John Page thinks he has got some clue to the $1200 worth of stolen calfskins taken from his shop last week.

The Citizens' Gas Light Company will choose their officers for the ensuing year on Thursday evening next.

LECTURE. The next and last lecture in the course at Quincy Point, will be given Tuesday evening next, by Dr. E. Tourjee of Boston. Subject of Lecture: "Music as an element of worship." At the close of which a "Praise Meeting" will be held in which the congregation will be invited to join in singing under the direction of Dr. Tourjee.—Admission free and all are especially invited to attend.

CLOTHING. Read the new advertisement of Messrs. Bennett & Co., in our columns to-day. They have one of the largest stores and the finest assortment of clothing to be found in Boston. There goods are made in the best manner and are now offered at greatly reduced prices.

GOOD NEWS—FARE REDUCED.

We are happy to learn that the Old Colony and Newport Railway Company have reduced the fare along the whole length of their road. It is certainly good news, not only to the people of Quincy, but to the public generally; and we believe it will result to the benefit of the Company as well as to the traveling community. Single tickets from Quincy to Boston are now sold for 20 cents, former price 25 cents; package of ten for $1.70, formerly $2.—One hundred tickets at the old rate. The fare from Quincy to Quincy Adams is only 5 cents, former price 10 cents; to Wollaston is only 5 cents, to Atlantic 10 cents, to Neponset 12 cents, and to Harrison Square 15 cents, it was formerly 25 cents. The fare from Quincy to Braintree is now 12 cents; South Braintree 15 cents. Remember, these are the prices asked for tickets at the depots, but if purchased in the car ten cents additional is charged.

This reduction although apparently slight, will, we believe make a great increase in the travel. Perhaps not all at once but if maintained two or three years, there will certainly be an increase of twenty-five per cent. It is truly a step in the right direction, and one which the people in this place have long felt the need of. Now they will not be obliged to visit apothecary shops, boot manufacturers and blacksmith shops to purchase railroad tickets so as to save a few cents as in former times. The fare now is very reasonable, and the man or woman who will creep into some by-place to purchase a ticket so as to save a penny must have a mean, contemptible soul.

The citizens of this place have for a year or more enjoyed excellent accommodation by the frequent running of trains, and fine depots. Now with low fare they certainly can ask for no better railroad accommodation.

The Abington Standard says that over 300 wild ducks have been shot in Nippenicket pond the present season. A couple of sportsmen, one day recently, shot thirty-two out of a flock of thirty-four wild geese on this pond.

It is a remarkable fact that the first name drawn from the jury box in Stoughton, for the trial of Moran, was that of Minot C. Packard, his victim; and the second name was that of Packard's nearest neighbor.

DEDICATION. The new High school building at Dorchester, corner of Dorchester Avenue and Centre street, was dedicated on Saturday last. The work of its erection was begun by the authorities of the town of Dorchester previous to annexation to Boston, and during the past summer has been carried to completion under the direction of the city government. It is undoubtedly one of the most thoroughly constructed school edifices which the city possesses, and in its detail and furniture nothing has been omitted which the genius of modern improvement has suggested as desirable and advantageous to the administration of a first-class educational establishment. It has been occupied by the school since the close of the summer vacation, but the formal dedication of the building has been postponed until the present time, as a compliment to the chairman of the high school committee, who has been abroad in Europe.

RAILROAD STATISTICS. The following figures are taken from the railroad statistics for ten months ending September 30th, to be submitted to the Legislature in January. Old Colony and Newport Railway.—Total debt, $2,986,000; decrease in ten months, $46,600; cash assets, $325,000; number of passengers carried, 2,265,898, averaging 156 miles; tons of merchandise, 274,200; averaging 27.2 miles; income, $1,279,848; net, $297,354; engines, 38; passenger cars, 73; baggage cars, 18; freight cars, 467; gravel cars, 92.

GENEROUSITY. Rev. Phoebe A. Hanna, pastor of the Universalist Society, in New Haven, Conn., received from her parishioners a roll of greenbacks amounting to one hundred and seventy-five dollars, encircled by a massive gold ring, as a Christmas gift.

The United States Senate will probably stand, on the fourth of next March, fifty-eight Republicans and sixteen Democrats. The admission of Colorado, which is deemed probable, will add two more to the Republican vote, making a working majority large enough for all practical purposes.—Lynn Reporter.

JUBILEE BOOK. Mr. Gilmore's history of the great Jubilee will be issued in a few weeks from the University Press. It will contain a racy amount of this never to be forgotten event with accurate lists of all who sung. Editors and other guests present. Musical people will watch its publication with interest.

THE G. A. R. FAIR.

To the Publisher of the Patriot. Permit me to report through the medium of your columns to all who are interested in the result of the recent G. A. R. Fair, that the net receipts amounted, after the payment of all expenses, to $1,351.14.

Our thanks are due to the ladies who kindly volunteered their aid in carrying on the Fair, and to our fellow citizens who have so liberally provided the means for effecting the charitable objects of our organization.

It will be our aim to expend the fund thus placed in our hands, judiciously and economically, and in such a manner that the generous contributions of the donors will accomplish the greatest possible good among a class of people who deserve perhaps more than any other the care and protection of the community.

In behalf of Paul Revere Post No. 88, H. LUNT, Treasurer.

LECTURES. The last of a series of lectures for Christian instruction will be given in the Universalist Church, next Sunday evening. Service at 6.30.—Special theme: The doctrine of the Resurrection of the Just.

SOMEBODY BURNS GAS. By last week's Patriot some might think that not much gas was burnt in this village, but this is not the case for upwards of 240,000 feet was consumed last month, which is the largest quantity we believe ever used here in one month. There certainly must be an increase in the population to require so much light. We shall have to look into this subject and accordingly will publish a list of births in Quincy for 1870 in a few weeks.

FOR SALE. Thayer's Block at Wollaston is offered for sale. It is a fine building newly built and pleasantly located. For particulars see posters.

DEDICATION. The enlarged Church of the Universalist Parish of South Weymouth was rededicated on Tuesday last. Sermon by Rev. Mr. Biddle of Lynn. Sentences of dedication by Mr. Skinner of Quincy. In the evening Rev. Mr. Baker was installed as Pastor. Sermon by Prof. Leonard of Tufts College. Prayer of installation by Mr. Skinner. Address to the Society by Rev. Mr. Chapin.

Summary Intelligence.

The Chicago papers say there are more poor people out of employment in that section now, than for any time during the past eight years.

California, looking back over 1870, rejoices that it has seen during the year the shipment of the first bale of home-raised silk; the raising of the first successful crop of cotton, and the first success in the manufacture of beet sugar.

A man in Grantham, N. H., week before last tapped 60 trees and made ten and a half gallons of nice maple syrup.

Military operation have been suspended to a great extent, at the seat of war in Europe, owing to the extreme cold weather.

Six hundred and forty-five school-houses have been built in Ohio during the past year.

The tower of the new Catholic Cathedral in Boston will be three hundred and twenty feet high—the highest in the country.

Owing to the low tide the oyster beds in the New London vicinity have been laid bare and large numbers of oysters frozen.

A big squash raised in Vermont has been sold for twenty-five dollars. The average daily commitments to the Tombs in Boston last year was $5, of whom 22 were for drunkenness.

Only one person in half a million railway travellers has been injured by accidents.

There are 74,000 doctors in the United States.

One thousand five hundred and seventy-four registered letters were stolen last year.

The value of the yearly fruit crop of California is estimated at five million dollars.

Seven millions of dollars are invested in the patent medicine business in this country.

Excellent hard wood sells for $6 a cord in Lewiston Me.

Nantucket boys are not allowed to coast on the sidewalk or loafers to stand on the corners.

Ohio papers say a peculiar feature of dressed hogs this season is that the meat is better and heavier than usual. Hogs invariably weigh more than the best judges would estimate them on foot.

Vice-President Colfax has prepared for publication an article advocating the nomination of President Grant as the Republican candidate in 1872.

Vinnie Ream's statue of Lincoln, ordered by Congress, has been placed in the centre of the rotunda of the Capitol at Washington.

SILVER WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hardwick celebrated their silver wedding at their residence on Sen street on Monday evening last. Over one hundred of their friends were present to congratulate them upon the felicitous occasion, and to wish them many happy returns of their bridal day. Many valuable gifts expressed in substantial manner the well wishes of those present. Among other articles, an elegant tea set, of exquisite design and finished, was presented in a neatly speech by Rufus Foster, Esq., and Mr. Hardwick received the compliment of the friendly offering in a few pleasant and appropriate words. A beautiful poem, from the pen of E. Porter Dyer, who was unable to be present, was read by one of the company. Also an original poem, containing numerous spicy allusions, apropos to the occasion, was read by Stephen Morse, Esq.

THE LEGISLATURE. The Legislature met on Wednesday last and organized without any delay. Mr. Coolidge was chosen President of the Senate, and Mr. Jewell, Speaker of the House, with great unanimity, and both made brief and excellent addresses on assuming the duties of their respective offices. After the organization the members of the different departments of the government proceeded to the Old South to hear the usual election sermon.

Those of our citizens who have not purchased New Year's presents for their children are reminded that Mr. Frederick Hardwick has still quite a large stock of good presents, which he is selling at very low prices, to close them out.

SALES OF COIN. The Secretary of the Treasury has authorized the Assistant Treasurer at New York to sell a million of coin on each Thursday of the present month, and to purchase two millions of bonds on the first and third Wednesday, and one million on the second and fourth Wednesday, making a total sale of four millions of coin, and a purchase of $6,000,000 of bonds during the month.

THE PUBLIC DEBT. Debt less cash in treasury, on the 1st inst., was $2,332,067,793. Decrease during the past month, $2,240,700. Decrease since March 1, 1870, $106,260,683.

SILVER LAKE.

No doubt many of our sportsmen,—particularly those who enjoy good gunning and fishing,—would envy Mr. Frederick Souther, a former resident of this place, if they only knew what fine game there was at North Kingston. Mr. Souther informs us that Messrs. Churchill and Watson have killed during the past two months at Silver Lake, which is within sight of his residence, 106 wild geese and 175 wild ducks, besides much other game. Pickeral fishing on the ice is rare sport there just now, and many large handsome ones are daily caught.

HYMN FOR THE NEW YEAR.

When to their temple's sacred height
They people went in days of old,
Sung cheerful their road, their camp at night,
And blessed their times and gifts of gold.
Nor less, O Lord, Thy people now,
Whose journey through another year,
Should pay with thankful song their vow,
And pour their hearts' best offerings here.
Songs for the blessings of the past—
For plenty, peace and freedom given;
For sunshine on each pathway cast;
For earthly good and hopes of Heaven.
Songs for the brave whose valor wrought
On bloody fields our triumphs high,
Sons for the martyrs' blood who've taught,
How glorious for our land to die.
And prayer, too, Lord, that Thou wilt lend Thy guidance through the year to come;
On all our hearts Thy Spirit send,
To light our way and lead us home.

MILK AND MILKERS.

In an article on the qualities of milk, etc., Dr. Voelcker says: "Generally speaking, small races, or small individuals of the larger races, give the richest milk from the same kind of food. Where good quality is the main object, Alderneys or Guernseys unquestionably are the cows that ought to be kept, for they give a richer cream than any other kind in common use in this country; but, of course, Alderneys are not the most profitable stock for cow keepers in town, with whom the Yorkshires are, essentially a short-horn, is the favorite breed, as it surpasses all others for the quantity of milk it yields. The milk, however, compared with that of the Alderney or Ayrshire cow, is more watery and less rich in butter, and therefore not well suited for dairies in which butter and cheese are made. In the spring of the year and the early part of summer, milk is more abundant and the butter made from it of a fine flavor. As soon as the season advances the supply diminishes, but becomes richer in butter. The influence of food on the quality of milk is very striking. A half-starved cow not only yields but little milk, but what it yields is miserably poor. On the other hand, the liberal supply of food rich in nitrogenous and phosphoric elements of nutrition tells directly on the milk. Nothing, therefore, can be more injudicious than to stint dairy cows in food."

PULLING AT THE HALTER.

The Western Rural says: There are many real and dangerous remedies given for breaking horses from pulling at the halter or bridle. A safe and efficient remedy is to tie him with a strong strap around the neck, to which is attached a strong rope. A convenient way for a buggy horse is to have a ring in the strap and leave it on the horse. Having a rope in your buggy with a knot on one end that will not go through the ring. My experience is that a horse will not pull many times in such a fix.

Incidents.

A Yankee boy had a whole Dutch cheese set before him by a vagabond friend, who, however, gave him no knife. "This is a funny cheese, Uncle Joe, but where shall I cut it?"
"Oh," said the grinning friend, "cut it where you like."
"Very well," said the Yankee, coolly putting it under his arm. "I guess I shall best cut it at home."

"I hope you will be able to support me," said a young lady while walking out one evening with her intended, during a somewhat slippery state of the sidewalk.
"Why, yes," said the somewhat hesitating swain; "with a little assistance from your father." There was some confusion, and profound silence.

Charley, twitting Henry on his feet: "You must take care, Henry; I should think you'd be sick all the time."
"How so?"
"Because there's so much of you on the damp ground at a time."

Master Charlie, aged four, was not pleased on being reproved by his mother for some prank, and showed his displeasure in his face, when his mother remarked:
"Why, Charlie I am astonished to see you making faces at your mother!"
"Charlie brightened up at once, and retorted: "Why I calculated to laugh, but, mamma, my face slipped."

"A ruffian shot me last night," said a penurious man, "and my life was saved by the ball's striking a silver dollar in my pocket!"
"Whoever takes true aim at your heart is very certain to hit a dollar," said one who knew him.

Welcome the Washing Day! SOMETHING ENTIRELY NEW! Washing reduced to a Science by using the CHAMPION Wash Boiler!

Patented by C. W. HERMAN, Mar. 30, 1869.
A few among the many advantages this Boiler has over other devices for Washing
are:
1st. It dissolves the dirt and cleanses the garments
by forcing hot water through them.
2d. There is no wear while undergoing this process.
3d. It produces a better and more thorough action than any other device yet invented for
washing.
4th. It washes the whole garments at once.
5th. It will do your washing easier, and less than one-half the time usually required.
6th. It saves money, for it saves soap, time
and clothes.
7th. Six cents worth of soap is sufficient, with
this Boiler to do a large washing.
8th. It takes less fuel, less muscle, and when done
you are not half so tired, and consequently better natured, for your Washing is better done.

Poetry.

PROLOGUE.

Written for the Christmas Entertainment of the Quincy Universalist Church.

Exchanging greetings with you all, kind friends,
Upon this cheerful eve that Christmas sends,
We backward look to last year's work with pride,
Dwell with content on hours that now abide,
And through the future's door peep eagerly,
Anticipating all the mirthful glee
That waits our bidding through the coming night.
While farce and comedy bring their delights,
"The Coterie" presents its compliments,
And for an hour bids care and trouble hence.
We aim to make the lagging hours fly
On fleeting wings, and banish every sigh
From hearts that might e'er bloom with love and glee.
Religion is not only sanctity,
And praising God for all his bounteous gifts;
But each bright glimpse of sunshine through the rifts
Betwixt the gloving heaven and our souls
Are gleamings from her angel armies,
Which all might catch, while shimmering kindly down,
And light their brows with beaming nimbus crowns.
Let those who would Religion drape in black,
And fill her mouth with supercilious clack,
And cast and nonsense of dark ages past,
In mud of ignorance remain held fast.
Religion, as she comes to us each day,
Has on her face a kindly smile and glad
She sings from every merry-throated bird,
And breathes a prayer from leaves by zephyrs stirred.
We feel her thrill when Lind and Nilsson sing,
Or Kellogg's and Parepa's voices pour
Their echoes heavenward. And what of him
Who has just joined the radiant seraphim?
Was sweet Religion's saintly robes defiled
By him who gave us such a darling child
As "little Nell," to show us a foretaste
Of what dear wealth is hid in this world's waste?
"D. died!" The lip in cold contempt will curl
While bearing snarls of phrase and churl,
Who o'er their weeds and tithes mumble, and bray
At those who eat, instead, the fragrant hay.
Ah! Tremont Temple was no twice defiled.
Nick Brown, when transformed, was not beguiled.
With sultry words that greet his great compeer
Nor had more garlands round each ear,
Than bizzony's Tintia shows on him.
'Tis the old story told by Æsop's day:
In lion's skin he judges day by day.
And thinks he roars, while others hear the bay.
Religion pays to prayers and sermons less regard than to a life's true righteousness;
And thinks less of a proud church edifice
Than building, for a better life than this,
Abodes of love and purity, wherein
The soul shall live, with memories of sin
To haunt nor mar its everlasting peace.
She saps a portion of the snow-white fleece
To warm a shivering neighbor, thinly clad,
And halves her lot to make the hungry glad.
While in all hearts the yule-log brightly glows,
And o'er each soul its cheerful fervor throws,
We'll backward look to storied Bethlehem,
And forward to the waiting day of earth's fall.
Whose symbol shone around the baby bed
So sweetly sleeping where the cattle fed;
And as we come, with music, cheer, and glee,
To make each flagging hour more quickly flee,
And bring a heaven of love and peace and rest
To dwell within each sorrow-brooding breast,
And bid heaven's glowing sun shine through earth's pall,
We wish a merry Christmas to you all.
EARL MARBLE.

Miscellany.

STEPHEN APPLETON'S WIFE.

When Stephen Appleton had lived
some thirty-five years a bachelor, he bethought him that it would be well to get married, and looked about him accordingly for a wife. Had others looked for him, they would probably have chosen a self-contained, decorous person past thirty and would not have been particular as to looks inasmuch as Stephen was no beauty himself and never had been. He, however, greatly to the surprise of every mortal who knew him, walked up the church aisle one Sunday morning, with a very pretty girl upon his arm, and after the service, introduced her to his friends
among the congregation as his wife.—
She looked a great deal more like his daughter, and was a blushing, smiling,
lovely little creature, who must, so far,
have had a happy life to have brought out of it so many dimples.

So she had indeed. A half-dozen bright-eyed sisters, and a mother, who was only an older sister in years, had cried bitterly when Stephen Appleton had marched off from their country home with one of their number on his arm, and had gone
so far as to ask each other confidentially,
"What Tilly could have seen in that old fellow?" And certainly it seemed almost a mystery that such a solemn wooing
should have prospered with such a merry girl—a wooing without many of those accessories which women hold so dear, of praises and caresses.

Probably, poor Tilly thought they were all to come after marriage. "He's not handsome, perhaps," Tilly would say; "but he's very prepossessing, and he has such a mind!"
And then it seemed to her that he needed some one to look after him, to sew on his buttons, and tie his cravat, and properly prepare his tea, which he had a custom of making wretchedly for himself in his dusty little study.

So she left home and love, and plunged into the maelstrom of wedded life with a man who had so strongly imbedded himself with the idea that woman was his inferior that he thought it a waste of intellect and time to love one overmuch, and to study her taste and fancies for a moment, if they conflicted with his own.

She, the inferior, had, on the contrary,
said to herself, "I must try to adapt myself in every way to Stephen," and had thought also that she would never find happiness in anything in which did not please him. She had joyfully accepted all the wearful lectures offered, and refused to enjoy her favorite pastime, the polka, when she discovered he disapproved of it. And now, in her plain little room, she hopefully and smilingly took up the dull routine of woman's household
drudgery, and made all fresh and sweet and pleasant, fed her genius and hero daintily, and saw to his stockings and buttons.

He hardly knew it. He never awoke out of his hard and cruel self-absorption sufficiently to be aware of her constant thought for him. He gave her so much money a week, and found that it sufficed.
She had a home and clothes; that, it was his theory, was what woman married for.

He knew she was pretty, but it was his right to have a pretty wife as he could get. And she adorned herself with ribbons, and twined flowers in her hair, and took thought about her cuffs and collars,
in the vain hope of being told just once
that those pretty things became her.
Woman's vanity should never be encouraged, was one of his theories. Other men looked at her admiringly; other men hinted what she would have given worlds to hear Stephen say. But she received on such homage from him. She had no kind word of appreciation, no kisses, no endearments.

In the morning, a mandate was given concerning dinner. In the evening, he ate it with her; and though he had no fault to find, never praised a dish. After the meal, he either went out, or locked himself in the study among his books and papers. Once, at the very first, she had taken the crochet work to the door, and asked to be let in; but he had answered
by denial.

"Man's work," he had said, sententiously, "is too great to be broken in upon by woman's chat, or woman's fidget-
ing;" and she had retired quietly.
She never tapped at those panels
again, nor did she ever hint at any wish for recreation—at any desire to so enjoy

a play or a concert, even at the natural wish for a moonlight walk. The inferior creature had some pride in her composition. No more would she woo her husband then she would have wooed him
when his bachelor fancy first selected her to be his future housekeeper. A proud woman would rather miss attention altogether, even from the man whom she is married to, than ever seem to ask for it.

Men will not believe it, but many a woman has died of such a life as Tilly
led. The case was not so bad with Tilly as it seemed however. Under all his abstraction, and coldness, and critical superiority lurked a tenderness that Stephen
would have been ashamed to express.

His neglect arose from absorption in pursuits, rather than any repugnance to his wife's society. And he did not provide her with amusement, because he firmly believed that woman could be thoroughly satisfied with sewing and fancy-work; and for this reason he gave her no praises, not recognizing her toil
as a labor of love, but as an employment
as delightful to her as his profession to him. And the fact that he never praised her beauty was due to this theorizing,
also. Woman, the vain, weak animal,
must be strictly guided least she should go astray; and always lovers' talk had disgusted rather than pleased him and he had vowed never to yield to any weakness
whatever. And so he called her Mrs.
Appleton, and she dared not call him
Stephen; and when sometimes his long arms would faintly have encircled her and drawn her to his bosom, he refrained for shame of the folly, and she was too proud and too deeply pained to touch his shoulder unasked.

One day he caught her reading certain love poems, and took the volume from her hand pleasantly enough, for he was seldom rude, with all his coldness, and faded the pages over.
"A man wrote this," he said. "Praises of a woman's face! Yearnings for her presence! Why, a man should be all-sufficient for himself. Love makes a man weak, contemptible—love that these poets set such value on. I think you had best not read this thing, child; it is full of folly."

Then he tossed the book upon the table—the treasured volume over which her girl's eyes had gloated before ever
she had met this husband of hers, saying,
"Would that some man would feel thus to me! talk or write so to and for me!" believing that there was a love-
life before her in the ecstatic future.—
He went up into his study and laboratory,
where some strange metallic compound
was filling the house with fumes, and where for days he had been toiling for the purpose of completing an invention
of which he had dreamt a long while—something as dear to him as ever the philosopher's stone could have been to any old alchemist. Tilly took the book from the table, and walked towards the bright fire with it. She rent the pages,
full of her own girlish pencil marks,
from the top to bottom and heaped them
on the red coals.

"Rest there, rhymed lies, that deluded
me!" she said, fiercely. "There is no such thing as love. You mocked me with the falsehood. I believe it no longer,
Burn, worthless jingles, that mean nothing.
Would that I had never been fooled by you!"
And tongues of flame, yellow, red and blue, licked about the paper, and hissed
and crackled over the shivering lantern cover. Tilly watched the work of destruction, and had seen the flames die
out, and the red train of sparks children
call "going to church" travel over the crisp tinder and drop off of it, with the big "parson" and "clerk" following
after, when a cry that she never forgot smote her ear—a something indescribable
rumbled and shook in the house, suddenly full of dust and hot metallic odor; and rushing by a sort of instinct to her husband's study, she found him lying among
the debris of his apparatus, a senseless,
motionless, disfigured thing, that could neither speak to nor look at her. An explosion had taken place, and the inventor was the victim.

At the sight of him lying there, dead,
as she feared—utterly undone, at least, as she doubted—not all Tilly's love returned. She took the disfigured face to her bosom, has never dared to take it before. She kissed that from which any one else would have shrunk with loathing,
and knew the poet had not lied, but that love was the only real thing in his mad

dream of life—and that once born, it died not.

"Tell me what I can do for him," she said, after those who came to her aid had done their best. "Let me work for him,
or I shall die! There is nothing I am not strong enough to accomplish, if only
he is better for it."

And there was work enough before her, as she found—work she had never dreamt of before.

Three months from that day, Stephen Appleton opened his eyes, and saw nothing; groped about with his thin hands,
and felt a little, warm girl's hand creep
into them, and said, "Tilly, is it you?"
What has happened to me?

Then in a moment, he remembered.—
"There was an explosion?" he said.
She replied, "Yes."

"How many days ago?"
There was a pause. He asked again,
and Tilly told him.

"Lying here three months!" he said.
"I lying here three months! and there was so little money for you! What have you done? Who has helped you? Am I in a hospital, or—"

"You are at home, darling," she said;
"and no one has helped me. I have helped myself. People have given me plenty of work for my needle. And now that you know me, and can speak to me,
I am so happy!"

She put her cheek to his as she spoke,
and in the awful darkness of his blind,
mess, he twined his arms about her.

"Tell me again," he said. "Have you nursed me, helpless and wandering, and worked also for my bread and yours for three long months? You, little Tilly!— Why, half of that is one man's work; and a girl has done the whole! Why strength was given you? Whence did it come?"

She put her lips to his ear.
"Once you told me that love made a man
weak, my dear," she said. "It makes a woman strong. A woman can do anything for the sake of the man she loves; and I have loved you very much, Stephen."

Whether he ever loved her before or not,
he loved her then. A kind of adoration
for her strength and truth and constancy was born in his mind, and never left it.

It was not God's will that he should draw all his days out in blindness and helplessness. Sight and strength returned to him at last; but ere that time Tilly
had been eyes for him, and right hand
also, and he was cured of many things besides bodily ailments. His theory of love's weakening power—his fancy that a woman was frail, fickle, foolish, un-reasoning thing, to be sternly kept in hand like an unbroken colt, and his shame
of yielding to any gentleness or softness had quite left him. He saw in his fair young wife the helpmeet Heaven had given him, thanked it for the gift, and refused her nothing of all that need of tenderness and love which all good women
long for, without which married life is to them more miserable than any lonely
lot with dreams of what might have been in it.

BEECHER'S BRINGING UP.

I thank God for two things—yes for
a thousand; but for two among many:
first, that I was born and bred in the country, and of parents that gave me a sound constitution and noble example.—
I never can pay back what I got from my parents. If I were to raise a monument of gold higher than heaven, it would be no expression of the debt of gratitude which I owe to them, for what they unceasingly gave by the heritage of their body and the heritage of their souls to me. And next to that I am thankful that I was brought up in circumstances where I never became acquainted with wickedness. I know a great deal about it; for I hear a man say A, I know the whole alphabet of that man's life, by which I can imagine all the rest.
If I see a single limb, I have the physiologist's talent by which I know the whole structure. I never became acquainted with wickedness when I was young, by coming in contact with it. I never was sullied in act, nor thought, nor in feeling, when I was young. I grew up as pure as a woman. And I cannot express to God the thanks which I owe to my mother, and to my father, and to the great household of sisters and brothers among whom I lived.—Henry Ward Beecher.

A STRONG HINT.

Some people have a delicate way of hinting their meaning that is not readily taken, but others speak more plainly. A story is told of an old man who was in the habit of going to bed promptly at nine o'clock, but being kept up by company after that hour, he became sleepy.
Finally seeing the clock marked half-past nine, he turned yawningly toward the partner of his joys and sorrows, and said:
"Wife hadn't we better go to bed?—
These folks want to go home." It is hardly necessary to add that the aged couple were not kept long out of bed after that announcement.

THE HISTORY OF THOUSANDS.

Thousands of men breathe, move, and live—pass off the stage of life, and are heard of no more. Why? They do not participate of good in the world, and none are blessed by them, none could point to them as the instruments of their redemption; not a word they spoke could be recalled, and so they perished; their light went out in darkness, and they were not remembered more than the insect of yesterday. Will you thus live and die, O man immortal! Live for something. Do good, and leave behind you a monument
of virtue that the storm of time can never destroy. Write your name in kindness, and love, and mercy, on the hearts of thousands you come in contact with, year
by year; you will never be forgotten.
No; your name, your deeds will be as legible on the hearts you leave behind, as
the star on the brow of the evening.
Good deeds will shine as the stars of heaven.—Dr. Chalmers.

SUPPORT YOUR PAPER.

Of course you know as well as I do that it is an honor to any town to have a newspaper belonging to it, and that it is the duty of every one having the slightest interest in the welfare or reputation of the town, to aid in supporting a local paper, after somebody has been enterprising enough to start one. And you must know, too, that newspapers don't grow, like corn and potatoes, although they may require a great deal of topdressing
to make them flourish. A local paper may seem a very small affair, but after the benefits coming in from an "affair"
of this kind have been considered, we must agree that nothing can happen to any town, so truly beneficial, as the starting of a newspaper devoted to the interest of that town.

Many say, "I will not subscribe for the paper, but I'll buy a copy occasionally."
That will help the paper along, and I shan't feel it as I would to pay two dollars and a half at once.

There's where the joke comes in, good friend! You won't feel buying the paper in that way, and on the other hand
the publishers won't feel the money coming in that way.

It is about as broad as it is long.
Of course it all amounts to the same thing at the end of the year, if you subscribe, and don't pay until the year is out, or buy the paper every week.

But a local editor—or the editor of a local paper, if that makes any difference—
once told me that it made all the difference in the world, whether his patrons paid a year's subscription in advance, or waited until the end of the year, or bought the papers weekly.

He knew just where he stood when the subscription list was full, and the money
in his hands, and besides, there were no unpleasant visions of delinquent subscribers, and dunning letters to be written.

Somebody says:
"If a man wishes to succeed in business let him advertise;" and I think "somebody" was about right, although we all know that those dealers who keep poor articles, also keep shady about it,
and only those who are ashamed of what they have to sell remain silent.

Another idea, and I've done for this week. Everybody allows that it does add to the interest of a local paper to have in it contributions from its town-
people, and almost any of us can write something interesting. Even if it is not very brilliant, it shows an interest in our paper.—Malden Messenger.

It is one thing to dream of a godly character, a heroic service and a redeemed immortality, but it is quite another to keep one's self unspotted from the world,
and by patient continuance in well-doing,
to lay hold on eternal life.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

SURPRISE PARTIES. The descendants of the late Seth Spear who have enjoyed numerous surprise parties, during the fall and winter months, at the residences of some of the "next of kin," assembled in large numbers at the mansion of Ebenezer Adams, Esq., at the Point, on Thursday evening of last week. His house was filled to its utmost capacity and a very social and pleasant time was had.

On Monday evening last, the same family connection met at Mr. Seth Spear's. The party was not quite as large, still it was a very pleasant and happy gathering. After social greetings, singing, etc., a table was spread and the company partook of a bountiful collation. With many congratulations tendered Mr. Spear in honor of his seventieth birthday and to his faithful and generous partner, the party separated much pleased with the enjoyment of the evening.

ROWDY ACTS. Some of the citizens owning property on Hancock street, have been considerably annoyed by boys, or probably "young men," of late. The acts may seem slight but they are very perplexing to persons having estates, and one of the number has offered a reward of twenty dollars, as will be seen by our advertising columns. Messrs. Josiah Adams and John A. Newcomb have had trees twisted off and spoiled; Messrs. John W. Hall and Henry H. Faxon's fences have been repeatedly broken. Such acts are not gentlemanly and should be discontinued; and if not without force of the law that should be resorted to.

THE UNION CHAPEL. The Wollaston Land Company have just leased of J. W. Thayer, for the sum of $200, the Union Chapel at Wollaston Heights for one year. The use of this Chapel they have generously offered to the religious Society now worshipping there. Preaching will be maintained in this every Sabbath. Services commencing at 3 o'clock, P. M. The public are cordially invited. The Sabbath school will meet at quarter before 2 o'clock. Prayer meeting at 7 o'clock. It is hoped that the rapid growth of this young community will soon demand and have a larger place of worship; and that the spire of an attractive church edifice will soon grace these Heights.

GEOLOGY. Some of the active citizens of this place are endeavoring to start a course of lectures on Geology, at the Town Hall. It is a move in the right direction, and we hope they may succeed in their good work. The course will consist of six lectures to be delivered by Prof. Denton, who will be immediately engaged if sufficient number of names is subscribed to warrant the undertaking. Price of tickets one dollar. Let all our citizens who would like to attend leave their names at once with Mr. Souther, at his newspaper store, near the Post Office.

NATIONAL GRANITE BANK. At a meeting of the Stockholders of the National Granite Bank, held on Tuesday last, the following gentlemen were re-elected Directors, viz.:—Charles Marsh, Daniel Baxter, James Torrey, Jessie Buntin, John Faxon, Charles R. Mitchell, John D. Whicker, Alexis Torrey. At a subsequent meeting Charles Marsh was re-elected President.

Mrs. Lucy Stone, and her husband Henry Blackwell, have recently purchased a beautiful estate on the southern side of Pope's Hill, near Noponset, formerly belonging to Josiah H. Carter, Esq. It consists of a mansion house, stable, and about three acres of land.

A PLEASANT CHANGE. After a severe cold snap of five days,—when the mercury each morning stood near zero,—we have now another warm spell, and for the past two days it has been very mild and pleasant. The ice melting and the water running in the gutters makes it look quite spring like.

PERSONAL. Mr. Joseph B. Lake and lady left on Wednesday last for a pleasure trip West. They expect to be gone two or three months in visiting and sight-seeing. May they have a pleasant journey and a safe return, is our hearty wish.

The work on the new Orthodox Church is progressing, but from appearances quite slowly. The Church will certainly not be ready for services before spring. The staging inside has not been taken down—the floors are to be laid—the pews to be put in, and much other work still remains to be done.

FAST COACH. Six chickens roasted on the axle-tree of a stage coach during its transit from Barre to Williamstown, Mass.

Cheap Trains for Working Classes.

Hon. Josiah Quincy presented in the Senate, on Wednesday last, the following petition for low fares:

"That for the accommodation of railways entering the city of Boston, Legislature have permitted them to take by eminent domain, houses occupied principally by citizens, mechanics and laborers; That hundreds of families and thousands of individuals have been and will be thus driven from their homes and compelled to remove to a great distance from the places of their occupation;

"That if property in house or lands be touched, compensation is exacted to the uppermost, but the poor tenant is turned out to go he knows not where, but pretty certainly into worse or more inconvenient or expensive lodgings, and no notice is taken of the matter and no compensation made for his forced removal;

"That as a matter of justice to this class, the railways terminating in London are required to run a cheap train morning and evening, for 'mechanics, artisans and day laborers,' the fare not to exceed one penny for the whole journey.

"That, either voluntarily or in obedience to law, the great railroads terminating in London, run their trains for a distance of ten miles for a fare not exceeding a shilling a week, sending them by a special train in the morning, but permitting them to return by any train in the afternoon.

"That the plan is said to have succeeded admirably, the railways being more than repaid for any extra expense by the families of the workingmen, who pay the regular fares.

"That as a protection to the companies, their liability under any claim to compensation for injury to passengers traveling with such workingmen's tickets is limited by law to a sum not exceeding one hundred pounds, and, to avoid law costs, the amount of compensation is to be determined by an arbitration appointed by the Board of Trade, and in no other way.

"The various precautions are taken to prevent the transfer of tickets, for which penalties are enforced, and a person convicted of this offence can never receive a ticket again.

"That the companies are entitled to a reasonable time after each application, if necessary, to learn whether the person so applying is really what he professes to be—an artisan, mechanic or day laborer.

"For these and other reasons your petitioner prays your honorable bodies to take into consideration the justice, legality and expediency of requiring the managers of railways to grant the same privilege, to the citizens of our republic which are accorded to the subjects of a monarchy, thus enabling the workingmen and the workingwomen to have homes at a distance from the city, promoting thereby their health, virtue and happiness and that of their families, and thus conducing to the highest interest of the State."

BRIEF LOCALS. Workmen are busily engaged in papering and painting Abercrombie's hall, for St. Paul's Lodge. We learn that the Lodge has leased it for five years.

The Universalist annual levee is to be held this year on Thursday, the ninth of February.

There will be a free chowder and concert at Bates' Billiard Hall this evening.

The "Forty Thieves" will meet at the Hancock House on Friday evening next. The County Commissioners give notice through our columns, that they will meet at Town House on the 16th of next month, and hence proceed to locate and lay out the roads petitioned for by T. H. Dearing and others, and also by George Littlefield and others at Hough Neck.

DEDICATION. The Huse Company dedicated their new house on Monday evening last very pleasantly. There was a large gathering present, composed in part of the Engineers of the town, Selectmen, Constables, Police Officers, invited guests at home and from abroad. After social congratulations all partook of a bountiful supper provided by the Company in "No. 1" order. No one did better justice to the repast, we think, than the Captain. When he got ready to leave the table we should judge that there might have been twelve basketsful of turkey bones and other fragments gathered from around his plate, to say nothing of a "few small fishes." If any of our citizens have a large quantity of eatables on hand and are afraid they may spoil this warm weather just call for the Captain. The Company have their hall very tastefully decorated with appropriate pictures. The little sign on the closet is not unfamiliar to many although the "picture" within may be.

In Topeka, Kansas, women have been elected engrossing and enrolling clerks in both Houses, and a girl has been appointed page in the House of the Legislature.

THE GOVERNOR'S ADDRESS.

The inaugural address of Governor Claflin was delivered on Saturday last, and is a carefully written document. It shows the finances of the State to be in good condition, and is of opinion that the resources, with a reduced taxation of two millions dollars, are amply sufficient to manage and extinguish the State debt in due season. The funded debt, which is $28,269,881.93, has been decreased during the past year, $2,552,498.09.

He has confidence in the speedy completion of the Hoosac Tunnel, and of its great advantage to the State. The Tunnel is now a little more than half completed.

The petition of the Hartford and Erie Railroad is stated and the Commonwealth is recommended to furnish its share of the outlay required for counsel fees and similar expenses, involved upon taking possession of the road.

In regard to the Savings Banks, he speaks of them as in a flourishing condition, but thinks some desire to pay too large dividends to attract deposits, and proposes that a check be put on them by the Legislature.

The whole amount of deposits and surplus in the banks is now $138,232,271.59, an increase of nearly $24,000,000 over the amount on deposit last year. It is very evident that a large share of this increase is not the savings of labor. The investments have been found to be safe and as remunerative almost as in other money corporations where the funds are not so readily at the command of the owner. Each year shows more deposits by capitalists. The average last year being only twenty-seven one-hundredths per cent. A very large part of the funds is loaned on real estate.

The income of the State prison for several years has exceeded the expenses by nearly thirty thousand dollars. This is a very gratifying result the Governor says, which is largely due to the faithfulness and good judgment exercised by the warden, inspectors and other officers of the institution.

The school established more than a year since has been very successful, and the attendants show their appreciation of the privilege granted them by faithful devotion to their studies. Three evenings a week are employed in the instruction of more than one hundred scholars, and a large number would attend if the prison had a room properly arranged and fitted exclusively for school purposes. In the winter months lectures are usually given once a week, which are fully attended, and the privilege is highly prized by the inmates. At present the chapel is used for a school-room there being no other place for public worship, lectures, entertainments or school purposes for nearly six hundred men. It is a matter of vital importance that this large number of prisoners desiring instruction in various ways should have ample accommodations for that purpose, so far as they can be given to them with safety. It must be admitted that confinement in illness is not the best or most effective form of punishment.

The Governor also suggests the expediency of allowing the prisoners compensation for extra labor. The money thus earned might be paid to their friends, who often suffer greatly from the loss of their assistance; or it might be deposited in the savings bank for their benefit when they leave the prison.

The state of the militia is, on the whole satisfactory, and a suggestion is made for the purchase of a State camping ground. The expediency of reducing the number of companies is mentioned, as a means of diminishing the annual expense, which is $225,000.

The subject of intoxicating liquors is considered at length, the ground being taken that the present law, including the malt liquor clause, is acceptable to the majority of the people. Though much violated, the Governor is still of the opinion that it is better observed than similar laws in other States. It is the only way, he thinks, in which the traffic can be in any degree suppressed. He says, the whole dram-shop system is considered a nuisance and a curse—abundantly attested by the legislation of two hundred years. The daily experience of every police officer shows it to be the great nursery of vice, poverty and crime.

In speaking of the new cattle disease, he says that it is supposed to be too late to eradicate the contagion, but that power should be conferred upon the Cattle Commission at once, by the Legislature, to confine it to its present limits by suitable sanitary measures.

The Governor says no subject awakens a deeper interest in the minds of the people of this Commonwealth than that of education. The appropriations for public schools are increased each year by the cities and towns. The systems of instruction are thoroughly discussed and examined by teachers, school boards and persons interested, that new and better methods may be brought into use and old forms made more effectual. The public schoolhouses attest the desire of the people to provide material facilities hitherto unequalled, and, until recently, unthought of by the most enlightened and progressive friends of education.

Although the standard of education has been raised so high, and the reputation of the State is unsurpassed by that of any other in the Union, much remains to be done to perfect the system and give it wider scope and increased means of usefulness.

In regard to the abstract right of Woman's Suffrage, the Governor says, "It is difficult to see why one sex only should exercise the privilege of voting, and there are certainly many strong considerations why those now excluded should be permitted to share in public affairs." He thinks injustice is done to woman by many existing laws, respecting the rights of property, and states it to be our duty "to relieve the statute book of these relics of the barbaric ages."

The depressed condition of American commerce is spoken of, and the attention of the Legislature called to it. He reprehends the evils attendant upon long sessions, and advises that if there is not any other way of remedying the difficulty, we should hasten to adopt the system of biennial sessions. The address closes with an eloquent allusion to our national affairs, and an appeal to the legislators to be faithful to the high trust reposed in them by the people.

CONGRESS. The St. Domingo resolution was passed by the House on Tuesday last, by a vote of 123 to 63, the Democrats voting solid against the whole scheme. The Senate passed the same on the following day, and the Commissioners have been appointed to visit the island. Ben. Wade, ex-senator from Ohio, is one of them.

The intention is to start next Monday. Mr. Fabens and General Babcock will accompany the Commissioners. Two or three newspaper correspondents will also be of the party. It is designed to land at Cape Haytien, where Baez will have everything in readiness to guard and escort the Commissioners to San Domingo by way of the interior. Other cities will be visited on the way back to the shore of the Bay of Samana, where their vessel will be ready to take them home. Unless the present arrangement fails, they will be back in the United States by the 20th of February, and it is the expectation to have the report ready for immediate transmission to Congress, so that it can be acted upon during the present session.

Prof. Kennedy commences the second term of his dancing school this afternoon. A large number of our citizens were present on Wednesday evening last to witness the closing exercises, and were much pleased with the progress the school had made. Mr. Kennedy is giving good satisfaction and is about to give two terms in succession, which few teachers have been able to do in this place.

THE CATTLE DISEASE. The alarm consequent on the appearance of the foot and mouth disease among the cows of this State and elsewhere, has so diminished the demand for milk in Boston, that the milkmen have been compelled to order their agents in the country to buy and forward less milk to market. The disease is among the stock of milk producers in various directions, and the utmost care is requisite to prevent it from becoming general, and perhaps fatal consequences resulting to consumers by using diseased milk.

Dr. Bragg of Chelsea will be in Quincy, at Hancock House, Monday Jan. 16th, for the purpose of treating the afflicted. During the Doctor's limited stay in our town, his room is generally filled, and we advise those who desire his services to go early. Remember next week, Monday, Jan. 16th. Next Monday, Jan. 16th. Next Monday, Jan. 16th.

The receipts of foreign dry goods at the port of New York for the past year amount in value to $109,498,523, at the foreign gold cost of these goods. This amount is about fifteen millions in excess of last year, and is probably larger than ever before except in 1866, when it reached $126,222,855, and in 1859, when it was $113,152,624.

Boston Museum. The drama of "Guy Mannering" is the great theatrical sensation at the Boston Museum, made so by an elegant stage setting, and the novelty of the appearance of Miss Annie Clarke in the character of Meg Merrilies, the old gipsy queen, a character made famous by Miss Charlotte Cushman. Crowds curious to see the handsome leading lady of the Museum, in this part fill the theatre at every representation. The production has made a great hit with the public and is announced for performance until further notice.

Kansas, which five years ago had not one mile of railroad, now has fifteen hundred miles.

Summary Intelligence.

The increase in the amount of deposits in the Savings Banks of this State during the past seven years has been over eighty millions of dollars. The total amount now on deposit is $138,232,271.59.

From statistics furnished from the Revenue Bureau, it is ascertained that the average annual consumption of spirits in the United States is eighty million gallons, or 219,198 gallons each day.

New Haven Ct., has 70 miles of street, and only four of them paved.

A lady aged 61, in England, finding herself in the wrong railway train, leaped from it when it was running at the rate of 40 miles an hour, and escaped without any serious injury.

One hundred and eleven officers of the United States army who have recently resigned, have received the one year's pay, according to the bill reducing the army.

The aggregate capital of the seven principal railroads terminating in Boston is more than forty millions of dollars.

The Cattle Commissioners of the State are taking active measures to prevent the further spread of the cattle disease.

Twenty cars loaded with tea arrived in New York city on Saturday, seven days from San Francisco and twenty-three days from Hong Kong.

Fifteen hundred alligator skins were tanned at a Boston Highlands establishment, last year.

Board in Japan can be had for two cents a day, and skilled labor for eight to ten cents.

Leather weddings are in vogue out West. The presents consist of boots and shoes for the sole benefit of the recipients.

Two miles and a half more of boring will complete the Hoosac Tunnel.

In one of the grammar schools in Bath Me, Scribner's Magazine is used as a text-book.

The Governor thinks that two and a half millions will be enough to be raised by taxation in this State the present year.

The whole number of market wagons bringing the several varieties of meats and vegetables to Faneuil Hall Market during the month of December was 2,750.

Over ten and a half million dollars' worth of arms and military stores have already been shipped from this country to France.

Florida has experienced terribly cold weather and the orange groves have suffered accordingly, the untimely portion of the crop being destroyed as far up the St. John's river as Palatka.

The number of foreign arrivals at the port of Boston during the past year was three thousand four hundred and sixty-five, being a decrease of eleven from the previous year.

The use of any excess of water has been forbidden to the Lowell corporation on account of the drought.

The cultivation of cranberries is now attracting considerable attention in Maryland, Delaware and New Jersey, and in most cases they have yielded very large profits, besides giving value to a class of lands hitherto considered worthless.

A man living in Kansas City has a full set of furniture made of the tree on which his father was hanged ten years ago.

The production of rubber boots and shoes in New England has of late averaged about twenty-five thousand pairs per day.

There are two large stores in one of the business streets of Boston, which have remained unoccupied for twenty years.—The owners refused to sell or lease them.

In a certain town in Rhode Island there is a clergyman who has officiated five times at the marriage of one man, and all five of the women to whom the fellow was married are still living.

Arms and ammunition, to the amount of nine million seven hundred thousand dollars, have been sent from New York to France. Pretty good for a neutral port!

South Norwalk, Ct., has a man named Morehouse who walks seventeen miles in going to and from his work every day.—He is sixty years old at that.

Gloves are now made in England with a pocket on the inside of the palm, to suit the habit indulged in by the fair sex of carrying money in that position.

A very particular swain in Huntington Ct., sent his marriage to the paper with the addition "No Cardamoms." He said he despised abbreviation.

Mr. S. R. Prescott, of Hampton Falls, N. H., has one of the old-fashioned eight-day clocks, which has been in the Prescott family since 1757. One of the cords which hold the great iron weights, has been constantly in use for 102 years, and the other for 99 years.

The total number of paupers in London on the last day of the first week in December was 139,960 of whom 35,618 were indoor and 104,351 outdoor paupers. This is a lower number than on the corresponding date in any of three preceding years.

STATUE OF LINCOLN. The statue of Lincoln, by Vinnie Ream, was unveiled in the Rotunda of the Capitol at Washington, on the 7th inst., in the presence of a few invited to view it. The martyr President is represented in ordinary citizen's dress, with a cloak hanging loosely from his shoulders, the right hand holding what may be supposed to be folded sheets of manuscript. The emancipation proclamation is extended as if offering it to be taken. The left hand grasps the folds of the cloak at the side. He stands firmly poised on the left leg, which supports the body, the right foot being slightly advanced and at ease.—The head is inclined forward, and indeed to much bowed as to appear unnatural when looked at from in front; it is only when standing so as to get a three-fourth view of the left side that the expression of the face is seen. The head by itself is doubtless an admirable portrait of its subject, in a mood well-known to his more intimate friends but this is not carried out in the other part of the figure. The block of marble from which the statue is cut is beautiful white and clear of flaw.

NEW INVENTION. E. B. Everitt, of Meriden, Ct., has invented a mouse-trap which bids fair to supersede anything of the kind in the market. Its construction is wonderfully simple, but most effective in mouse-killing. He has already received from one of the largest New York houses an order for thirty thousand.

IN NEW YORK CITY the Board of Health have caused 130 tons of unsound meat, fish and poultry to be destroyed the past year, to say nothing of what had been eaten in an unfit condition.

MOVABLE OR ADJUSTABLE horse shoes have become it is said "a fixed fact." They can be taken off at night, or when the horse is not at work, and put on again when wanted as easily as a pair of boots.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS. The average salaries paid in New York public schools are as follows: Male teachers in male grammar schools, $1400; female teachers in male grammar schools, $725; female teacher in female grammar schools, $650; and female teachers in primary schools, $500.

ABOUT DR. BRAGG. Mrs. John M. Anderson, of Salem, has been afflicted for a long time with a delicate affection of the eye. Under Dr. Bragg's skillful care Mrs. Anderson has received great benefit, and is now in a fair way to recover the use of her eyes—the greatest boon conferred upon us.—Salem Register.

The French balloons, with a fair wind, go about as fast as the express trains on America railroads.

There are a dozen dress-making establishments in New York where the sewing is done almost entirely by men.

One of the newly erected brown stone houses on upper Fifth avenue, New York, contains a picture gallery and theatre combined; a bowling alley in the cellar, croquet ground on the attic floor, and billiard room in the basement.

Potatoes bring as much a bushel as wheat in a wheat country, while the yield of the former is six times greater than that of the latter upon the average.

Old Hanks, the Illinois patriarch, who carried in his arms the infant Abraham Lincoln, and who now carries Lincoln's first watch, lives in Montana, and is the oldest man in the Territory.

There are, in the eleven territories of this country, including Alaska, nearly 1,000,000,000 acres of land, which, owing to the sparseness of the population, may be described as unoccupied.

Deaths.

In this town, on the 11th inst., James, son of Mr. Thomas and Mrs. James Burns, aged 1 month and 20 days.

Special Notices.

THANKS. At the regular meeting of the McClellan Guards, held in their Armory, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

Resolved.—That the members of Company H. sincerely regret the resignation of their late Captain, WILLIAM BOYD, Esq.

Resolved.—That we tender him the sincere thanks of the Company for his invariable kindness to the members, and for the constant attention he has paid to the interests of the Company while under his command.

Resolved.—That a copy of these resolutions be presented to Capt. Boyd, and that they be published in the Quincy Patriot.

WAVELEY MAGAZINE. Among the contributors for public favor this excellent weekly, takes the lead. It is favored with some of the ablest contributors, among them is a gentleman from this town, Mr. Earl Marble, who is a gifted and pleasing writer. It is handsomely printed with clear type, and in addition to its large amount of reading matter always contains a piece of music.

EVERY BOY'S MAGAZINE. A new venture in periodical literature, is on our table, and if we may judge from the variety, excellence, and adaptability of the contents, it is destined to become immensely popular wherever boys are. A healthy, vigorous tone pervades the matter, and yet there is a total absence of anything that savors of crime. Fiction, travel, biography, and adventure, are given in judicious proportions; and considering the remarkable low subscription price—fifty cents a year—we regard this magazine as a wonder, even in these days of cheap literature. A specimen copy will be sent to any address for two three-cent stamps. All boys ought to subscribe. WM. H. RIDEING, 4 Province Court, Boston, is the publisher.

Henry Ward Beecher's salary has been increased from $12,000 per annum to $20,000.

Old Sayings.

How often we hear men say
"I was never so hot as 'tis to-day,"
And I feel that I'm growing old.
When it's so dark and so cold,
Then say it was never so wet,
That the thermometer never ran so high,
But the fact is people forget,
If the early bird catches the worm,
What a fool the worm must be
To start out before it is morn,
When it's so dark and so cold,
The best that man can make,
Overcasts fine and rare,
Matched suits of every kind,
At Twenty-five Cents Square,
Rich Clothing you will find.

DISEASE OF THE EYES. For two years a little son of John S. Hunt, of Marblehead, Mass., has been led into the "Eye Infirmary" on Charles Street, Boston, for the restoration of his eyesight—but received only a temporary relief. On the last visit to Salem, of Dr. Bragg, the famous Surgeon of Chelsea, the boy was immediately put under the Doctor's care, and in two months' treatment the lad has recovered the use of his eyes. They are entirely well and he is now regularly attending school.—Salem Observer.

Poetry.

WHO?

Who will be near me when the last sad day is o'er,
Speak of that night when the last day is o'er,
Who will be near me when the last day is o'er,
And the spirit of the last day is o'er?

Who will be near me when the pulse is falling,
And the heart beats faint and fainter still?
Who will be near me when the pulse is falling,
As the warm feet shall journey down the hill?

Who will be near me when the shadows thicken,
And the dim twilight gathers cold and gray,
Who will be near me when the shadows thicken,
Whose voice shall cheer me in the valley's darkness?

Whose hand shall lead me to the brighter day?

DEDICATED TO WILLIAM G. SPEAR.
By his friend, CLIFFORD F. ROWE.

Why doest thou, why doest thou weep?
In thy Saviour's arms thy Mother sleeps,
Lying with Angels in that Home above,
Laden with peace, and everlasting love.

In life she was thy hope, your all,
And has but answered to her Maker's call.
Memory will not bring her back to you,
Gentle words of your mother, kind and true.

Rich no more for the loving one, departed;
Praise the Lord and be not downhearted.
Earnestly pray that God will on you his blessings
Best, and when the last trumpet shall sound its blast, Resting in God's arms, then will find his Mother
at last.

*Mrs. Lowell Q. Spear.

Farmers' Department.

DESIGN IN FEEDING STOCK.

Some farmers fail to adapt their feed to the particular wants of their stock, as if all that was needed was to give them enough to eat. But different kinds of food produce different results.

For example: If I have a steer, which is already well developed in bone and muscle, but I wish to fatten for market, I should give him linseed or cotton seed oil cake, or Indian meal, or shorts. If I wish to encourage the growth of colts or calves, or other young animals, I should give them a variety of feed, but especially good hay, ground oats, or oats in the sheaf, cut tolerably fine. Corn meal, barley and buckwheat are also good for this purpose. A working team, whether horses or oxen, demand food which will supply the waste of muscle and a fair amount of fat. When spring work is about to commence, after seeing that my teams are reasonably fat, I should give them oil cake, oats, and good, bright hay, or cut straw. Oats (ground) will supply muscle, and give greater power of endurance in hard work or fast driving, than will corn meal. Then to make the bill of fare complete, I should give an occasional meal of carrots, or potatoes, or turnips. These will aid the digestion, sharpen the appetite and promote the general health. If feeding for milk, I would continue this bill of fare in a measure, and give oil cake, corn meal, shorts, or bran, with good hay or stalks cut fine, and roots, such as beets or carrots. —American Agriculturist.

ONIONS FOR POULTRY.

It is a well known fact to owners of poultry that the occasional use of onions mixed and fed to poultry with their other food, is one of the best ways of keeping a yard of poultry in health. I am afraid it has not received the attention and use that its merits really demand. I am well satisfied that the use of this vegetable would prevent three-fourths of the disease that a poultry yard is subject to. Not that it is a cure-all after disease has once secured a hold, but I know that I have cured cases of most severe roup by its use after standard remedies had failed. I became convinced that if an article like this would cure, the occasional use of it would be a preventive, and such I have found it to be not only in roup, but in all those diseases that poultry are liable to under carelessness and mismanagement. Fowls will readily eat it if it is sliced fine and mixed with their food. Give it as often as once a week—often if you choose—it will do them good. Make a trial of this vegetable, breeders of poultry, and then you will know for a certainty how to appreciate it.

Incidents.

"Yai yai! Caesar, hab yer heard de news?"
"No; what am de news, Julius?"
"So you not hear ob it? Why I see got a baby. Yai yai yai!"
"Golly, Julius, is dat so?"
"Jus so, Caesar, jus so; and him's a bouncer."
"What am he, Julius—boy or gal?"
"O, git along wid you nigger. Why you no guess?"
"Boy, Julius?"
"No."
"Girl?"
"Yes? How you guess so quick, nigger? Yai yai yai!"

"Can you tell me how old the devil is?" asked an irreverent fellow of a clergyman. "My friend, you must keep your own family record," was the reply.

"Mary," said an old lady, "it is a very solemn thing to get married."

"I know it is a solemn thing not to."

SILVER WEDDING POEM.

The following letter, written to Mr.
and Mrs. Charles H. Hardwick, on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary
of their marriage, is published at the request of many friends.

DEAR COUSINS:—
I'm sorry to say
I cannot be with you to-night;
And, since I must needs stay away,
And, since I must needs stay away,
We thought, on receiving your card,
Wine and I—we would certainly come,
But find that we cannot be spared,
My presence is needed at home.

The man who our organ has play'd
On Sundays—and led our church choir,
His four years has finished 'tis said,
And thinks it is time to retire.
My people desire to express,
As he never will lead us again,
Their thanks for his splendid success,
By books and a gold-headed cane.

The service comes off Monday eve;
A speech is expected from me;
And the parish allows me no leave
To be absent that evening, you see.
Or else we should try and come down;
That is—my old lady and I—
The children are all out of town,
Excepting "the least of the fry."

Now don't you, Charles Henry, remember
A great many winters ago,
You rode out to town, one September?—
And you, Lucia V.—had a beau?
O don't you remember at least,
The kisses exchanged by you then?
How Aunt thought her bottle of yeast
Had popped out its stopper again?

The days of your courtship, you know,
Exhibit the maid and her lover!
Don't blush like a rose in the snow,
For courtship is feeding in clover;
And they, who have tasted its rapture,
Remember it many a day.
If, after the siege and love-capture,
They bear the dear trophy away!

And when the good person was told,
That the days of your wooing were done,
You gave him the glittering gold,
And he gravely said, "You are one."
It seems but a very brief time
Since then—as you very well know—
Old Winter was then in his prime,
And his land all covered with snow.

And now, after twenty-five years,
The rainbow of hope o'er your heads,
And the season has come, it appears,
For calling together your friends,
To celebrate with you the hour
That first made you bridegroom and bride.
The best which then burst into flower,
Is yielding its sweets by your side.

Sweet children like olive plants crown
Your heads with the fragrance of love;
Though some whom the Father sent down,
He took home to blessings above.
God grant that his wonderful grace
God grant that his wonderful grace
Which often has gladdened your past,
May cheer with the smile of his face,
And crown you with glory at last.

I'm sorry I cannot unite
My personal presence with theirs
Who meet in your dwelling to-night;
But you shall have part in my prayers.
I'll ask the great Father above,
Still on you His gifts to bestow,
And fill your fond hearts with true love,
As He did, twenty-five years ago!

Yours truly,
E. PORTER DYER.
Shrewsbury, Jan. 2, 1871.
"Tis a solemn thing to be married!"
Said old Aunt Bithany Peace—
But a great deal sorer not to!
Said Nellie her cousin niece.
Farwell for the time is flitting
And twenty fingers are knitting
To give you a cordial greeting
And wish you all Happy New Year!
Your Cousin,
E. P. D.

PERPETUAL PASTE. A perpetual paste may be made by dissolving an ounce of alum in a quart of warm water. When cold, add as much flour as will make it of the consistency of cream; then stir into
it half a teaspoonful of powdered rosin,
and two or three cloves. Boil it up, stirring all the time. It will keep for twelve months, and when dry may be softened with water.

TARTS. Lemon-butter is excellent for tarts. It is made as follows: One pound of pulverized white sugar, whites
of six eggs and yolks of two, three lemons, including grated rind and juice. Cook twenty minutes over a slow fire, stirring all the while.

If there has been no temptation
there can be no merit; if there has been no struggle, there can be no victory.

"A dreadful little for a shilling,"
said a penurious fellow to a physician who dealt him out an emetic, "can't you give more?"

Lucy Stone says:—The cradle is a woman's ballot box. Then we've known some unlawful voting, where two ballots were deposited at a time.

There are more smiles in the world than tears; there is more love
than hate, more constancy than forsaking; those who murmur to the contrary
choose not for thy companions.

Miscellany.

MY SISTER MARGIE'S SECRET.

I have never seen a more beautiful face than my sister's when she was eighteen. I cannot describe her to you, for I do not like to pick a sweet flower leaf
by leaf. I can only say a rich, warm color dyed her cheek, a brilliant light danced in her eye, and her lips, red as the ripest strawberry she found in the pasture, ever curved with a smile.

Father named her Margaret after his mother, but she called herself Margie—
When a baby, "Margaret, second child of Charles and Martha Wilson," was written in the Bible, but Margie became the household name. I was ten years old when Margie was born. Mother took the baby's pink hand and laying it in mine, said solemnly, "I must leave her Faith, leave my sweet babe. I give her to you, and never forget that she is yours my daughter." I never did forget the importance of the charge committed to me. Father never brought any one to fill mother's place, and I had Margie to myself. Besides a sister's love she gave me all that would have been a mother's. I never told her she was to mind me, she always did as we desired without a word until—well, I will not anticipate.

When Margie was twelve, Mr. Bolton, the village lawyer, made me an offer of marriage. He was a noble man. I honored him and it may be I might have loved him, but I could not make it seem right to marry and leave Margie. I think father was pleased. When I see Judge Bolton with his handsome sons, I think, Faith Wilson, those boys were never meant for you; your children may never rise to call you blessed, but there are some who will say, she has done
what she could.

Margie had none of my matter-of-fact temperament. She possessed a vivid imagination, when a child played with imaginary people, filling the woods, the sunny slopes behind the house, the nooks and glades, with the bright creatures of her fancy. We had a few fairy tales, translations from the German. These she eagerly devoured, and so gave shape
to the ideas that were filling her head.

As she grew older air-castles which
she herself was to inhabit took the place of her other conceits. Many a night—
when the skies were gleaming with stars
she sat on the roof jutting out from our window and dreamed of the gay
world in which she would live one day.
"He will come for me, Faith, my squire of high degree, and bear me off to an elegant home surrounded by all that is beautiful, and you will be our guardian angel." I cannot tell why, but it pained me to hear her talk so. She would laugh at my sober face, and say, "My matter-of-fact sister cannot even breathe
the air in which my castles float."

Father and I were anxious that Margie should have better advantages for education than our village afforded, and yet
we could not bear the thought of sending her away from us. She had a decided musical talent, and we were desirous of cultivating it. While we were making inquiries, some one told us that the rector
in the next town was increasing his income by receiving a few pupils into his family, and that his wife, an accomplished
musician, would give lessons to a limited number. Arrangements were made for Margie to study with Rev. Mr. Ormond, and take vocal and instrumental lessons of his wife. She was to remain with them until Friday of each week, when we were to bring her home and have all the joy we could until Monday. How long that first week of separation seemed!

Margie's bird did not sing, but hopped uneasily in his cage jerking his head from side to side. The inspiration of his life, as of ours, was gone. The pet kitten, missing the gladness of the house, took to roving. The old clock that we always thought had a pleasant way of telling the hours, ticked like a death knell. Everything was a forsaken look. I could see father busied himself more with his patients, but I could find nothing to interest
my loneliness.

Margie came back to us bright and happy, she had seen something of the world outside of our home and was charmed. She told us she was not very much behind the others, and that her voice, a rich soprano, had been highly praised. "Father, Faith," she said, her face glowing with animation, "this is a beautiful world we live in. I mean to attain to a position in it; all is easy if only one is determined. I mean to have everything beautiful about me."

"The gossamer web shining in the sun
is beautiful, but the tempest bears it away
and leaves no trace of what was once so fair," said father, as he laid his hand on my head.

"Yes, I know," she answered gayly,
"but the brave little spinner can weave another delicate web on the ruin of every castle and straitway build; a nobler."

"With every thread runs the life of the weaver; do not spin your web beyond your strength, my daughter."

"Do not look so solemn, father, I mean to sing all my life long as merrily
as any bird." She did not know the gay songster had his time of silence.

Two years came and went. Margie improved wonderfully. We could not help a feeling of pride as we saw the admiring eyes of our friends rest upon her. Of late she had spoken of a certain Paul Clifford, who was boarding in the village where Mr. Ormond lived. He was a young Englishman—a tourist, and had been fascinated by the charming scenery of the country town. So he told
Mr. Ormond, and made so fair a representation of himself, and family connections, that Mr. Ormond, favorably impressed, invited him to his house, and presented him to the young ladies. "He is just my ideal of what the old knights were," said Margie, as she sat on the roof outside the window one night in midsummer. "So graceful in his bearing,
so handsome in person. You have no idea how much manlier he is than the men we have known, Faith."

The moonbeams fell full upon my face.
She must have seen the expression it wore, for she said quickly, "I do not mean more manly than father; there is no better than he you know." I had no thought of father then. Paul Clifford and his relation to my darling troubled me.

"Have you seen much of him?" I asked.

"Oh yes," she said, leaning her face upon her hand, and looking up to the stars as if reading her destiny there—
"He is a fine singer, and Mrs. Ormond has allowed us to practice duets together.
O yes, I have seen a great deal of him."

The latter part of the sentence she uttered in a low tone, as if to herself—
"Faith," she said, after a moment's silence, "he is coming to see you and father."

"He will not find much of interest here," I said, more as a question than an affirmation.

"No," she answered vacantly; then stepped in from the window and sat down upon the stool at my feet.

"Faith," she said, taking my hand and laying it on her unbound hair, "could you bear to have me love any one as well as I love you and father?"

"O Margie!" I cried out, "you do not love this Paul Clifford, this adventurer! You are only a girl, scarce eighteen; you do not know your mind."

Lifting herself to her feet and throwing back her heavy hair, she said: "I have a woman's heart Faith, and I love Paul Clifford. I have promised to leave all for him if need be."

"O Margie!" I could say no more the blow had fallen so suddenly.

"Yes," she continued, "I have promised to leave all for love of him; but that will never be. You will see him, and you will not wonder I love him.
Long ago I told you I had found my hero. Why were you not prepared?"

I saw Paul Clifford, and I wondered Margie loved him. He was handsome,
and his brow and eye revealed intellect;
but the expression of his mouth, the cold smile ever playing upon his lips, the indefinable something in his manners, impressed me strongly against him. A man who would never be a martyr in any cause, one who would always tenderly care for himself, would have been my ideal conclusion, if I had met him as a stranger. Now, I thought, he is one who can never make Margie truly happy. I can never forget the jets of light that,
arrow-like leaped from his eye when,
with that icy smile upon his lips, he said, when presented to me, "This is the immaculate sister Faith." "Yes, this is Faith, my darling sister," said Margie, stepping from his side to mine. O Margie,
how often have I thought of that movement of yours! Was it prophetic?

Father did not see Paul Clifford with my eyes. He saw only the accomplished man, and was pleased. It would be useless to tell how I pined with my sister, urged her to wait, to test her lover. It availed nothing, and had I known she was going to certain death, I could not have prevented it. For once father thought me foolish, selfish it might be. I do not know but he thought I envied Margie! But I did not care what he thought, if only I could save her.

"He is rich, Faith, and can give our darling the house she longed for, father said."

They were married in the autumn—
Every one congratulated me on the beauty of the bride, and all chided me
for my tears as the carriage drove off,
and a tiny handkerchief fluttered in the breeze. They were to spend the winter in one of the large cities. "My darling must have a sight at the world and its wonders," Paul said.

Margie wrote often for the first year,
in often for those days. We could have a mail only once during the week. How we waited for those letters, and how eagerly we read them. I hold in my hand now the letter she wrote the first anniversary of her marriage. It is yellow and cracked with age. "I have great news," she wrote. "A week ago tonight was born to us a little son. Give thanks for him, Faith, and ask that he may live to be a good man. I think he looks like you, although he has my eyes;
he gestures like father, and altogether is a promising little man. How much I love him, how much I hope for him."

Afterwards came letters telling all about the little treasure. "I had hoped to name him after you, father, but baby's papa claimed a better right, so he calls him Paul." She told us that he had learned to lis grandpa and Aunt Faith,
and then the letters ceased. We wrote to prominent persons in the city where they lived, after all other means of inquiry had failed. We received the answer that there had been a Clifford,
alias Harney, a forger, in the city, staying in some obscure place, but getting word of officers on his track, had fled—Father went to the city, and came back looking ten years older. He never told me whether he learned anything of Paul Clifford, but he could find no trace of Margie.

It was eight years after Margie was married, five since we had heard a word from her, when one pleasant day in the hazy autumn time, father and I were busy taking down the rose bush which grew over the piazza—the rose that first shook its perfume on the air the June Margie was born—when the garden gate opened. I thought the neighboring children had come of an errand and did not look up.

"Are you Aunt Faith?" a musical voice asked, I dropped the bush and ran to father, who had fallen forward with the words "Margie! Margie!" on his lips. A thinly clad but beautiful boy stood before me. "I am Paul," he said,
"little Paul, and mamma is here in the garden."

Margie had come back with her gossam-
er web broken, and no strength to spin another. We could not believe that the pale face and mournful eyes belonged to our once brilliant Margie, and we never knew until years after how rudely the wings of our bird had been clipped, and her bright plumage trailed in the dust—
"I cannot tell you much of him, Faith," she said, "I am his wife. Too late I found he was unworthy of my love. I have had my romance, and its end is bitter. I do not know as he ever told me his true name. I call Paul by mother's maiden name. Paul Minden need not blush for Paul Clifford's sins."

We could not keep Margie with us;
we knew by the blush that burned in her
cheek, and the unnatural light in her eye.
One November afternoon we wheeled her couch in front of the windows, that she might see the sun go down behind the clouds that he had tinted. Lifting herself forward she took Paul's hand, and pointing it to the clouds, she said: "It is beautiful there, Paul."

"Yes, mamma,"

"It is a great deal more beautiful beyond there, my darling; I am very tired and I am going there to rest. Some day you will come; I will be there to meet you—remember, Paul."

Turning to me she said, "I shall find
it all as I have pictured it there, Faith,
green pastures and—Her head fell back upon the pillow, there was a gentle sigh, the spirit was released, and Margie

entered the fairy land and found rest beside the still waters.

Paul was like his mother, but his natural impulsiveness was so tempered by early sorrow that we had no fear that he would give his fancy too great breadth.
Father fell asleep for the last time when Paul was ready for college. We lifted the sods and laid him by mother and Margie and then sold the old homestead and went to the town where Paul was to study.

I never asked Paul what profession he wished to follow, but one day he told me
he should enter the ministry. "I shall be a home missionary, and I shall join the Methodist church," he said. We had heard that Paul Clifford was in the West;
I knew my Paul meant to find his father,
and this was the way he meant to do it.

Paul accepted no particular field, but,
as an independent missionary, he took a broad circuit. I was with him when, in the fall of 18—, he determined to hold a camp meeting in the part of the Southwest that was opposed to anything of a religious order. Gamblers, cutthroats
from every land, forgers, robbers, composed the population. Many efforts had been made, but no successful meeting had ever been held. There were stories told of ministers who had promised, at the point of the bowie-knife, never again to set foot in this country. I trembled for Paul, but he told me my fears were in vain. "I shall have my meeting, and I shall live; and I believe," he said fixing his black eyes upon me with a look so much like his mother's "I shall meet him there."

Paul leased a place called Cold Spring
where a fountain of clear water bubbled
in the midst of an evergreen grove, and conveyed the idea of having a dinner as well as a meeting. "We must have something novel to attract, Aunt Faith.
Once here I know I can impress the people as they have never been before—
There is a witchery in eloquence, and a power in the truth."

An advertisement was circulated promising a camp meeting such as had never been held before, and a dinner gotten up in the best manner, and the best of liquor was to be served. We reached the ground a little late. I could see Paul was anxious for the success of his scheme, and was unusually pale. The grove was filled with people, men, women and children, carrying all sorts of faces, and dressed in every kind of costume. There were mothers with babes hanging on their arms, coarse men with rides in hand and ugly dogs at their heels. There were gamblers with keen blades shining beneath their coats, and there were a few well dressed gentlemen and ladies who were attracted by the novel arrangement.

Paul entered the rude pulpit, and a thrill of pride went over me as that noisy assemblage hushed into silence, when in a clear melodious voice he pronounced a blessing upon the people and the food
they were about to partake. I did not hear all he said, but I knew there had been power in the words, for as I looked around I saw many of the mothers' faces
wet with tears.

I was standing by the most powerful-built
man I ever saw, not large, but of well-knit strength, and I caught sight of the pistols in his belt and heard his muttered threats, I trembled for Paul. This man shouted to Paul in tones that cut like knives: "You have lied, Mr. Preacher, Where is the liquor you promised?"
Paul raised himself to his height, and with a look that seemed to embrace every man, woman and child of that vast multitude, he pointed to the fountain that sparkled and leaped in the sun-shine.

"There!" he said, in the tones that vibrated through the woods, and came back to us, echoing, "There! There!
of that clear spring, bubbling up from the bosom of the earth, and then come up higher, and I will tell you of a fountain
clear as crystal flowing from the throne
on high whose depth no man can measure,
and whose waters cleanse all stain."

I did not hear any more, for the man beside me turned his face toward me and muttered a curse. I shuddered, for I knew those eyes with darts of fire leaping from them, and those sneering lips,
with their cold smile haunted me for years. Paul Clifford stood besides me, I could touch his garments. I started to make my way to Paul, when there was a sharp click, a flash; "Aunt Faith, I am shot!" Paul cried; then throwing his arms up, he fell back upon the green sward.

"Paul Clifford," I shouted, "it is you who have done this; you have shot your son; you have killed Margie's Paul!"
"With a wild cry the man leaped forward. Make room, men; stand out of the way; give him air. He will not die.
Margie. Paul I did not mean to forsake
you. I was hunted to death."

"Stand back, all of you," I said;
"Paul Clifford, do not touch a hair of the head you have laid low; he does not belong to you; you have no place here."
I lifted Paul's head to my lap. The warm blood was streaming from a wound
in his breast, and the soft curls were damp with death dew.

"Aunt Faith he murmured, "I forgive him!"

"O God! he forgives me!" my murdered boy forgives me!" the man groaned in agony!

"Yes he forgives you Paul Clifford he came here to save you."

"Call him back to life. The God you believe in will hear you. Pray, O pray," Paul roused himself, looking round
upon the people, and said brokenly:—

There is a fountain filled with blood,
Drawn from Immanuel's veins,
And sinners plunged beneath the flood
Lose all their guilty stains.

Then fixing his eyes, that beamed as
with a light from Paradise, upon me, he said eagerly, "I see it, the beautiful city beyond the clouds. I am going—"

I laid Paul to rest under the evergreens. I hope Paul Clifford has knelt by the lonely grave and been forgiven.
I have never seen him since. I have bought the old homestead, and am quietly waiting my summons to the beautiful land.—Springfield Republican.

SCIENTIFIC CORRESPONDENCE.

Scientific investigation has shown that there is a mathematical order in the development of the vegetable world, corresponding, with the motion of the planets
in the heavens. That is to say the order of development in the first and least complicated class of plants, may be mathematically expressed by the fraction 1-2, because the branches are, vertically, on opposite sides of each other, only, and occupy one-half the space around the stem.

The order noticeable in the class of plants,
giving three radiations from the main
stalk, is, that the second branch, instead of being vertically opposite the first and lowest, occupies the space, one-third the distance around the stem, and may therefore be appropriately expressed by the fraction one-third. In the class where five leaves radiate, the second leaf does not come opposite the first, but is situated at a distance of two-fifths the distance
around the stem: the third leaf two-fifths still further distant, and so on—the sixth leaf appearing precisely over the first.

This order therefore may be expressed by the fraction two-fifths. And this proceeding we obtain the fractions 3-8, 5-13, and 8-21, as mathematically expressive of the ascending order of the vegetable kingdom.
And what is still more remarkable is, no
intermediate fractions are any where to be found in this order of vegetable development; and in this arrangement we have exhibited that Higher Law, which causes all compound substances uniting with other substances, do so in proportions which are the sum of the several proportions of their elements. All elementary substances unite with each other in definite proportions, which are varied
only by the signs + and -, and the proportions for one elementary substance
vary from the proportions of other elementary substances, with an occasional exception.

Thus, taking Hydrogen as the unit, a table of chemical equivalents, based on this law of chemistry, gives the following numbers as the proportions in which the elementary bodies under consideration
unite with each other, or with other bodies.—Hydrogen, 1; Carbon, 6; Oxygen,
8; Nitrogen, 14.

And, thus we find this same unity of design in the order of development throughout the vegetable world.

tions, with the mathematical order of vegetable development. Astronomy has demonstrated the mathematical relation existing between the revolution of the heavenly body and this order of development in vegetation, thus—the outermost planet, Neptune, makes its revolution around the sun—say, in round numbers, 60,000 days; Jupiter, in 30,000; Saturn, in 10,000; Herschel, in 3,000; the asteroids, (on the average,) in 1,500, &c., &c. Now, by combining the two first numbers, 60,000 with 30,000, as denominator and numerator, in the same way precisely as the vegetable order of development and combination give the fractions 1-2, 1-3, 2-3, &c., we have, as the result, exactly the same fractions. Thus Neptune's year united with Herschel's, gives: 30,000-60,000, equal 1-2, as in the first order of vegetable development. Combine Saturn and Herschel, 10,000-30,000, and we have 1-3. Jupiter and Saturn give 4,000-10,000, equal 2-5. The asteroids and Jupiter produce 1,500-4,000 equal 3-8, and so on through the whole catalogue of combinations.

And thus it is upon examination we find all the phenomena of nature, throughout the mineral, vegetable, animal worlds and of the entire universe of matter, this Higher Law, evincing goodness, power and wisdom. One element, one force, one origin and one destiny, in all and for all, in which there is, there can be, no discord, no real evil, no absolute failure, not even "any shadow of turning, or any indication of a change."

NEW BUILDINGS. Mr. William Parker, Jr., is getting materials ready for a new house for Mr. Charles F. Adams, Jr. It is to be located on the top of "President's Hill," south of the residence of his brother John Q. Adams, and is to cost about twenty thousand dollars.

Mr. Parker has recently finished on Franklin street at the south part of the town, for Mr. Nathan C. Brackett, the most costly house in this place according to its size. It is built in the very best manner, with the most approved stock and materials, and at an expense of nearly fourteen thousand dollars.

Messrs. Bailey & Baxter have just commenced a very convenient house for Mr. James Vance, on Granite street, near Mr. Edward Brackett's.

A very large and fine stable has just been completed at the National Sailors' Home, in this town, in place of the one destroyed by fire in September last.

Mr. Charles C. Brackett has just completed a very fine house for Mr. Henry F. Barker, on Greenleaf street, near his father's.

ACCIDENT. Mr. Gilbert Blaisdell, an industrious and respected citizen of this place, met with quite a serious accident on Saturday last. He was finishing a well for Mr. Henry F. Barker on Greenleaf street, when the curbstone which he was moving with a derrick, slipped from the chains that held it, and fell on his foot, breaking both bones near the ankle. He was at last conveyed lying in a very critical condition, being at the time of the accident in feeble health. Mr. B. has met with many hard rubs, and might be classed with those that are truly unfortunate. May careful nursing from willing hands once more return him to our midst.

Some of the citizens at Squantum want to get that portion of this town annexed to Boston, and have a bridge built from Commercial Point or Neponset, to near the New Squantum House. One gentleman, we learn, offers to pay one-third the expense of building.

Miss Ann Bass, who it will be remembered broke several bones in falling from the Post Office steps some four months since, has so far recovered as to be able to go about the house by the use of a cane; yet she is unable to arrange her hair, not having full use of her arms.

By a notice in another column it will be seen that the Selectmen of this town have forbidden neat cattle from being driven through this place, or have the cattle in Quincy driven out of the boundaries of the place, so long as the cattle disease continues. This is a good idea, and every town where the disease has not yet located itself, should avail themselves of the benefits of the Statute on the subject.

The citizens of East Stoughton are about paying the $500 reward offered for the exposure of Moran. One-half of this amount as well of one-half of the $500 offered by the Selectmen will be paid to Moran's nephew, James McCarthy, and one half of each will be divided with the eleven men who assisted in his capture.

UNITED STATES SENATOR. A majority of the two branches of the Legislature re-elected Hon. Henry Wilson, of Natick, Senator from Massachusetts for six years from the 4th of March next. He was first elected to succeed Hon. Edward Everett, and took his seat Jan. 31, 1865, re-elected in 1869 and 1875, and is again selected for this high honor. The result being anticipated, the announcement of the vote created no particular excitement in the House, though the Democrats were somewhat pleased with the fact that they kept their line unbroken, and gave their solid vote for John Quincy Adams, Esq. of this town.

Two hundred tons of silver ore per week pass through Salt Lake City.

Prof. Bluntschli, of the University of Heidelberg, one of the two greatest living German authorities on international law, has written an article on the Alabama claims. He says by allowing the departure of the Alabama, which might have been prevented, and by her subsequent equipment, the English Government violated not only international law, but also the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment act, and gave to the Government of the United States a claim for compensation. Her responsibility, however, is for direct consequences—such as the actual destruction of ships, cargoes, &c.—and not for those of an indirect or inferential character.

He says the United States have a claim arising out of the violation of the duties which a neutral State owes to a belligerent. This is an important point, which has until lately been quite overlooked. With respect to satisfaction, the learned Professor enumerates four forms as possible, two of which he dismisses as objectionable (one of them being a formal apology,) while the other two he thinks ought to be combined by the British Government, viz: the payment of an adequate money compensation, to be distributed by the United States Government among its injured citizens, accompanied with a declaration of the correct principles of neutrality to be observed hereafter.

A DOUBLE OCTAVE OF SERVICES. The following course of services and sermons will be begun in Christ Church, to-morrow evening, at 7 1-2 o'clock. On Sundays, the hour of service will be 7 1-2 o'clock, on all other days at 7.

A GREAT HOUSE COMFORT may be found in the use of Torrey's improved cemented Weather Strips and Rubber Mouldings applied to doors and windows, by W.W. Pratt & Co., 57 Bromfield street, Boston. We have tried them thoroughly, and find that they effectually keep out wind, rain, snow and dust, and save much fuel and discomfort. We would also, from our own experience, recommend persons desiring the best Window Shades and Fixtures, at a low price, to call on this company. Their clock spring curtain fixture is the best thing in market, and they offer to warrant it for five years. Boston Daily News.

The Forty Associates held their annual gathering at the Hancock House last evening. After the usual business of the evening, the company partook of an excellent supper, prepared in Mr. Allen's best style. We are pleased to see the good name this house has won in former years so well maintained.

The concert and chowder at Bates' Saloon on Saturday evening last, drew in a large crowd. The chowder was served in good style, and the singing by the Glee Club was very fine. Dr. Fred French presided at the melodeon. Our readers are invited to a similar entertainment, at the same place, this evening.

Mr. G. F. Wilson, our excellent provision dealer, who has been located for some months under the Post Office, has leased the store lately occupied by Jas. A. McLeelan, on Temple street, where he will move in a few weeks.

HARPER'S FOR FEBRUARY. We have on our table the February number of Harper's Magazine. We cannot tell sometimes why this magazine is so much more entertaining than others, but one thing is certain that it is highly prized by all in our household, and is always a welcome visitor. It is with many others offered for sale at Southern's Periodical Store, near the Post Office.

We learn that Mr. Wm. Walker who resides at the north part of the town has a hog which is said to weigh over 800 pounds. This rather beats the one raised by Mr. Glover at the south end.

The House on Thursday cut down the appropriation for State Police from $159,500, as reported by the Finance Committee, to $105,500, by a vote of 96 to 72.

BOMBARDMENT OF PARIS.

Paris papers of the 10th inst., furnish some horrid particulars of the bombardment of that city. Projectiles, some weighing about two hundred pounds,—unparalleled in the history of the siege, was pouring into that portion of Paris lying between the Hotel des Invalides and the Odéon, without interruption throughout the day and night, and was so violent on the night of the 8th between the Church of St. Sulpice and the Museum that shells fell every two minutes. Hospitals, ambulances, schools, the public libraries, the churches of St. Sulpice, the Sorbonne and Val de Graces and many private houses have been struck.

Women were killed both in the streets and in their beds, and infants in their mother's arms. One projectile, which fell in the Rue Vaugirard, killed four children and wounded five others.

NOTICE!

To Whom It may Concern.

W.F. the Selectmen of the Town of Quincy, in consequence of the alarming spread of a disease known as the Hoof and Mouth Disease among Cattle in this State; do, by the authority vested in us, by Chapters 210 and 220 of Acts of 1869, hereby forbid all persons or corporations from driving or taking neat cattle from, to, or through this Town, either by public or private conveyance without permit in writing from the Selectmen.

And we require that any person who knows or has reason to suspect the existence of any such disease among the cattle in his possession, under his care, or in his vicinity, shall forthwith give notice to the Selectmen of this Town under penalty of the Statutes, as follows: "By fine not exceeding $500, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year."

WHISPERS IN CHURCH.

Look! that's Mrs. Fitzgib coming in—
Her husband, you know, ran away;
She's not looking in brass to come out,
As if nothing had happened to-day.

Do see that delightful Tom Brown!
He's been having his hair cut, new style;
He is looking this way half the time,
O, Lord! I'm afraid I shall smile.

Such singing! she squalls like a cat;
It seems my poor nerves on a jump,
Yes, they pay him a thousand a year
On that organ to quaver and thump.

Have you noticed Miss Horton's new hat?
A week in advance of all others;
Conceited, extravagant girl—
But, ah, I adore her two brothers!

Jim waltzes so neatly, you know—
Then, dear, can you tell me the text?
Mother asks me at home what it is,
And if I don't know it, is vexed.

Thanks! "Speak no evil," that's short, anyhow,
I'll remember to tell her, for certain.
There's Del. White with a new-fangled veil,
As happy and long as a curtain.

There's Tom Brown looking over again—
He's invented a church telegraph,
By means of which we can converse,
O, my! I'm afraid I shall laugh.

KEEPING APPLES.

Having just read an account of a writer's keeping apples a long time by wrapping them in paper, and another article in which was stated that the keeping in a sound condition was greatly prolonged by keeping them from the air, I will give my testimony to substantiate the truth of the above assertions. I have eaten apples in August in a perfectly sound condition, that were wrapped in light paper the October previous. The Fourth of July has been frequently celebrated by partaking from a loaded dish
of apples, as well as from a pitcher of "ice cool lemonade." The former were not wrapped in the paper until near the close of March. I think by selecting the best of fruit now, and carefully enveloping
each specimen separately in paper so that the air cannot pass through, the time of keeping in a sound and eatable condition
can be greatly prolonged. After covering each apple with paper, I would select a tight wooden box and cover it
on the inside, or outside, with paper either before, or after putting in the fruit, as the case may be. Those persons who are desirous of preserving a small quantity of apples will be amply repaid for their trouble by trying the above experiment.
The fruit should not be disturbed after packing until the box is opened at the time the fruit is to be eaten.—Exchange.

GRINDING GRAIN.

It is a great mistake to feed most kinds
of animals whole or coarsely ground grain. The horse does not always masticate his food so perfectly as might be desired, and it is a very common occurrence
to see grain pass him quite undigested
and so perfect that its germ even is not destroyed. The same may be said of the ox. The skillful feeder and fattener of stock knows very well that it is very poor economy to feed coarsely ground meal to a fattening animal like the ox. We once heard the Hon. Paolo Lethrop, from whom there are very few more observing
or more intelligent feeders of stock, say that he considered it the greatest mistake
a farmer could make to feed whole or even coarse ground grain to fattening cattle. They did not get anything like the full good of it.—Ploughman.

SOFT SHELLED EGGS. When soft eggs are laid by fowls they intimate, usually, that the egg organs are inflamed,
which is occasioned by the bird's being over fed or too fat. Spare diet, and plenty of green food, especially lettuce leaves,
is the best treatment for fowls in that condition.

Anecdotes.

Two gentlemen of opposite politics
meeting, one inquired of the other the address of some political celebrity, when the other indignantly answered:—
"I am proud to say, that I am wholly ignorant of it."
"Oh, you are proud of your ignorance;
eh, sir?"
"Yes, I am," replied the belligerent,
and what then, sir?"
"Oh, nothing, sir, nothing; only you have a great deal to be proud of, that's all."

Rev. Brother M., on meeting a member of the church who had been quite sick, congratulating him on his recovery,
said:— "You must have been very ill."
To which the brother replied:—
"Oh, no, I was very sick, but had my senses all the while."

A sick man, slightly convalescing,
asked by a pious friend who his physician had replied: "Dr. Jones brought me through."
"No, no," said his friend, "God brought you out of your illness, not the doctor."
"Well, may be he did, but I am certain the doctor will charge me for it."

Welcome the Washing Day!

SOMETHING ENTIRELY NEW!

Washing reduced to a Science
by using the

CHAMPION

Wash Boiler!

Patented by C. W. HERRMANCE, Mar. 30, 1869.

A few among the many advantages this Boiler has over other devices for Washing are:

1st. It dissolves the dirt and cleanses the garments by forcing hot water through them.

2d. There is no wear while undergoing this
process.

3d. It produces a better and more thorough action than any other device yet invented for
washing.

4th. It washes the whole garments at once.

5th. It does your washing easier, and less than one-half the time usually required.

6th. It saves money, for it saves soap, time
and clothes.

7th. Six cents worth of soap is sufficient, with
this Boiler to do a large washing.

8th. It takes less fuel, less muscle, and when done
you are not half so tired, and consequently better natured, for your Washing is better done.

Poetry.

GOING ALONE.

With curls in the sunny air tossing,
With light in the merry blue eyes,
With laughter so clearly outgiving,
A laugh of delight and surprise;
All friendly assistance declining,
And trusting no strength but his own,
The past fears and trials forgotten,
The baby is "going alone."

What woe! what misadventure has befallen
How often the help that he needed
Has carelessly gone from his aid!
He has fallen while reaching for sunbeams,
Which just as he grasped them have flown,
And the tears of vexation have followed,
But now he is "going alone."

And through all his life he will study
This lesson again and again;
He will carefully lean upon shadows,
He will fall and weep over the pain,
The hand whose fond clasp was the surest,
Will coldly withdraw from his own,
The sunniest eyes will be clouded,
And he will be walking alone!

He will learn what a stern world we live in,
And he may grow cold like the rest;
And just keep a warm, sunny welcome,
For those who seem true and best;
Yet chastened and taught by past sorrows,
And stronger and manlier grown,
Not trusting his all in their keeping,
He learns to walk bravely alone.

And yet not alone for our Father
The faltering footsteps will guide
Through all the dark mazes of earth life,
And "over the river" deep tide,
Oh! here is a Helper unailing,
A strength we can perfectly trust,
When all human aid unavailing,
"The dust shall return unto dust."

A story is told of two Yorkshire men who travelled together three days in a stage coach without a word ever passing between them. On the fourth day, one of them at length ventured to remark that it was a fine morning. "And who said it wasn't?" was the reply.

Earn your money before you spend it, and then you will know what it is worth, and spend it more wisely.

The fretfulness of human life is a greater evil, and destroys more happiness than all the tramping of invasion and conquest. Save, then, I beseech you, this broad detraction from your comfort, and immense addition to your suffering, by heeding the apostle's injunction,—by bearing with one another's foibles and excitements, and forgiving one another's offences or neglects.

Do not be frequently changing from one form of business to another, since you lose much time in making these changes. A rolling stone gathers no moss.

A gentleman travelling on a steamer, one day, at dinner was making away with a large pudding close by, when he was told by the servant that it was desert.

"It matters not to me," said he, "I would eat it if it were a wilderness."

Dan Marble told a story about a Yankee tailor dunning a man for the amount of his bill. The man said he was sorry, very sorry indeed that he could not pay it.

"Well," said the tailor, "I took you for a man that would be sorry; but if you are sorer than I am, I'll quit."

Stephen Girard, the millionaire, was the son of a common sailor, of Bordeaux, France. At the age of ten years he left his native land in the capacity of a cabin boy, destitute of education and penniless. But by frugality and industry he was able to leave the snug sum of $1,800,000, nearly the whole of which was bequeathed to charitable purposes at his death.

An old hermit, ninety years of age, has been discovered at the foot of the Fiskill Mountains, far away from any other human being. He has a farm of sixty acres, and cultivates it. He is said to possess some $50,000. He lives in squalidness and filth.

Two young men in Burlington, Iowa, have invented a machine that makes one hundred thousand match-splints per minute. It occupies a space about eight inches in width and two and a half feet in length, and weighs about sixty pounds.

A room with pictures in it and a room without pictures differ by nearly as much as a room with windows and a room without windows. Nothing we think more melancholy, particularly to a person who has to pass much time in his room, than blank walls; for pictures are loopholes of escape to the soul, leading it to other scenes and other spheres.

Miscellany.

A FISHERMAN'S STORY.

A party of amateur voyagers—two gentlemen and three ladies—were suddenly overtaken by a gale on the coast along which they were sailing. The inexperienced oarsmen drew in the canvas, and pulled toward the sandy beach. A semicircular cove—hidden till then behind an abrupt rise of rock covered with scrub-pines and red pines—opened before them, and seemed to beckon them to its shelter. They had fixed their eyes on a rock at which to land, and were discussing the probability of finding a dwelling near by, when the keel of the boat dragged upon the sand, and in a moment was immovably imbedded there. They were many feet from the shore with no means of reaching it but by wading—a most undesirable mode for gentlemen in patent leathers and ladies in holiday attire.—Soon comprehending their situation, they looked at each other in blank amazement, when a sudden burst of childish laughter struck merrily on their ears, and told them they were within call of help.

High on the rock at whose base they had struck, just as they were turning into the little cove, stood a rough-looking man in his shirt sleeves, with his pants rolled up and his feet bare, spreading out nets to dry; while a child, four or five years old, in a pink sun-bonnet, prattled sweetly to him, as with mimic care she swept the top of the rock with a tiny broom.

A loud "halloo" from the boat stopped both the net spreading and the sweeping; and in a kind tone the fisherman called back from his high place, "I see your trouble, friends, and will put you all right in half a minute." And down he came over the rugged rock with the child following him, as swiftly as a kitten could have run over the velvet grass. The oars—poor gang-planks as they would have been—were by far too short to reach from the boat to the shore, and the good fisherman, seeing the difficulty, ran to his cottage behind the cliff for a board. This reached to within a few feet of the dry sand; and wading far into the water, he led the gentleman to the end of it, and taking a hand of each, assisted them to spring on shore. "Now," he said, "I'll get the ladies off and shelter them till the shower blows over," and taking the hand of the matron of the party, he led her to the end of the plank, when he unceremoniously lifted her in his arms and carried her to a dry rock. Returning to the boat he remarked, "I'm good at lifting old ladies and little children, for I've served my apprenticeship at that; but these two"—pointing to the young ladies—"are more delicate wares than I'm used to handling. But I guess I can get them above high-water mark without breaking them."

This good-natured jest, uttered in a respectful tone, brought a peal of laughter from those on the boat and those on the shore, and the "delicate wares" were soon landed without breaking.

"Follow me now, friends," said this rough owner of a gentle heart, "and I'll entertain you just like a king. That is, I'll give you the best I have, and a king could do no more."

As they turned round the cliff, three or four cottages of the humblest class met their eyes; and a half a dozen little children ran forward to look at the rare sight of strangers.

Raising the latch, the fisherman threw open the door of his dwelling and stood back while the visitors entered a common room, which was the perfection of neatness. The floor was well scoured and sanded, and overspread, here and there, with gay mats of rags braided or ornamented in applique. The stove shone gloriously in its sable polish, and the crockery and tin ware glittered on the open "dresser." The whole length of the mantel piece—save a space at each end for a tall brass candlestick—was filled up with a model fishing-smack, in full sail, with flag and pennon flying to the breeze.

Every chair was cushioned with gay patch-work, and the chimney corners were decorated with holders on whose black ground work a spread eagle had evidently been the artist's incipient design; but the result was a deformed rooster; and from nails at the window side hung shears, scissors and a needle book; all showing the deft, though untrained skill of woman. But although the host had fled into an adjoining room to deck himself with coat and shoes for the occasion, no wife appeared to entertain them.

"Where's your mother, little girl?" asked one of the ladies of the child, who sat with her forefinger in her mouth, stealing glances at the strangers from under her sunbonnet.

"Dead," was the sole reply.
"Is this your father?"
"No, ma'am."
"Have you a father?"
"Yes, ma'am."
"Where is he?"

"I don't know. Nobody knows. I guess he don't know himself. He often don't know where he is;" and after this burst of words little Phoebe courageously threw back her sun-bonnet and exclaimed, "Look, Uncle's been cutting off my hair with grandma's big shears. He put the curls in her big Bible; want to see them? She's gone to see God now, and we're going by-and-by."

Here the little prattler was stopped by the entrance of the fisherman, outwardly a new man.

"Going to meeting, uncle?" cried the child, in amazement at the unusual sight of the Sunday garments on a week day.

"No, child," he answered, taking a chair and jumping Phoebe on to his knee. "I dressed up in honor to my company. Do you see how the rain pours, friends? A poor-shelter's better than none in such a gale. I think it will soon pass over, and I hope the waves won't be very high. Perhaps you will be able to get off a while after sundown."

"After sundown?" cried one of the gentlemen. "I must be at the hotel before the mail goes out."

"You are a minister, sir, I can see by the cut of your vest; but for all that I shouldn't be surprised if I could preach you a little sermon that might profit you more than your own do." The man in the pulpit learns more from books than the men below do; but he doesn't always learn from experience. "Must" and "shall" and "will" used to be great words with me; but I've given them up altogether. They don't move God, and we may as well submit to His plans first as last. It is no use saying, 'I will and I shall land,' when He has fixed the prow in the sand."

"Thank you, my friend," said the minister, "for your lesson. I hope when we become better acquainted, you'll know that I'm a servant of God by a better sign than the cut of my vest. I wish you would give us the experience which made you throw away 'must' and 'shall.'"

"Phoebe, dear," said the fisherman, "take your china now and run with the children to the net sheds. But first run into neighbor Lunt's and ask the old lady if she will come in, and sit beside you to-night, as I'm going to row some company round to the hotel at the South Cove."

"But where's your wife, my friend asked the minister?"

"Wife? I never had one; and it was in submitting to God's will in that, that I gained the victory which lifted me to where I stand to-day—above high water mark, where neither gales nor waves can harm me," replied the fisherman. "Before I was eighteen years old, a promise had passed between little Phoebe's mother and me, to be married as soon as we were old enough. Her father was a pretty rich old farmer upon the highland there, and he thought 'a mackerel boy' wasn't quite smart enough for a son-in-law for him; but he was too crafty to rouse human nature, and so let matters slip along. When my father died here, the farmer told me I had better sell all the boats, &c., and try a new life. He hinted that they wanted a bar-keeper at the hotel, and that as he supplied them with poultry, he thought he could get me the place, and then I might have Ruth."

I said "No, sir, I'm not going to sell my soul, even for a wife! If my mother will leave the cottage in the cove, I'll go up back and take a farm. I can get my bread off God's land, as well as out of His sea. But I shan't tear her away from her home."

The old man muttered about not keeping Ruth waiting till she was gray for a husband—she was nineteen then and I was twenty-three—and I went home to talk to mother.

Says I, "How would you like me to be bar-keeper up at the new brick hotel, mother?"

"I'd rather see you a sick pauper in the brick poor house!" she cried, "trusting in your father's God and doing His will."

"Well," says I, "how would you like to live on a farm?" "I think of making some little changes in life now."

"O my boy," cried she, "what has put that into your head? Don't you remember that rolling stones gather no moss? I should soon die if I was taken away from the sound of the waves on the sand. Build a parlor on to the cottage, and buy a sofa and a carpet, and then bring Ruth here and we'll be happy—She'll be contented with you."

I never told her what the old farmer had said, and there it dropped.

I told Ruth to take her choice—to come to the cottage when it was in order for her, or wait till God took mother home, and I'll go wherever she wanted me to. She said she'd come here then; and said she'd be very tender to my mother, and should be ashamed to wait for her to die; and so we set Thanksgiving day for the wedding.

ing in your father's God and doing His will."

"Well," says I, "how would you like to live on a farm?" "I think of making some little changes in life now."

"O my boy," cried she, "what has put that into your head? Don't you remember that rolling stones gather no moss? I should soon die if I was taken away from the sound of the waves on the sand. Build a parlor on to the cottage, and buy a sofa and a carpet, and then bring Ruth here and we'll be happy—She'll be contented with you."

I never told her what the old farmer had said, and there it dropped.

I told Ruth to take her choice—to come to the cottage when it was in order for her, or wait till God took mother home, and I'll go wherever she wanted me to. She said she'd come here then; and said she'd be very tender to my mother, and should be ashamed to wait for her to die; and so we set Thanksgiving day for the wedding.

Soon after this I met the old man up at the store, and he growled out something about my being gray before I should call Ruth my wife; and then said she was going away to school.

I went up the next evening, but she had gone—they had hurried her off on purpose.

I had one or two letters from Ruth, very kind, but very timid. The next news was, that she had found somebody to fill my place that pleased her father better. Then my craft was run, and I went first into the sand—and there was no way to set my foot on dry land! Then I knew what David meant when he said "All thy waves and thy billows have gone over me." I had professed for three years submission to Christ; but I now found the work wasn't begun. I liked Him for a master as long as His law ran in accordance with my will, but really, I wanted to rule my own destiny.

Well, I beat about among the breakers till they well nigh swallowed me up, declaring that I must and should have my own way! When my will was at the highest, one night, I felt sure that the strife couldn't last much longer and then I cried out of the depths unto God.—That was the first time through all the storm that I had asked that His will might be done. Then he came out to me in the tempest, and took me by the hand. He brought no board to me, as I did to you, but only his own right arm, and grasping that, I trod the billows and they were like molten silver under my feet. He led me up and placed me on a rock above highwater mark, and from that day to this—ten years—I've never been once in the deep. Then I told my blessed old mother all the struggle, and testified to God's mercy in breaking my will. I've had no "musts" and "wills" since then.

The old man seemed bent on bar-keepers, and poor, easy Ruth married one. Her only failing was, that she always yielded to the one that had her in hand for the time, be it who it might; and her uncle and father settled matters between her and this dandy fellow, whom they thought far before the "mackerel boy," who would have given his life to save her from trouble.

Well, years passed, and every now and then poor Ruth came home, and although little was said, we all knew that she had been sacrificed to a worthless man.

By and by she came home to die; and one bleak winter day we laid her and her little baby in the grave together. These hands helped to lower the coffin, as they had done before that of her first-born; and I thank God that she is at rest, poor child.

Then there rose a quarrel between the two grandfathers as to who should take little Phoebe, each saying it was the other's place. I told mother I'd give half I was worth to have her and work for her myself; but she said, "Folks would laugh at you, Sam." Then I turned from her and told God I wanted the child, and promised Him to be a father to her; and there I left it.

One night I was up at the hotel with a boat-load of fish, and who should be there but this German, making a fool of himself, and there was little Phoebe asleep in a chair in the bar-room! He was a vagrant, and dragging my poor Ruth's child about the world, another vagrant!

I asked him why he did not put her where she would have care; and he said no one would take her. Then I said, "I'd take her and make her like my own child."

And he said he'd give her to me for a pair of new boots.

"I went out with him and bought boots and a hat, and knowing he was not in a condition to make the transfer lawful, I took him and the child home in my boat. The next day we went before a lawyer, I adopted little Phoebe, and such a joy as she was to my mother! I also ordered the folks at the tavern to give him a bed and a supper whenever he comes round—for bad as he is, I can't forget that he was her husband."

"And about your mother?" asked one of the guests.

"Everything is just as she left it when she fell asleep a few months ago. She was a humble, holy woman, sir, and God saved her the pain of dying," and throwing open the door of a bedroom, he added, "There, sir, is the pillow where God for the last time gave His beloved sleep. It's a holy place to me, now, it's where I hold communion with Heaven; it's my closet."

The strangers glanced with a feeling of reverence at the snowy couch and at the little light-stand which held the old family Bible.

"Before you go I will show you where I laid her," said the faithful son.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

FATAL ACCIDENT. A well-dressed gentleman was found dead about two o'clock on Saturday morning last, by Messrs. Richard G. Elliott and Jonathan S. Paine of this town, on returning from an entertainment in Braintree. The body was lying in Centre Street, a few rods from the Quincy boundary line, under the trestle bridge of the O. C. and Newport Railway, with the skull broken, and the fingers and back of one hand badly jammed or cut. Messrs. Elliott and Paine immediately came to this village and aroused Coroner Bass, Mr. Hall the sexton, and some of the Constables, and returned to the place where the body lay and removed the same to the coffin warehouse of Mr. John Hall. Lewis Bass, Esq., the Coroner, then summoned the following gentlemen, as jurors, to investigate the circumstances attending the death:—R. G. Elliott, Jos. W. Lombard, J. S. Paine, Samuel Ames, Chas. H. Kimball and John Hall.

The inquest after examining the body, adjourned to the following Monday evening, for further information, as nothing was found on the person to identify it.

All day Saturday there was a continual rush of visitors to Mr. Hall's, but no one appeared to know the deceased. On Saturday evening it was thought from an article which appeared in the Boston Herald, that the deceased belonged to Chelsea, and a telegram was immediately sent to his family. On Sunday morning two sons of Mr. James Vannevar visited this place and recognized the body as their father, and had his remains removed to Chelsea for burial, after remunerating Mr. Hall, for his kindness and trouble.

Mr. Vannevar's sons said their father was about seventy years of age, and had been for some time feeble minded, caused by the softening of the brain; and they had thought of placing him in the insane hospital. He went away from his residence about seven o'clock, on Friday morning, and as he did not return as soon as usual, the family became alarmed for his safety, and searched in all directions without avail. The sons thought their father was never in Quincy before, and that he travelled the whole distance afoot,—being a great walker. He had no money or anything except his wearing apparel with him. They expressed their thanks for the kind and prompt attention paid to his remains.

THE JURORS' VERDICT.

"That James Vannevar, came to his death between the hours of seven o'clock of the 20th day, and three o'clock of the 21st day, of January inst., by imprudently walking on the track of the O. C. and Newport Railway, and falling about seventeen feet from the bridge crossing Centre street, in Braintree, and thereby fracturing his skull."

DEATHS. We give our readers to-day a list of deaths for 1870, as registered by the Town Clerk. It numbers 141; twelve of whom were between 70 and 80 years of age; seven between 80 and 90; two between 90 and 100; and one old lady of foreign birth, over 100 years old.

ICE. Mr. Wm. G. Prescott commenced filling his house with splendid ice from fourteen to sixteen inches thick, on Thursday last. It was the first he had housed this season, and is probably handsomer than any gathered in this vicinity previous to that time.

THE WEATHER. The week ending yesterday noon was decidedly the coldest of any we have experienced this season. The mercury seemed anchored at zero, and for five days did not vary but a few degrees from that point,—sometimes above and sometimes below. The coldest we have heard of in this vicinity was at Mr. Babcock's at the Railway village, where it was one morning twelve degrees below zero. The snow has fallen very plentifully a good part of the time, and is now over a foot deep on a level; and would make excellent sleighing with a little warm sun to melt it. It was a good deal like bran yesterday, and when trod upon, one would sink to the ground.

Prof. Cadwell, the world-renowned mesmerizer, who created so much fun and enjoyment here last Spring, gave one of his entertainment last night which was much enjoyed, and we are pleased to say he will give one more entertainment this evening, at the Town Hall.

A CHALLENGE.

"Is Modern Mediumism the Religion of Universal Humanity?"
Last Sunday Rev. William Denton, well known as a lecturer on Geology, spoke in Music Hall, Boston, in the affirmative on the above question. He is a popular advocate of Modern Mediumism as the Religion of Humanity. And, as it is contemplated to have him give a course of lectures on Geology, in this town, I take this opportunity of inviting him to a public discussion with me, on the problem above stated. I take the negative, and the arrangements to be made before hand. The debate may be held in Rogers's Chapel, or any other place, in this, or any one of the adjacent towns. And I respectfully request Mr. Lyander S. Richards his agent, or any other friend, to call the attention of Mr. Denton to this challenge.

LAROF SUNDLERLAND.

Quincy, Jan. 23, 1871.

RELIGIOUS LECTURES AT CHRIST CHURCH. The course of services noticed in last week's issue has been thus far carefully carried out. On Monday evening, the Rev. Phillips Brooks, Rector of Trinity Church, Boston, charmed the assembled congregation with the witching eloquence, which has so successfully marked him as a favorite in critical circles. On Tuesday evening, the Rev. Dr. Nicholson preached a sermon which has merited high praise among learned men and will not fail to wherever delivered in his strong impressive way. On Wednesday evening, the Rev. Dr. Wharton, a Professor in the Divinity School at Cambridge, commemorated the life and actions of St. Paul,—the day being marked in the calendar as "Feast of the Conversion of St. Paul,"—and pictured the scene of his conversion with glowing imagery.

On Thursday evening there were no services owing to the storm, and the illness of the Rev. E. B. Chase of Cambridge.

The remainder of the course will be carried on as announced, viz: this evening, the Rev. Father Prescott from the Church of the Advent, Boston. On Monday evening of the coming week, the Rev. Theodore Edson, D. D. Rector of St. Anne's Church, Lowell; on Tuesday evening, the Rev. Nicholas Hoppen D. D. of Christ Church, Cambridge; on Wednesday evening the Rev. Alex. H. Vinton, of Emmanuel Church, Boston; on Thursday evening, the Rev. J. P. T. Coolidge D. D. of South Boston; on Friday evening, the Rev. S. Chipman Thrall D. D. of Trinity Church, Haverhill; on Saturday, the Rev. G. S. Converse, of St. James, Roxbury.

The services begin, each evening a few minutes after 7 o'clock, as necessity requires that they should be closed in time to reach the 8.40 train to Boston.

The family of our late lamented townsman, John C. Randall, who lost his life on the 6th of September last, while descending from Mont Blanc, received his effects on the 16th inst.

To-morrow the Orthodox Society in this place occupy the old Church for the last time, it is supposed. The following Sunday they will have preaching in their new chapel, adjoining the new Church.

VACATION. The Winter session of the public schools ended yesterday, and a short vacation of one week is to be enjoyed by scholars and teachers.

H. H. Faxon, Esq., of this town, has with his accustomed liberality, presented recently the Sabbath School at the Railway Village, Milton, with a check for fifty dollars.

At a meeting of the creditors of William L. Bradley, held at his office, 24 Broad street, on the 18th inst., they unanimously voted to give him an extension of six, twelve, eighteen and twenty-four months, with interest after February 1, 1871.

A correspondent in the Old Colony Sentinel says, Mr. Caleb W. Jenkins of Scituate is the father of seventeen healthy children. Neither Mr. Jenkins nor his wife are above 50 years of age, and are both in the full enjoyment of health. What is quite as funny as the rest is, that two of his neighbors have promised him, one $1000, and the other $300 whenever his children shall number 20. Under this stimulus, we are informed by a lady who lives in the neighborhood, and who is supposed to know whereof she speaks, that the prospect is very fair that Mr. J. will get his $1300.

Every family needs to keep in the house something that will cure headache, toothache, ague pains, lameness, bruises, cramps, and other kinds of pain and suffering, and what is there so good as Renne's Pain-Killing Magic Oil.—Try it.

MAINE CORRESPONDENCE.

PORTLAND, Jan. 25, 1871.

The cold snap has been very severe this week. Twenty below is the lowest reported in this neighborhood. We have had no use for sleighs this winter, save for a few days. The absence of rain has also greatly impeded mechanical pursuits and has been a source of great discomfort to families. Sleigh water is a great luxury to those of us who secured it before the water famine began. Its softness and purity are unsurpassed.

The lecture season closes this evening with a musical treat by the Mendelssohn Quintette Club from Boston.

To-morrow evening the Y. M. C. A. dedicate their new rooms at the Mechanic's Hall, with appropriate festivities.

The State Temperance Convention assembles next Tuesday at Augusta, independent of sect and party for "prayer, deliberation and action in reference to the cause. A two days' session is announced.

The legislature is fairly under way and a short session is promised. The railroad interests claim prominent attention. The question of the division of Westbrook, the largest and richest town in the state, is again agitating the House. It is used to be a part of ancient Portland or Falmouth but now has about seven thousand people with a valuation of upwards of three million dollars. Some would like to join Portland, a second party wish to divide and have a new town called Oakland, "the Deering Oaks" song by Longfellow being suggestive to the name of a new name; but a third and the largest party, ask to be let alone.

Frequent revivals are reported in every direction. The pastors of this city and suburbs have full and interesting sessions every Monday noon. "How we make sermons" was discussed this week and "Ministerial Recreations" come up for consideration next Monday. The Daily Press the leading daily paper in Maine has, with the New Year, introduced a new feature for every Saturday morning the Religious Department which is edited by a clergyman. It contains state news from all denominations and brief editorial notes on topics of general interest. Last week "Parsonages," "Sunday Dinners," etc. were written upon. Bowdoin College began the term on the 6th inst. Westbrook Seminary closes with about ninety students. The Spring term at Gorham Seminary, in the town joining Westbrook begins on the 28th proximo—Ex-Gov. Chamberlain, President Harris of Brunswick and other eminent scholars are engaged in the special lecture course. The attendance of teachers in the Normal Department will be large.

Bates' Hall was again crowded last Saturday evening. The choral was excellent and hard to beat. The singing was also very fine. Mr. D. F. French presided at the organ in his usual pleasing style. The ballads sang by Mr. E. R. Bates were as usual very fine. The same thing will be repeated this evening. It will be seen by advertisement that all are invited.

COIN NOTES. The coin notes which it is proposed to issue from the Treasury are to be ornamented with a new back, composed of a very ingenious and beautiful grouping of the gold coins of the United States, so arranged as to display both surfaces of each coin, which has been photographed and prepared in proper form to send to the engraver, and will when completed make an elegant and appropriate finish to the backs of the new notes.

Marriages.
In this town, on the 24th inst., by Rev. S. Kelley, Mr. William Everett Hardwick, of Boston, to Miss Priscilla S. Newcomb, of this town.

Deaths.
In this town, on the 25th inst., Mrs. Nancy Sweet, wife of Mr. George Spear, 24, aged 63 years.

[Maine papers please copy.]

Special Notices.

FINANCES OF MASSACHUSETTS.

By the Auditor's report for 1870, it is shown that the public debt on the first of January, 1871, was $28,270,881, being a decrease of $2,552,500, during the year just completed. The expenditures for 1871 are estimated at $4,436,320, including $300,000 for the Legislature, $50,000 for the council, $205,000 for the judiciary, $430,000 for charities, $210,000 for the military, $135,000 for State police, $100,000 for State reform and industrial schools, $625,000 for State aid and bounties, $1,600,000 for interest, premiums $100,000, payment of unfunded debt, $1,142,717. The revenue for 1871 is estimated at $2,148,000, of which $560,000 will come from corporation taxes, $250,000 from insurance tax and licenses, and $1,080,000 from the savings banks. The amount left to be provided for by the Legislature, by tax or other means, is $2,287,000. By these figures it will be seen that very near a tenth part of what is to be expended during the coming year will be for benevolent objects, while a seventh part will be used in dispersing aid and comfort to those who fought for the rights we enjoy, or the families which have been left destitute by the death of their natural protectors, who were the victims of cruel war.

Orange trees at the South have been frozen by thousands.

Old Sayings.
How often we hear men say
"I was never before so cold,"
"I was never so hot as I am today,"
And I feel that I'm growing old.
They say it was never so dry,
Then say it was never so wet,
That the thermometer never ran so high,
But the fact is people forget.
If the early bird catches the worm,
What a fool the worm must be
To start out before it is morn,
When it's so dark we cannot see.
At every day you will find
George H. Richards wide awake,
With clothing to suit your mind,
The best that man can make.
Overcoats fine and rare,
Matched suits of every kind,
At Twenty-five Dock Street,
Rich Clothing you will find.

Poetry.

A GIRL'S FAITH.

No two leaves above us waving
Are quite alike in form and hue;
No two flowers in equal measure
Hold the blessing of the dew;
Nothing on earth is repeated,
All is special, all is new.
So of all the host of lovers,
Now and in the days to come,
Loving deeply, loving lightly,
Loving less, or loving more,
None have loved—I hold it certain—
Quiter as you and I before.
Hearts have beat, but not as ours did,
When this hope upon us broke;
All our former life mere dreaming,
Till to consciousness we woke,
In a world anew created
By a little word each spoke.
Not as ours? for that was needed
What belongs to us alone;
Just the years we two have counted,
Just the sorrows we have known,
Just your strength and just my weakness,
Level our love is all our own!

Farmers' Department.

ATTENTION TO HORSES.

The winter is a hard season for horses in this climate—particularly on working horses. There is a good deal of rain, and consequently mud. The working teams come in at night with their legs covered with mud. The humane teamster will see that their legs are carefully cleaned and rubbed—but how many men are not humane, and will let them stand all night without any such attention. The result will be the "grease," or "scratches" and other ailments. The horses will not thrive or look well. In addition to careful cleaning and grooming after the horse has come in from work a good warm bed of straw or some other material should be provided, which the horse greatly relishes. How cruel to make a horse lie down on the cold, hard plank or earth, and perhaps in his own filth, if not in the mud besides.

Good food should always be provided, particularly for the working teams. Sweet, bright hay—timothy to-day, clover to-morrow, making a change—with bright oats, and an occasional ear of corn. Great regularity should be practised in feeding. The horse knows to a minute when his feed should be given, and it should always be given at regular hours. The same regularity should also be regarded in watering horses.

Drivers of horses should see that every part of the harness fits properly—that it is kept soft and pliable, so as to have no sore shoulders, backs or sides. It is inhuman to work horses and make them bear their burdens on the raw flesh—yet how often it is done.

Good, warm, well ventilated stables, with plenty of light, are essential to the health and welfare of the horse.—Rural World.

IMPROVED HITTING POST.

The Scientific American says there has been recently patented a neat, handy, and tasty iron hitting post for horses, designed to prevent them from breaking halters, and to give free play to their heads, while, at the same time, they are prevented from entangling their fore feet with the strap, etc. The ring to which the halter strap is tied is attached to the end of a chain, which chain is attached to a ball or weight in the hollow of the post. A pull on the strap hoists the weight a short distance, and when the strain is lessened, the weight takes up the slack again, and so keeps the strap drawn tight within certain limits.

A correspondent of the American Agriculturist dissents from the now common advice to kill pigs at eight and nine months old. He says if there is profit in keeping a pig nine months while he is making his frame, there must be more profit in keeping him a second nine months, when you have nothing to do but lay the flesh and fat on.

Anecdotes.

Why don't you give us a little Greek and Latin occasionally?" asked a country deacon of a new minister.
"Why," do you understand these languages?" was asked.
"No, but we pay for the best and we ought to have it."

A child while walking through an art gallery with her mother, was attracted by a statue of Minerva.
"Who is that?" said she.
"My child, that is Minerva, the goddess of wisdom?"
"Why didn't they make her husband, too?"
"Because she had none, my child!"
"That was because she was wise, wasn't it mamma?" was the artless reply.

"Bones," said a wag to a milkman, "you ought to roof them cows of yours."
"What for?" asked the other.
"To keep the water from running into the milk," replied the wag.

"Are these pictures which you brought home from Europe all landscapes?" said an artist to Mrs. Shoddy one day.
"Lord bless you, no," replied the indignant lady, "them's the paintings."

The most useful
Cooking Utensil Ever Invented!
AMERICAN BROILER!
(Patented July 21, 1868, and Oct. 19, 1869.)
Operates upon the essential natural principles for broiling meats to perfection; prevents the escape of nutriment by evaporation, and retains all the rich juices and delicate flavor—which are usually lost in all other Broilers, or by the process of frying.
Broils in less than half the time required by any other, and cooks the meat perfectly uniform, leaving no burned or raw spots.
Does away with all smoke and smell of grease; requires no preparation of fire; and makes broiling, heretofore so vexatious, the quickest and easiest, as it is the healthiest, of all modes of cooking meats.
Broils equally well over coal or wood; answers for broiled steaks or roasts of any kind; and is equally good for BASTARDS, CHICKENS, HAM, CORN, FISH, AND OYSTERS.

Removal.
In consequence of the great increase in my business, I have removed to the more spacious and elegant rooms, No. 234 Washington Street, where I have for sale the "Waver" Grand Square and Upright Pianos; also the celebrated United States Pianos, which in the judgment of many, stand unrivalled, together with the Matt Pianos, having the patent united double-sounding board. The above-mentioned instruments are now acknowledged by the first musical talent and voices of the press of the United States, to be the best manufactured in this country.

Miscellany.

THE HUSBAND OUTWITTED.

A week at the watering place, and most of the time each day spent in the company of Mr. Mainwell, the gentleman whom Miss Ellsworth's old friend, Ned Whittaker, had introduced to her one morning on the piazza. She had sailed with him along the shore on the moonlight evenings, and she had danced with him in the thronged drawing-rooms.

Miss Ellsworth was not a flirt, who distributed her ideal among many gentlemen, and she had found her ideal well nigh realized in Mr. Mainwell. Only the evening before their talk had withdrawn itself from the general topics to which each had been congenial, and in her admiration of his intelligence and manliness, she had encouraged an approach to that personal sort of conversation which relates to love and matrimony.

And now to find Mr. Mainwell this morning engaged in mending a lock!

His back was toward her as she approached leaning on the arm of her friend, Anna West. She recognized him, looked intently at him, gave her companion over to a party of young ladies near, and then stopped and spoke to him.

"Do you like that sort of work, Mr. Mainwell?"

"I do, Miss Ellsworth. I believe I am a natural mechanic."

"It appears very odd to see you doing this."

"It is my trade," he replied, rising from his work and turning to her.

Her cheek blushed a little. "Your trade!" she said faintly.

"Yes, trade, Miss Ellsworth. The proprietor said the lock needed mending, and I told him I could mend it for him."

The party of girls came along just then. After wondering at Mr. Mainwell awhile, and laughing at him they proposed a ride.

There were three carriages for them all. These would take the party.

Ned Whittaker here joined them.

"What the deuce are you about here?" he exclaimed to Mr. Mainwell. "Ah!" he added when the latter turned and glanced at him. "But while you are here you might as well enjoy yourself."

Mr. Mainwell excused himself from joining the party, and they all went away, leaving him to finish his work.

Miss Ellsworth left him without any word at parting.

"It is well," he muttered to himself. "If she cannot take me as I am, she is not worthy of me. The woman that marries me must take me for myself."

He stood and looked after her until she had disappeared. She did not once turn to look back.

He avoided her thereafter. He did not seek to catch her eye for a bow of recognition. When she entered a drawing-room where he was, he would go out another way. But he was more than ever in the company of Ned Whittaker.

Ned, in passing to and fro between Miss Ellsworth and him, served as a sort of a link between them.

"You are a cynical fellow," said Ned one day. "Why don't you take people as they are? You will find good enough in them."

"But they won't take me as I am. This is the trouble."

"Poh. You see yourself that she allowed no other suitors to accompany her. Don't you see she is alone or with other girls most of the time?"

"Her heart is full of vanity."

"Pshaw. She is trained to luxurious notions, that is all."

Mainwell's trunk was awaiting the stage, outside on the piazza, at the time this conversation was going on. On the trunk were his initials, G. M. Miss Ellsworth, passing that way, saw the initials—not by chance for she had been very busy scrutinizing the trunks that lay together in a pile—and when she saw the initials she started and turned pale.

She recovered herself, and withdrew with her companion a little way, and then stood still and watched. Presently Mr. Mainwell came out with Ned upon the piazza. He chanced to turn his eyes toward her, and their eyes met—met for the first time since she had left him while at work upon the lock. She bowed. He lifted his hat. The ice was broken. He approached her to bid her good-by.

What the conversation was that ensued

between the two when they were left alone by means of Ned's ingenuity in spiriting away the rest of the company, is unknown, save the following:

"But I am a locksmith," said Mr. Mainwell.

"No matter."

"Are you willing to live as the wife of one who with his hands earns his daily bread?"

"I am willing to undergo anything to be with you. I have suffered enough. During these last few days I have learnt what it is to despair of being united to the one I love."

"Would you be willing to become my wife this day, this hour? Your father and mother might otherwise put obstacles in our way."

"I am willing—this hour, this minute."

"They do not know my position in life."

"They still think you are wealthy, as I did."

"Come, then, we will go our way with Ned, and become before the world what we are now in spirit, husband and wife; and then we will take the cars for the home I have for you—a home which, though lowly, will make you happy."

"Whither you go I will go."

"They were married in a quiet way in the little watering place chapel, with the wicked Ned conniving at the mischief. The next train sped with them to the city."

"I will show you the shop where I work," said Mr. Mainwell, when the carriage they had taken at the depot had drawn up before one of a long block of brown stone houses in a splendid part of the city.

"What do you mean?" she demanded, as she accompanied her husband up the broad steps to the door.

"I mean," he replied, "that this is the home and this is the workshop."

And he led her in. Among other rooms to which he conducted his wife was one fitted up as a workshop, where, as he said, he was accustomed to indulge his love for mechanical work, after having, as he assured her, regularly served his time at learning a trade.

Mrs. Mainwell stood and looked at him innocently.

"This is your house?" she said.

"Yes, madam."

"And you are not poor, but rich?"

"You speak the truth, Mrs. Mainwell."

"And why, pray, did you play this just upon me?"

"To see whether you really loved me for my own sake."

So there was a little family quarrel on the spot.

"Now invite your father and mother to come and see us," said Mr. Mainwell, after the clouds had cleared away somewhat.

"I will," she replied, "I will." But first you must go with me to see them, and to pacify them, in view of what we have done."

"A very well."

In a few days they started out in a carriage on their errand. Mrs. Mainwell gave the directions to the driver, and her husband could not help expressing his wonder at the increasing splendor of the neighborhood through which they rode. The carriage drew up at length before a miserly looking house and stopped.

"Where the deuce are you taking me?" asked Mainwell, looking sharply at his wife.

"Come and see," was her reply, as she proceeded to step from the carriage. Follow me."

She led him up stairs—here she opened a door without knocking, and the two entered. The woman was dressed neatly, and so were the children, but they were all dressed very poorly, in keeping with the place. The man was clad more carelessly, and even more poorly. On his head he kept his hat, which was certainly full half a dozen years old.

"My husband, Mr. Mainwell; my father and mother, brothers and sisters," said Mrs. Mainwell, introducing all parties.

Mr. Mainwell stood and stared without speaking.

"Ask their pardon, George," said Mrs. Mainwell, "for running away with me."

"Who are they?"

"Have I not told you? didn't I introduce you?"

"Who were they I saw at the watering place?"

"Some wealthy people who had seen me at the milliner's where I served for a livelihood—served at my trade, George—and who fancied my appearance, dressed me up, and took me there with them."

"You jest with me," he said with a ghastly smile.

"Do I? do I, indeed? These people seem to recognize me as a daughter, and a sister."

"You are too cultured, too tasteful, too fine featured!"

"You have deceived me," he said, "but come—you are my wife—I will try and bear it."

"Now I begin to think that you do love me," she said, smiling in her tears. "You do love me? You really think you do, George?"

He clasped her more tightly to him.

"Come then," she said, "though of such parents as these, poor as they are, I should not feel ashamed—yet they are not my parents, but have only played a part in which I have instructed them. Shake hands with them, George, they are worthy people."

And he did shake hands with them, and what more, he helped them.

A merry party was gathered that evening at Mainwell's house, a party consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Mainwell, and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth, the young lady acquaintances of the watering place, and Ned Whittaker. Ned was never in better spirits nor let it be stated, were Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth, who forgave their daughter and her husband without the least hesitation.

"I say, George," said Ned Whittaker, whispering in Mainwell's ear, "two can play at that game, can't they?"

"Yes," said he, after a few moments of thoughtfulness, and the experience has taught me a lesson. What fools the pride of wealth makes of us all. I thought she ought to have me regardless of my circumstances, for myself alone and without even hesitation. And yet when she tested me, I myself was found wanting. Shall we ever learn to disregard a person's occupation, and to look only at the character and soul?"

Ned shrugged his shoulders dubiously.

"I think I have learned the lesson," Mainwell added.

COMMERCE OF MILWAUKEE. The receipts of wheat at this port for the year foot up to the enormous sum of 19,060,891 bushels, the largest amount ever received from first hands in this city, and larger than that of any other city in the world. The receipts at Chicago aggregate 17,857,575 bushels, or 1,703,417 bushels less than those of Milwaukee. Our shipments of wheat for the year amounted to 16,027,771 bushels, while those of Chicago were but 15,673,718 bushels. The receipts of flour at this port for the year were 763,615 barrels, which reduced to wheat would give 3,818,075 bushels, making our total receipts of wheat for the year 22,879,066 bushels. Our shipments of flour for the year were 1,225,340 barrels. Reducing flour to wheat our shipments for the year would aggregate 22,154,471 bushels. These figures are certainly very flattering to those who are interested in the progress of Milwaukee, and are a pretty sure indication of the steady growth of its commerce.—Evening Wisconsin.

It would be as well to let our readers know that the penalty for any person opening a letter not addressed to himself, varies from a fine not exceeding $500, to imprisonment for ten years. (Sec. 309, laws, 1866.) One-half the pecuniary penalty should be for the use of the informer, (Sec. 318, laws 1866.) The complaint should be made before a United States Judge or Commissioner, if possible; if not possible, then before a Justice of the Peace. (Sec. 485.)

A Pittsburg stone cutter was directed to put his employer's "imprint" at the foot of a big monument. To the boss's horror he "sculpted" it in huge letters directly under the scroll inscribed "Sacred to the memory of."

WAITING SHIPMENT. A section of the "Original Big Tree" of Calaveras county, California, is now in Boston waiting shipment to Europe for exhibition. The tree from which this section is taken was cut in 1853, five men working twenty-five days in felling it. The stump smoothed off now easily accommodates thirty-two dancers, with musicians, at four sets of cotillions. Theatrical performances have been given on it, and in 1858 a newspaper, "The Big Tree Bulletin," was printed in a house built upon its surface.

Bridgeport has a new excitement. A tombstone in the city cemetery, covering the remains of a boy who was thrown down stairs by a woman and killed, several years ago, is now constantly overcast by a shadow, supposed to be that of this woman. It is said that hundreds have witnessed the phenomenon and vouch for its truth.

Twenty-eight steamboats have been built at Cincinnati within the last twelve months.

Old Sayings.

How often we hear men say "I was never so hot as I am now, and I feel that I'm growing old." They say it was never so dry. Then say it was never so dry. That the thermometer never ran so high. But the fact is people forget. If the early bird catches the worm. What a fool the worm must be. To start out before it is warm. When it's so dark we cannot see. At early dawn you will find George H. Richards wide awake. The best that man can make. Overalls fine and rare. Matched suits of every kind. At Twenty-five Dock Square. Rich Clothing you will find.

Copartnership Notice.

THIS is to certify, that the undersigned have, pursuant to the provisions of the Statutes of the State of Massachusetts, formed a limited partnership, under the name and firm of John E. Stoddard and Alex. Torrey, the individuals described in, and who executed the above certificate, and that the general nature of the business to be transacted is the manufacture and sale of Boots and Shoes, and that John E. Stoddard is the general partner and Alex. Torrey is the special partner, and that the Alex. Torrey hath contributed the sum of five thousand dollars, as capital towards the common stock, and that he is to terminate on the thirty-first day of December eighteen hundred and seventy-five. Both of said parties reside in Weymouth in Norfolk County, and said business is to be carried on in said town.

Dated this thirty-first day of December eighteen hundred and seventy.

JOHN E. STODDARD, ALEXIS TORREY.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

County of Norfolk, ss.

On the second day of January eighteen hundred and seventy-one, before me came John E. Stoddard and Alex. Torrey, the individuals described in, and who executed the above certificate, and several acknowledged, that they executed the same.

E. S. BEAL, Justice of the Peace.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

County of Norfolk, ss.

John E. Stoddard the general partner named in the above certificate, being duly sworn, doth depose, and say, that the certificate specified in said certificate to have been contributed by the special partner to the common stock has been actually received in cash.

Welcome the Washing Day!

SOMETHING ENTIRELY NEW!

Washing reduced to a Science

by using the

CHAMPION

Wash Boiler!

Patented by C. W. HERMAN. Mar. 30, 1869.

A few among the many advantages this Boiler has over other devices for Washing are:

1st. It dissolves the dirt and cleanses the garments by forcing hot water through them.

2d. There is no wear while undergoing this process.

3d. It produces a better and more thorough washing than any other device yet invented for washing.

4th. It washes the whole garments at once.

5th. It does your washing easier, and less than one-half the time usually required.

6th. It saves money, for it saves soap, time and clothes.

7th. Six cents worth of soap is sufficient, with this Boiler to do a large washing.

8th. It takes less fuel, less muscle, and when done you are not half so tired, and consequently better natured, for your Washing is better done.

THE LANGUAGE OF A REGENERATED SOUL.

Dear Lord I pray I may be
O'er my sins and after thee,
So that when my morning dawns are o'er
Thy comforts may be evermore;
O then alone I'll trust for grace,
Nor seek another hiding place,
Yes, when I can say my God is mine,
O when I can feel thy glories shine,
Up to thy throne my soul I'll lift,
No works of mine deserve this gift;
O gracious God 'tis thy free grace!
May comfort shower from thy right hand
E'er I pass through this banister land,
Now and then dear Lord bestow
Some drops from Heaven on me below.
Cheer my poor soul it clings to thee,
Hast thou not said come unto me,
Ere I pass through this banister land,
Now and then dear Lord bestow
Some drops from Heaven on me below.
Cheer my poor soul it clings to thee,
Hast thou not said come unto me,
Ere I pass through this banister land,
Now and then dear Lord bestow
Some drops from Heaven on me below.

The most useful
Cooking Utensil Ever Invented!

AMERICAN

(Patented July 21, 1868, and Oct. 19, 1869.)
Operates upon the essential natural principles for broiling meats to perfection; prevents the escape of nutriment by evaporation, and retains all
the rich juices and delicate flavor—which are mostly lost in all other Broilers, or by the process of roasting.

Broils in less than half the time required by any other, and cooks the meat perfectly uniform,
leaving no burned or raw spots.
Does away with all smoke and smell of grease;
requires no preparation of fire; and makes broil-ing, heretofore so vexatious, the quickest and easiest, as it is the healthiest, of all modes of cooking meats.

Broils equally well over coal or wood; answers
for all sized stoves or open hearths; and is equally good for broiling STEAK, CHICKEN, HAM, CORN, FISH, and OYSTERS.

Welcome the Washing Day!

SOMETHING ENTIRELY NEW!

Washing reduced to a Science
by using the

CHAMPION

Wash Boiler!

Patented by C. W. HERMAN, Mar. 30, 1869.

A few among the many advantages this Boiler has over other devices for Washing
are:

1st. It dissolves the dirt and cleanses the garments by forcing hot water through them.

2d. There is no wear while undergoing this
process.

3d. It produces a better and more thorough action than any other device yet invented for
washing.

4th. It washes the whole garments at once.

5th. It will do your washing easier, and less than one-half the time usually required.

6th. It saves money, for it saves soap, time
and clothes.

7th. Six cents worth of soap is sufficient, with this Boiler to wash a large washing.

8th. It takes less fuel, less muscle, and when done
is not so hot or sore, and consequently better suited, for your Washing is better done.

Poetry.

THE HOUSEKEEPER'S TRAGEDY.

One day, as I wandered, I heard a complaining,
And saw a poor woman, the picture of gloom;
She gazed at the mud on her door-step (twas raining).

And this was her tale, as she wailed her broom.

"Oh! life is a toil, and love is a trouble,
And beauty will fade, and riches will flee,
And pleasures they dwindle, and prices they double.

And nothing is what I could wish it to be.

"There's too much of worryment goes to a bonnet;
There's too much of ironing goes to a shirt;
There's nothing that pays for the time you waste
on it.

There's nothing that lasts us but trouble and dirt.

"In March it is mud; it's a slush in December;
The midsummer breeze aches and whistles;
In Fall, the leaves litter; in muggy September
The wall-paper rots and the candlesticks rust.

"There are worms in the cherries, and slugs in
the roses,
And ants in the sugar, and mice in the pies;
The rubbish of spiders no mortal apposes,
And ravaging roaches, and disgusting flies.

"It's sweeping at six, and it's dusting at seven;
It's vacuuming at eight, and it's dusting at nine;
It's potting and primping from ten to eleven;
We scarce break our fast ere we're planning to dine.

With grease and with grim, from corner to center,
Forever at war, and forever alert,
No rest for a day, lest the enemy enter.

I spend my whole time in a struggle with dirt.

"Last night, in my dream, I was stationed forever
On a little bare isle in the midst of the sea;
My one chance of life was a compass under foot.

To sweep off the waves ere they swept off my head!

"Alas! 'twas a dream—again I behold it!
Lying I am helpless, my fate to avert;
She rolled down her sleeves; her apron she folded;
Then lay down and died, and was buried in dirt.

SNOW-FLAKE CAKE. Half a cup of butter, two cups of sugar, four of flour,
one of sweet milk, three eggs, well beaten, one tablespoonful cream of tartar, half
a teaspoonful of soda—or if you use prepared flour, use no soda or cream tartar.
Bake the cake in shallow jelly cake pans;
while baking, grate two fresh coconuts carefully, and spread over each cake, as
it comes from the oven, a thin frosting,
and then sprinkle thickly with the grated
nut. Three layers of cake make one cake.
This receipt will make two loaves.

"Hold it!" In Iowa a merchant sent a dunning letter to a man, who replied by return mail:—"You say you are holding my note yet. That is all right—perfectly right. Just keep holding on to it, and if you find your hands
slipping, spit on them and try it again.
Yours affectionately."

A lady, who has been reading the law, is in the most fearful and agonizing doubts about the legality of her marriage condition. She says: "lotteries are illegal, and marriage is the greatest lottery
in life."

FULLY PREPARED. A western Cornelia thus maternally addressed her eldest jewel:—"My daughter, you are now
fifteen years old, engaged to be married, and without a freckle on your face. I have done my duty."

"Did you know," said a cunning Gentile to a Jew, "that they hang Jews
and jackasses together in Portland?"

"Indeed!" retorted Solomon, den it ish vell dat you and I ish not dere."

People who go much into society
soon find that it sharpens the intellect, awakens the conversational powers, and
arouses a real spirit of observation.

A real estate agent informs the public that he has "a beautiful cottage for sale, containing ten rooms and eight acres of land."

A physician boasting at a dinner
that he had cured his own hams, one of the guests remarked: "Doctor, I would rather be your ham than your patient."

A Western engineer has invented
a hot water pump to squirt deaf men off
the track.

A young lady, upon one occasion,
requested her lover to define love.

"Well Mary," said he, "it is to me an inward impressibility and an outward al-
o-verishness."

"The good are taken first" does not apply at photograph establishments or barber shops. Each must take his or her turn, good or wicked.

A little four-year old had been intently watching the process of corn-popping on a stormy day in the beginning of winter; happening to turn to the window,
she observed for the first time the falling snow. Amazed and delighted, she ran to her father and exclaimed, "O papa! do look at the funny rain! It's all popped out white!" Can any older head describe snow more graphically?

Miscellany.

THE UNEXPECTED RIVAL.

Brightly glowed the fire in the polished
grate, and brilliantly flashed the light through crimsoned curtained windows,
throwing a rich glow upon the snow covered pavement without; speaking to the weary-hearted toil-worn children of poverty, passing by to their cheerless
homes, of warmth and comfort and blessing which might never be theirs.

Within that curtained room, where naught seemed wanting of beauty or luxury, a young girl stood behind the drapery, gazing out into the stormy night, and tapping her little foot impatiently on the floor, while an expression of angry discontent shadowed a face perfect in outline and coloring, marring sadly
its otherwise exquisite loveliness.

The snow fell thick and fast, and but few pedestrians were abroad; none but those who were compelled by necessity to brave the chilling blast and blinding storm.

Suddenly, with a gesture of vexation
and disappointment, she pushed away the fields of crimson, and advanced to the fire-side, exclaiming—

"It is provoking, intolerably provoking.
Here I have been watching for that girl one hour. What does she mean by this delay. I shall be raging if I am disappointed of my dress this evening of all others."

"Why, surely, Ella, you are not going out in this tempest?" said a noble-looking silver-haired man, who entered the room
just in time to catch her words.

"Indeed, but I am, Gaudy. Dr.
Hunter is coming for me to go to Mrs.
Eriston's ball, and I would not miss it for the world. I am determined to crown my reign as belle of the season by bringing him to my feet if possible, before another day dawns. He is the best match in the city, and I mean to secure him at once. The girls are crazy about him, and I long to triumph over them."

"You speak confidently," said Mr.
Revere, "so I shall expect to wake up in the small hours of the morning with tidings of your success."

Turn we now to another home, the abode of poverty, where Mary Grey, the young seamstress, is bending over her work, a richly embroidered dress, whose bellies of the valley, with richly tinted blue-bells, are artificially wrought in graceful patterns on a ground work of white silk. It is the dress for which the beautiful heiress is waiting—the dress in which she expects to captivate the best match in the city.

Very lovely is Mary Grey, though no
rose-bud that blooms on the pure white
of her complexion—very lovely, though her glorious eyes, shaded by long silken lashes, are dimmed with watching and tears. Her fingers fly nimbly over her task nearly completed, the payment for which is to bring needed supplies to those who for two days have scarcely tasted
food—her invalid mother, and her little sister Lucy at her feet crying with hunger. The work is completed at last, and Mary, drawing the child fondly to her side, says soothingly,—

"Hush, darling! hush! sister is going to take home the dress and bring you a nice little feast. Twenty-five dollars we'll have for this; won't we be rich,
my pet?"

Tears filled her eyes, but she brushed them hastily away as a well-known rap
was heard, followed by the entrance of an elegant looking man, who holding out his hand to Mary, said pleasantly,—

"I am earlier than usual this evening,
but I am obliged to escort a lady to a ball at ten o'clock, and I thought I would look in on my patient before making my toilet."

"Mother is worse, I fear, doctor," she continued. "She seems quite exhausted
this evening."

"Has she had proper nourishment today?"

"Mamma has had nothing to eat to-day,
doctor," broke in Lucy, "and sister and I haven't had anything either but dry bread, and we are very hungry; but sister is going to get some money to-night."

"Hush, Lucy," said Mary, while a painful look of embarrassment fell upon her countenance. "Doctor, excuse her,
she talks too fast."

An anxious, inquiring gaze rested on her and in a voice trembling without emotion, the doctor exclaimed—

"Mary, it is indeed so?"

She bent her head in assent; but after a moment of silence, found voice to say.
"I shall have money to-night."

Giving but a glance at his patient, whose pale face spoke of suffering and want, even in sleep, he left hastily. And Mary, folding her work, and carefully
placing at her mother's side the medicine
she might need on waking, at the same time charging little Lucy to stay by her
in her absence, started out in the fierce storm to carry the dress to the heiress,
who sat chafing at her delay.

Mary's father had once been rich; but crushed by adversity, he died and left his family poor, and his wife an invalid.

Dr. Hunter had known them in their days of prosperity, and on his return from the continent, a month previous to our story, had sought them out and offered his services gratuitously—an offer gratefully accepted. He knew they were poor, but never until Lucy's revelation had dreamed of the extent of their poverty. Mary's loveliness had made a deep impression on his heart, and when he left them that night, it was with the resolve to shield her in the future, under his protecting love, from all life's cares.

It was indeed a fierce storm that Mary had to encounter on her way to Mr. Revere's splendid mansion, and her progress
was necessarily slow.

As, chilled by the stinging blast and blinded by the snow, she staggered up the steps of the handsome mansion, and rang the bell, a sleigh dashed up to the door, and when it was opened to the girl,
a gentleman alighted and ran lightly up passing in ere it was closed, saying to the servant,—

"I will wait for Miss Ella in the drawing-room."

Mary started; she knew the voice of Dr. Hunter, and not wishing to be recognized, drew her hood closely around her face.

"Poor girl!" said the doctor, "what a night for a woman to be abroad."

He little dreamed who he was playing Directed by the servant, Mary tapped
lightly at the door of the opposite room.

It was opened by Ella Raymond in a towering rage, her face distorted by passion.

"So you have come at last," she exclaimed, angrily; "two hours behind time. I did think, Mary Grey, you were poor enough to have that one virtue of punctuality."

"I am sorry I have disappointed you, Miss Raymond. I have sat up three nights until daybreak to complete it in time; but my mother has been very ill
and needed all my care, which must be my excuse."

Dr. Hunter, in the drawing-room, caught the silvery accents, and—forgive
him, reader—listened.

"What is your mother's sickness to-me? You promised the dress at seven, and now it is nine. Your excuse is a poor one."

"Believe me, I regret it, but it was impossible for me to be earlier. You will oblige me, as I am in haste, if you will now pay me for it and let me go."

"Pay you, indeed. Not I. I'll punish you for your tardiness. I'll teach you to make promises and break them.
Just as many hours as you have kept me waiting for my dress so many days will I keep you out of your money."

"Oh, Miss Raymond, you will not, you cannot be so cruel. My mother is ill and needs nourishment; my little sister is starving; and I depend on this twenty-five dollars from you to supply their wants. I must have the money."

"Not from me," said Ella, with a taunting laugh, as she shut the door in her face, and turned into the room to admire the exquisite garment.

Faint from want of food, and crushed
by her disappointment, Mary left the abode of wealth, not knowing where to look for help in her trouble. On the pavement, still bright with the rich tint
from the crimson curtains, she slipped and fell insensible. Strong arms raised her tenderly, and lifted her into the furnished sleigh at the door, and swiftly sped
it homeward. Her fit of insensibility, produced by exhaustion and distress, was a long one, and when she awoke to consciousness, warmth and light were around her, while at the table, on which was spread a comfortable meal, sat little Lucy, eating to her heart's content.

The clock struck ten, and the doctor said with a fond glance at Mary,—

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

GEOLOGY. Mr. L. S. Richard has, through the liberality of the thinking portion of our citizens, succeeded in securing the services of Prof. Wm. Denton, to give our people an insight into the very interesting science of Geology. Mr. Richard, we learn, does not do this as the agent of any one, but desirous of introducing a greater knowledge of the sciences in Quincy he selects Prof. Denton from the many other prominent lecturers on Geology, with whom he is acquainted, as the most pleasing, clear and entertaining speaker before a popular audience that we have in New England.

ICE. We are pleased to inform our citizens that the dealers in ice in this place have finished their labors so far as harvesting a good crop, of that cool and refreshing article, so much desired in the heated season of the year. We learn that Mr. Prescott has cut a much larger quantity than usual, and never was it of a better quality; which, together with the large supply harvested by Mr. Eaton, will give the people of Quincy and vicinity all the ice they desire, even if the thermometer averages several degrees hotter than it was last season.

HOGS. There has been quite a number of very heavy hogs raised in this place the past season. Mr. Emerson Shaw had one killed last week, which weighed 608 pounds. Mr. Wm. Walker has one, it is said, much heavier. But the steelyards will tell the story when he is dressed ready for market.

THE LEVEE. Another of those annual festival, given by the Universalist Society in this place, was much enjoyed by quite a large party on Thursday evening. There was not such a jam as on many former occasions, still there was enough to have a good time. The entertainment was excellent, still, no doubt, all could see wherein it might have been somewhat improved. The long intervals between the tableaux were quite wearisome to those obliged to stand. A little attention to this subject would help nearly all the entertainments given by our townspeople. The music furnished by Mr. George Monk was of a high order and was spoken of with much praise.

COLD WEATHER. Last Sunday was the coldest day we have seen this season, if not for years. The glasses varied from eight to fifteen degrees below zero; many of them stood at twelve degrees below at sunrise. Jonathan French, Esq., the highly respected town treasurer of Braintree, informs us that his thermometer, an old and very reliable one, stood at ten below, which was the lowest he had ever seen it.

EVER DOING. Mr. Henry H. Faxon, who believes in doing all the good possible in this world, presented the Universalist Society, on Wednesday evening, with a check for fifty dollars to aid their Levee.

We notice by the Hingham Journal that the same gentleman, presented the Fort Hill Cemetery Fair held in that place last week, with a check for "quite a handsome sum."

RELIGIOUS. The course of religious lectures which was so unhappily interrupted a week or two ago, in Christ Church, will be resumed on Monday evening next. The Rev. Dr. Thrall of Haverhill, a gentleman who has gained an enviable reputation both as a clergyman and a legal adviser in Church law, will deliver the lecture.

The remainder of the series will be delivered on succeeding Monday evenings.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONCERT in the Orthodox Church, to-morrow evening if the weather is favorable. Dedication of the new Chapel postponed to Friday evening, the 17th inst.

JURORS. Messrs. Henry H. Faxon and John Jacobs have been drawn to serve as jurors, at the February Term of the Supreme Judicial Court for Norfolk County.

NEPONSET AND PORT NORFOLK. One hundred and forty eight vessels passed up through the draw of Neponset Bridge the past year, and two hundred and fifty-four arrived with cargoes at the wharves below.

ERRATUM. An error occurred in the article on the fourth page of last week's paper. The thirteenth line should read—
For I pass through this barren land.

LETTER FROM NEW HAMPSHIRE.

CANTERBURY, FEB. 8th, 1871.

To the Publisher of the Patriot.
It is some two years since I left your town, and have been as I might say a wanderer, and now that I am far from my former home, and have an opportunity, I thought I would give you a few details of my present location. I am comfortably settled down among the hills of New Hampshire, with a good cool breeze from the top of the Kearsage Mountain, the thermometer sometimes standing at from 23 to 28 below zero. We have had but little snow here yet but, to-night it is snowing fast and looks as if we might get quite a snow storm. The wells here which are 14 feet deep have been frozen over half an inch in depth; the farmers around here say they have never known it so cold before, their apples and potatoes have frozen in their cellars and cider has frozen solid in the barrels; but with all the cold weather it is very pleasant living up here, and I am enjoying it finely. I took rather a romantic excursion a cross the Merrimack river this morning on the ice which is three feet thick. I visited the Merrimack County Farm. Mr. Davis, who is the overseer, seems to be a very nice man, and showed me about the institution; there are about one hundred and twelve inmates. They all looked neat and comfortable and appear to be very well satisfied with their situation. The air this morning although not as cold as it has been for a week past, was clear, cool and invigorating, and gave me a good appetite for my dinner when I got home; and I think I felt altogether better for my ramble. I saw by your paper the PATRIOT, two of which I received from a friend two weeks since, that many of my former acquaintances from the West District, have passed away, gone to their long home in that better world, where we all hope to meet sooner or later. C. H. B.

For the Patriot.

Careless Driving and Narrow Escape.

As Dr. Stetson's horse and buggy with driver, (his man Friday) were returning from the Universalist Levee, having delivered their load, were run into by a pair of horses on the keen jump, totally demolishing the shafts, cross bar, &c., of carriage, and entirely kill the driver for the time being, and had it not have been for the timely assistance of the "Mayor of the Hollow," the result might have been disastrous. We would add, the Doctor wishes us to return his thanks to Mr. Gallagher and citizens generally for their kind assistance in saving both life and property. LOOKERS ON.

TAXES. We have received from George H. Locke, Esq., the efficient and popular Collector of Taxes in this place, for the year 1870, the following statement:—

Town Tax,	$47,525.00
State,	9,925.00
County,	4,375.21
Additional,	520.20
Tax on Bank Stock,	126.48

	$64,829.88
Cr.
Town order for discount on $56,872.46, collected on or before Sept. 15th, 1870,	$2,274.90
Town order for collecting,	259.31
Abatement,	325.75
Cash paid Treasurer,	61,969.92
	$64,829.88

In Florida they are revelling in wild violets and jasmamines, garden verbenas, phlox, etc. Blue and mocking birds also abound. In Havana the weather is hot and sultry.

DEATH FROM A SINGULAR CAUSE.—A little daughter of Mr. F. O. Rogers, died Saturday, at Hyde Park, from a rather curious cause. A few months ago she swallowed a cut glass button and soon after was taken quite sick. Physicians failed to relieve her, and a post-mortem examination showed that her death was from chronic irritation of the intestines, caused by the glass button she had swallowed.

OVER THREE DOLLARS A MINUTE.—On Friday of last week a bridal party entered a palace car in New Jersey and after being seated a short time, the bridegroom left the train for a few minutes, only to find on his return, that he had been left behind. In his desperation at being separated from his bride, he hurried to the Superintendent's office, and offered that gentleman $100 if he would enable him to overtake the train in which his better half was a passenger. He agreed to the proposal and ordered a special engine to follow. The anxious groom overtook his spouse at Rahway, after a ride of thirty minutes.

A hen killed at Belmont, a few days ago, was found to have fifteen dollars in gold in her gizzard.

MASQUERADE BALL.

Are you going to the ball? What are you going to wear? These and a hundred kindred questions have been asked over and over again by the lovers of Terpsichore during the last three weeks. Busy hands were shaping curious looking hats, bonnets, and innumerable articles of dress; busy feet were hurrying here and there, and eyes were dazzled by quantities of gilt and tinsel trimmings. At last all was ready, the day, the night arrived, and on Friday evening, the 3d of February took place at the Town Hall, the third Grand Masquerade and Fancy Dress Ball.

Being fortunate enough to secure seats on the platform, we early wended our way to the hall, and on arriving there were shown to our place by the gentlemanly usher in attendance. Here we found assembled quite a large company of the first people of our town, whose smiling faces gave sufficient proof that they were expecting a rich and novel entertainment. Soon after half-past seven the orchestra under the direction of Mr. George Monk began the programme, consisting of four selections, which were rendered in a superior manner.

It is pleasant to know that Mr. Monk has succeeded in placing his name amongst the list of first-class artists, and we bespeak for him a most successful career.

While the concert was in progress, the maskers were arriving and at a quarter past eight the grand procession wound its way from the Lyceum Room into the hall. What a sight! Two hundred ladies and gentlemen each arrayed in costumes after his or her own peculiar ideas or choice. There were Clowns, Harlequins, Dianas, Cavaliers, Princes, Pages, Sioux Boys, Boot Blacks, Monkeys, Bears and many original comic suits that caused rounds of laughter and applause. The march over sylvan circles were formed and while in progress a rag picker entered and took a seat in the centre of the hall, to sort over his stock in trade; suddenly he changed to a sprightly clown.

Many very comic suits were changed to neat and showy dresses, but we cannot begin to tell all the different features that we noticed, suffice it to say that there was enough to occupy our attention during the entire night; as it is impossible to do justice to such a scene by describing it, we shall attempt no further.

We appreciate the courage and skill of the person who so successfully managed the whole affair. The floor was nicely conducted by an experienced director and a corps of able assistants. Praise is due Mr. Marsh and lady for the very agreeable manner in which they attended to the wants of the maskers. In short everything tended to make it an evening of real enjoyment.

The supper at the Hancock House, was excellent, and towards three hundred partook from the loaded tables, with much enjoyment and satisfaction.

We give below the names of the costumes with initials of the wearers so far as we were able to obtain them:—

MOSWETUSE.

This beautiful eminence in the North part of Quincy, so well adapted for summer cottages and children's play ground, has been purchased and buildings erected thereon for the manufacture of Duxin an article of great explosive force, said to be fifteen times as powerful as common gunpowder. The inhabitants of Neponset on the other side of the river fell considerable damage in case of an explosion.

We think their fears were somewhat allayed by the following article in the "Neponset Spoke," a paper recently published by the Ladies of Neponset, and sold at a fair for the benefit of the Congregational Society of the Church of the Trinity.

A GIANT IN OUR MIDST.

That explosion at Worcester nearly broke the heart of the Commonwealth. It split to pieces three heavy cars, burst in the back of a great row of houses, broke every pane of glass within a thousand feet, snatched up tough iron rails and twisted them like straw, tore one poor man into undistinguishable fragments, hurt others far and near, and sent a palpable shudder through the country for eighteen miles around. It convinced us and all the world of the tremendous power of Duxin. And when Neponset people found that the agent of that awful tumult was manufactured just across our little river, in full view of our peaceful homes, it made the bravest of us look inquiringly.

But call upon Mr. Dittmar and he will dissipate your fears. He will tell you that the blunder which occasioned that blow-up, as the jury stated in the case, was the presence of two thousand explosives in the same car with the Duxin. It had not been for them the sleeping Titan would have travelled as quietly as a bag of sand. Nothing but a patent fuse can explode the thing. It is innoxious to electricity, or the most violent concussion. It burns, unless confined, like common wood. It is very difficult to start its fuse. The inventor will light it with a match, pound it with a hammer, smoke his cigar while working over it, and is going to build his house close beside his factory.

But when it does go off, then look out! It is fifteen times as powerful as black powder. Nitro-glycerine cannot hold a feather to it. It acts under water as well as above-board. It is called Duxin because it is composed of two materials, and also has two properties, sudden force and great expansiveness. Put a handful of it on the top of a solid boiler, cover it with a sod, then let the spark of lightning touch it, and in an instant the whole will be transmuted to a heap of pebbles. In Prussia, where it was invented two years ago, it has displaced all other blasting agents. It did prodigies in the historic mines of Saarbruck, and among the arilleries of Kiel. It is the favorite tool of the Shanley at Hoosac tunnel, and is cutting our harbor channels all along our coast. It can never be used to bombard Boston; of course not; but before many days it may hoist beleaguered Paris higher than her balloons have yet ascended.

Marriages.

In this town, on the 24th inst., by Rev. Geo. W. Skinner, Mr. George R. Wight to Miss Elizabeth A. Jones.
In Neponset, on the 7th inst., by Rev. R. H. Allen, Mr. Joseph A. Samson of Wollaston to Miss Harriet E. Goulding of Boston.

Quincy, Jan. 14. HENRY H. FAXON.

Indiana and Massachusetts are revising their divorce laws. The object of those engaged in the movement appears to be to make it more difficult to procure a release from the marriage bond. In Indiana, there is a determination to redeem the good name of the State from the reproach brought upon it through the facilities of easy divorce which have so long existed there.

OYSTERS. Twenty years ago South Norwalk, Ct., had oysters enough only to supply one family. There are now 1100 acres of ground in the harbor devoted to the cultivation of oysters in beds, and the same number of acres which supply the natural growth, making 2200 acres in all; and this vast area is located within a radius of from one to five miles from the city.

SEEING INTO THE MOON. Objects seventy-two feet long can be distinctly seen on the surface of the moon by the great telescopes of the Earl of Rosse and Lord Oxendon. According to Madler, however, it would require instruments ten times more powerful to distinguish a "man in the moon," providing such an object existed. Mechanical ingenuity ought surely to bridge that chasm.

THE AMERICAN ARTISAN. This is an excellent weekly Journal devoted to the interests of artisans and manufacturers, inventors and patentees. It is published weekly by Brown, Combs & Co., 189 Broadway, N. Y., for $2.00 per year. To the Honorable the Judge of the Probate Court in and for the County of Norfolk.

RESPECTFULLY represents Sarah C. Sanborn, widow, that she is desirous of adopting

ADA ELLEN BEASLEY,
a child of John Beasley, formerly of Boston in the County of Suffolk, mother dead, which said child was born in the City of Boston, State of Massachusetts, on the 15th day of April A. D. 1855. The said Ada Ellen Beasley has resided with your petitioner in said Quincy for over ten years last past, and still resides with her; mother dead before she came to live with your petitioner, deserted by her father soon after the birth of said child.

Wherefore I pray for leave to adopt said child, and that her name may be changed to that of Ida Ellen Sanborn.
Dated this Twenty-second day of December A. D. 1870.
SARAH C. SANBORN.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts,)
Norfolk, ss. Probate Court.

ON the foregoing petition, it is ordered, that the petitioner notify all persons interested to appear at a Probate Court to be holden at Quincy in and for said County of Norfolk, on the second Wednesday of March next, to wit, on the 22nd day of March, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted, by serving copies of this order, with a copy of said petition, and this order, seven days at least before said Wednesday, and if not, by the return of the same three consecutive weeks in the newspaper called the Quincy Patriot, printed at Quincy, in said County of Norfolk, the last day of which shall be at least one week before said Wednesday.
Witness GEORGE WHITE, E. quire, Judge of said Court, this eleventh day of January in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one.
Copy—Attest, J. H. COBB, Register.

Administrator's Notice.
NOTICE is hereby given, that the subscriber has been duly appointed Administrator of the Estate of ABIE M. NEWCOMB, late of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, deceased, and is hereby authorized to receive and pay all debts due to and by said deceased, and to sell all real and personal estate of said deceased, and to execute all powers of sale and conveyance in and about the same, and to do all other acts and things which may be required of him in and about the said estate.

All persons having claims against the estate of said deceased are hereby notified to present them for payment to the subscriber, on or before the 1st day of March next, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, Poetry.

ACROSTIC.

THE BEAUTIES OF TEMPERANCE.

Too little heeded, or forgot too soon,
Hail! Temperance, all hail! thou glorious boon.
Ever forward rushing, wing thy glorious flight,
Quick to the drunkard's home, proclaim delight.
Up to the Heavens thy feeble voice I'll raise
I in sweet triumphant song, thy claim to praise;
Nor is that all, for I'll proclaim thy worth,
Christian welcome the offspring of a heavenly birth.
Yea, as the will tho' not the gift power is mine,
Praises of thee to sing, in songs divine.
A hail! hail! bright Temperance thy cause I'll bless
Thy noble missions crowned with great success;
Rejoice, O parents, for thy children's sake give ear
I in glorious rapture will their spirits cheer,
Oward 'twill steer them to happiness and peace
To sing of Temperance and their soul's release.
Quincy, Mass. GEORGE JONES.

Farmers' Department.

COTTON-SEED MEAL.

The large crop of cotton, approaching very nearly to the largest crop ever raised before the war, very properly turns the attention of farmers to cotton-seed meal, as an article of provender. It was coming into favor ten years ago, and mills were established in several places in the North to decorate the seed, express the oil, and grind the cake into meal. The war stopped these mills, and for several years very little was heard of cotton-seed oil and cake. Attention is now turned to these articles with new interest, and both are likely to be manufactured much more largely at the South than at the North. We are glad to hear of cotton-seed oil mills in the great centre of the cotton trade. There are three at Vicksburg, which made, last year, 160,000 gallons of oil and 4,000 tons of cake. In New Orleans there are five mills, using up 28,000 tons of seed. There are also mills at Memphis and Mobile. Formerly, the planters dumped this seed into the nearest creek to get rid of it. In later years they turned it to use for manure, dropping it in the hill for corn and cotton, after a slight fermentation. It is now worth about ten dollars a ton at the gin. A ton of seed yields about 1,000 pounds of seed after the fiber and hull are stripped off, and this will give about 40 gallons of oil and 750 pounds of cake. The oil is used for various purposes in the arts, and the cake is ground up for cattle food, and sold at about forty dollars a ton. Large quantities of the cake are exported to England, where it is coming into competition with linseed cake. It only needs to be better known at the North as an article of provender to rival our grains and roots. Some are prejudiced against the cotton-seed meal from the use of the article as it was first prepared. The seed was pressed without removing the lint and shell, and these sometimes injured cattle. But now nearly all the seed is decorticated, and the meal is used with as much safety as linseed oil-meal or corn. Some animals manifest a decided aversion to it at first. This can be overcome by mixing it in small quantities with corn-meal or with roots at first, until they acquire a taste for it. The estimated value, in gold, put upon cotton-seed cake as a fertilizer by Professor Johnson, is $21.60. It loses very little of this value by feeding, and the best way of applying it is to pass it through the manger first. It is quite as valuable as linseed oil-cake for feeding, and worth a third more as a fertilizer.—American Agriculturist.

EARLY TOMATOES.

To have tomatoes early, plant a few seeds any time this month in the pots in which the plants are growing in the kitchen window. They will soon germinate and grow very rapidly, and when the plants are two inches high, set one of each in boxes two inches square, or very small flower pots, and give them the same attention the house plants get. As soon as all danger from frost is over, transfer the tomato plants, which will now be budded and perhaps covered with miniature fruit, to the south side of a high fence or sunny side of a building, into not over rich soil, and you will have ripe tomatoes on the 4th of July, if you don't miss it, and if past experience and a favorable season are worth anything.

Anecdotes.

A country deacon went home, one evening, and complained to his wife that he had been abused down at the store shamefully. One of the neighbors, he said, called him a liar. Her eyes flashed with indignation.
"Why didn't you tell him to prove it?" she exclaimed. "That's the very thing,—that's the trouble!" replied the husband; "that's just what I did do. I told him to prove it—and he did prove it."

"John," asked a physician's apprentice "did Mrs. Green get that medicine I ordered?" "I guess so," replied John, "for I saw crabs hanging to the door-knob this morning."

The most useful

Cooking Utensil Ever Invented!

AMERICAN

Operates upon the essential natural principles for broiling meats to perfection; prevents the escape of nutriment by evaporation, and retains all the rich juices and delicate flavor—which are mostly lost in all other Broilers, or by the process of frying.

Broils in less than half the time required by any other, and cooks the meat perfectly uniform, leaving no burned or raw spots.

Does away with all smoke and smell of grease; requires no preparation of fire; and makes broiling, heretofore so vexatious, the quickest and easiest, as it is the healthiest, of all modes of cooking meats.

Broils equally well over coal or wood; answers for all sized stoves or ranges; open or closed, and is equally good for STEAKS, CHICKENS, HAM, CORN, FISH, AND OYSTERS.

Welcome the Washing Day!
SOMETHING ENTIRELY NEW!
Washing reduced to a Science
by using the
CHAMPION
Wash Boiler!
Patented by C. W. HERMAN. Mar. 30, 1869.

A few among the many advantages this Boiler has over other devices for Washing are:
1st. It dissolves the dirt and cleanses the garments by forcing hot water through them.
2d. There is no wear while undergoing this
process.
3d. It produces a better and more thorough action than any other device yet invented for
washing.
4th. It washes the whole garments at once.
5th. It would do your washing easier, and less than one-half the time usually required.
6th. It saves money, for it saves soap, time
and clothes.
7th. Six cents worth of soap is sufficient, with
this Boiler to do a large washing.
8th. It takes less fuel, less muscle and when done
you are not half so tired, and consequently better natured, for your Washing is better done.

Poetry.
For the Patriot.
OLD AGE.

Oh who can tell how the aged feel,
Whose hands are wrinkled grown
And whose weary hearts could much reveal
Of the sorrows they have known.
For we know the world with change is rife,
We know that the years are cast—
'Mid turning ways in the round of life,
With things that cannot last.
Oh who can tell how the mother sighs
Deep in her inmost soul,
As sitting still while the day-hour flies,
She dreams of her life as a whole.
She sees again as of erst she saw,
On her cheek the rosy red,
And remembers well her childish awe,
When the evening prayer was said.
Thinks too of herself as the happy bride,
Or nearly three score years,
Of the children who came up by her side,
And of him she has lost, with tears.
Alone, all alone—her memory lingers
In the dearest friend she knows
'Tis only such may heed her plaint,
Or realize aught of her woes.

There are physical pains that throb all day,
And she knows no rest that can with her stay,
She is losing life like a game.
Then wonder not, nor dare complain
Of the wish that is like a child,
Remember that they ne'er can be young again.
Who again in youth spring-time smiled.
Your love and care is all you can give,
From the world and its wild unrest;
Then freely yield it while they live
Till their souls shall be more blest.
We shall feel the seal in the days to come,
Of age upon us grown,
We shall want them kind to us at home,
To others be kindness shown.

CREAM CAKE. One egg, one cup of sugar, one cup of milk, two and a half cups of flour, one cup of butter, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, one-half teaspoonful of soda.
CREAM TO GO WITH THE ABOVE.—
One pint of milk; let boil; four tablespoonfuls of sugar, one of flour, a lump of butter, size of a small egg; one egg, and let the mixture boil: when cool, flavor with lemon. Cut the loaves of cake in half, and lay the cream between, as for jelly cake.

People of nervous temperament,
or what is usually called fine sensibility
in their joys and sorrows are ever in extremes. In adversity their depression is too deep, because they have not forgotten
to sustain it with constancy and composure; in prosperity their elation rises too
high, because they have not moderation
to temper it with reflection and forethought.

If you see half a dozen faults in a hundred virtues to counterbalance them.

I love your family, and fear your faultless

a faultless woman, dread her as you would
a beautiful snake. The power of completely concealing the defects that she must have, is of itself a serious vice.

Miscellany.
OUTWITTED.

Mr. Miles Moreland, antiquary and astronomer, was a misanthrope as well as a savant, and from being crossed in love,
when in petticoats, had sored toward
the whole world, and only married Mrs.
Sophronisa Wise because she was the most singular relic he had ever discovered.
The fruit of this union was one child, as singularly lovely, genial, and free from oddities as if she had been one of the asteroids dropped on this mundane sphere.
Her mother doted on her; and when she died, just as Millicent was turning sixteen, was more human and less of a tribe than she had ever been in her life.

Miles had paid but little attention to his daughter while her mother lived,
devoting himself during her life to his books and discoveries with a selfishness
he mistook for science, and returning as soon as all was over to his study and observatory; but diverging so far from his old courses as to keep a strict watch
upon Millicent, whom he at once intended to enter upon his own course of life, and become a searcher of the skies and gatherer of antiquities. Poor Millicent detested everything that smacked of antiquity, and preferred a walk on Broadway to the most prominent cluster in the galaxy; had a very good idea of what a young girl's life ought to be, and was as pretty and lovable a girl as one would meet in a summer's day.

At least so thought Harry Goodwillie
the banker's son, and he must have had good reason to think so too; for he stopped
one morning as he was passing, and threw
a kiss at a certain window of the great,
gloomy, shut-up house, and went on looking very happy about it.

But Love is proverbially blind. Milly was copying extracts from an ancient volume of Shakespeare in her father's study, and he was sitting in her place by the window, watching for an ancient cup discovered in the ruins of Herculaneum which somebody had imposed on him, and he expected every moment.

So he caught the kiss, and was not so entirely fossilized as not to understand at once what it meant; and all the windows fronting on the street were at once barred
to sunlight or love-light.

"The girl shall not make a fool of herself if I can help it," said her father in soliloquy. "I shall devote her life to science, and if I can not discover the elixir of life, I may at least define new worlds. Love—marriage—nonsense!—
She shall become a female Galileo or Herschel."

Milly cried and pouted, and ended by being obedient. She went out only with her father, or an old dragon, who was nurse and housekeeper, and she never so much as caught a glimpse of Harry's shadow. They had not got far enough to warrant an exchange of letters; yet Milly thought there would be no more harm in his writing to her than throwing a kiss; but not a word came, and she nearly cried her eyes out, for she and Harry had been making love to each other for a year right under the eyes of father Moreland.

"He doesn't care for me," thought Milly, "or he would find some way to see me. Oh, dear, cruel Harry!"
That afternoon an old gentleman in a dilapidated brown suit, with a great pair
of horn spectacles on his nose, and plenty of snuff, strewn over his wrinkled, variegated features, made her father a visit, and the two held a long confab-
—When he was gone Mr. Moreland informed her that the old gentleman would spend every half-day with him to assist in his researches.

"He is a wonderful man—truly wonderful," said her father. "My knowledge is nothing compared to his—a walking encyclopedia of valuable information—
You will sit with us, Millicent, and try to store your mind from the wealth of his knowledge."

"Horrid old snuff," said Milly to herself; "he looks like a dried specimen of his own antiquities. I hope I shall get a moment to myself now there are two to teach me. It will be hard if I cannot outwit them in some way."

The next day saw old Mr. Cleveland
—for such was his name—seated in Mr.
Moreland's most capacious study chair,
while at a little distance Miss Milly was regarding him, in obstinate defiance of her father's command to be respectful,

for her contempt and dislike were plainly clear on her face.

"Who is that silly young woman?"
asked the antiquary, pointing a long
brown forefinger at Milly.

Even Mr. Moreland looked slightly disconcerted for a moment; but he answered, in an even tone, "That is my daughter Millicent."

"A very fair specimen," said the antiquary; "but light-headed, like the rest of her sex;" and he held a huge pinch of snuff between his thumb and finger, and regarded Milly as if she had been preserved and labeled.

"I hope my dear Mr. Cleveland, with your valuable assistance, to make a different girl of her. She is rather more studious than her sex in general; but she wants to give up all other thoughts
to centre forces in the cause of science."

"Hum! yes!" answered the savant, absently; "but our time is too valuable to fritter away on speculation;" and he unfolded several yards of yellow parchment, which smelled strongly of must.

Milly turned her back on Mr. Cleveland and went on with her abhorred studies,
when, if she could have had her own way,
she would have dragged her father into the garden, and played hide-and-seek with him, or pelted him lovingly with roses.

For a day or two the trio sat in the study, and worked out their separate difficulties. On the third morning Milly rebelled, and stood idly at the window of the room, tapping a melancholy measure on the glass. Her father had gone to his observatory, and old Mr. Cleveland was poring over some dry knowledge by himself. Milly forgot his presence so entirely that she sighed aloud, and unconsciously murmured "Harry."

"Darling, what is it?" said a voice at her elbow.

She turned in both joy and alarm, but saw only Mr. Cleveland. She knew then that she had been dreaming, and the sight of the old snuff-taker exasperated
her.

"I should think you might find a better study than observing silly girls," she said, tartly. "If you want papa, Mr.
Cleveland, he is at the top of the house."

"I want you," was the answer, in a voice that electrified Milly; and the next moment the brown wig lay at her feet,
and she could see the fair forehead and chestnut hair of Harry Goodwillie.

If ever there was an astonished girl
she was one. Harry had to kiss her twice before she knew what had happened.

"How did you make yourself so horrible?"
Harry laughed. "I have a friend on the stage," he said, "and I caught the trick from him, and loved me a careful. Did you think, Milly, I would give you up so easy?"

"But what will you do, now you are here? As soon as my father learns the truth we will be worse off than ever."

"But he won't know; leave that to me. And, now, darling, we can be happy in the knowledge that we are near each other."

At this moment a distant door slammed;
Harry replaced his wig and resumed his seat, while Milly took up a position with her back to the door, so that her father might not see the brightness on her face.

After that her studies were pursued with an earnestness that delighted her father, who pointed to her with pride,
and said:
"Millicent is a sensible girl; she will never break her heart for love for any man. I will prove to the world that the woman is capable of as great mental acquirement as man."

Mr. Cleveland took snuff, and was lost in thought; then he said, in a cracked, whetzy tone, "Give your daughter to me, Mr. Moreland, and let me perfect her education. It will be rather an encumbrance to me to have a wife; but think of the immortal benefit to science
such a union would determine."

But I am sure she has quite forgotten the affair now."

"Then I will press my suit," said Mr.
Cleveland, in his wheeziest voice; "for I want to hasten to Europe in time to witness the search for those new discoveries at Herculaneum. Let there be no pomp, no display about the affair—
At my time of life a man has gotten over such follies. Perhaps the girl herself may object; but she will look at reason, as your daughter should, Mr.
Moreland."

"I will see to that, my dear Sir," answered Mr. Moreland, confidently; and forthwith he went in search of Milly, who
of course made a scene, as he expected,
and finally came to terms, as he anticipated.

The wedding was not long deferred.
Mr. Cleveland was very anxious to go to Europe, and Mr. Moreland could see no reason why he should wait. Milly's trousseau was of the most primitive description, though her father settled the house and a considerable portion of money upon her; but he and Mr. Cleveland both objected to fallals; so the bridal party that stood one morning at the railings of Grace church might have belonged to a past century. Mr. Cleveland certainly resembled a centenarian
as he appeared in his brown suit; and probably that was why a small party of spectators near the door seemed convulsed with merriment at his appearance. A number of people had strayed into the church, perhaps from curiosity or sympathy; for the fame of Millicent's beauty,
her singular education and unusual marriage, had been well discussed. Even the dragon housekeeper, who had no more heart than a fossil, muttered something about "mighty queer doing," but whether in ban or benediction, it was hard to tell.

Mr. Moreland returned to his home,
and strange to say, missed Millicent and Mr. Cleveland so much that he could hardly see the stars for the mist in his eyes. Once too it crossed his mind that he might have done wrong in giving her to a man old enough to be her grandfather; but she had not seemed really like an unhappy wife. He did not recover his usual calm tone until he received a letter and a box of specimens
from Naples, where the couple were sojourning. Milly assured her father that she was perfectly happy, and spoke in terms of rapturous praise of her husband,
at which her father decided her to be more of an enigma than ever.

Six months there came a box with some antique pitchers and vases of real beauty and value, and two fine oil-paintings, one of Milly, the other of a very handsome young man, a friend of Mr.
Cleveland's who wrote that the pictures were to be hung in the best parlor as companion pieces. Mr. Moreland was so delighted with the antique vases that he forgot to wonder about the pictures.

At last the travellers were coming home. The house was aired and slightly renovated for the occasion, and Mr.
Moreland actually looked in the glass,
and noticed the gray hairs were more numerous since he last saw them; and out of compliment to Mr. Cleveland the minister who officiated at the marriage and his family were present. It was singular what a family he had. Besides himself and wife was another couple
about the same age with two grown up young ladies. Mr. Moreland made a silent resolve never to add "and family"
to an invitation again.

At last a carriage stopped at the door,
and Milly—bright, beaming, beautiful—
ran up and embraced her father, and shook hands with every-body present in the most agreeable manner, only with sundry mysterious shaking of the head that were reciprocated. She had become a splendid woman, and was elegantly and fashion-
ably attired.

Mr. Cleveland looked about as usual except that he wore a handsome suit of black; his face was as wrinkled and he stooped as much as ever. Mr. Moreland had once or twice looked at the handsome picture that hung by Milly's portrait,
and wondered if she loved her husband;
the same thought disturbed him for a moment as his son-in-law shuffled and wheezed into his presence. People are not always accountable for their thoughts.

The company seemed very merry at supper-time. They would all look at Mr.
Cleveland, and all laugh in the most absurd and unaccountable manner, while that gentleman would frown and take

At last Mr. Cleveland rose to his feet and proposed a toast. It was an unexpected proceeding, though there was good wine on the board. All eyes were fixed on him as he said, solemnly, "To the memory of the late Mr. Cleveland;
let us drink in silence, standing."
They drained their glasses, and turned again to Mr. Cleveland. But what a transformation! There stood in his place
a young and handsome man, with a flushed and merry face. A brown wig hung on the chair next him, in company with several yellow patches and a pair of spectacles.
"Harry Goodwillie!" shouted everybody, as if they hadn't known it before.
"What does this mean?" said Mr.
Moreland as soon as he could get breath
to speak.
"It means, Sir," said Harry, penitently,
"That I am the greatest hypocrite that ever lived, and have the dearest wife in the world. Oh, Mr. Moreland, call back the heart of your young days, and let it beat in sympathy with mine! Ask Milly
if I will not make you a good son-in-law,
and—and—I really am something of an antiquarian."

"You're an unmitigated scamp," responded Mr. Moreland; but he looked as if he didn't half mean it, and as everybody present put in a word just then he couldn't say any more.

The respectable old parties who accompanied the minister as his family were Harry's parents, who now got a chance to embrace him, and the young ladies were his sisters, and they hugged Milly to their heart's content and pronounced her a darling.

Well—
Live till to-morrow, will have passed away."
I wish you could see Moreland House now and the Goodwillie family, and Grandpa Moreland in his study, with the youngest rogue on his knee, playing with a cracked
antiquity, and another one asking him
if there is really a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, to which Grandpa
says, "Yes he has found it."

INDUSTRY.
Man must have occupation or be miserable. Toil is the price of sleep and appetite, of health and enjoyment. The very necessity which overcomes our natural sloth is a blessing. The whole world does not contain a briar or thorn
which Divine mercy could have spared.
We are happier with the sterility, which we can overcome by industry, than we could have been with spontaneous plenty and unbounded profusion. The body and the mind are improved by the toil
that fatigues them. The toil is a thousand times renewed by the pleasures
which it bestows. Its enjoyments are peculiar. No wealth can purchase them.
They flow only from the exertion which they repay.

HARMONY OF COLORS.
Many ladies with a small fortune larished on their dress, look dowdy and gawky; while others, with only a scanty
purse to fall back upon, outshine them
in every particular, because the harmony of colors was studied in the latter case, and disregarded in the former. Women should study, individually, the colors that are most becoming to them. The real secret of success in dress is to wear only those colors which harmonize with the hair,
eyes, complexion, and general appearance. It is not so much the style or texture of garment, as the colors. If only our American ladies would be more independent and select for themselves
whatever is most becoming, without regard for what is worn abroad, they would soon establish for themselves a reputation for taste in dress, which can never be attained by blindly following the fashion
set for them by the dames of the Europe.

BELIEVE THE BEST.
He who thinks better of his neighbors
than they deserve cannot be a bad man,
for the standard by which his judgement
is formed is the goodness of his own heart.
It is the base only who believe all men
base, or in other words, like themselves.
Few, however, are all evil. Even Nero did a good turn to somebody—for when Rome was rejoicing over his death, some loving hand covered his grave with flowers. Public men are seldom or never fairly judged, at least while living. However pure, they cannot escape calumny, however incorrect, they are sure to find eulogists. History may do them justice but they rarely get it while alive, either from friend or foe.

The Quincy Patriot.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

SALE OF REAL ESTATE. The farm of William Walker, in the north part of the town, has been purchased recently by parties from Boston, for the sum of $20,000. It is fine building land, and we learn it is the intention of the buyers to lay it out in house-lots. The sum paid is said to be much higher than it has been taxed, but for house-lots, there is no doubt but what it is worth all that has been asked.

Mr. John A. Packard has purchased the present week the Savil estate, on Edwards hill, for $1,500.

THIEVES. The Quincy station of the O. C. and Newport Railway in this place was broken into on Saturday night last, between eleven o'clock and eight the next morning, and some cents and a few other trifling things to the amount of two or three dollars was taken. The rogues worked hard for the small pay received.

FAREWELL OLD CHURCH. Last Sunday the Orthodox society, in this town, held their last meeting in their old Church. Unfortunately the day was very stormy, which prevented many from attending services. Rev. Mr. Hall delivered a very impressive and eloquent sermon, which was listened to, with marked attention by those who were brave enough to face the storm. To-morrow services will be held in the Chapel of the new Church, which was dedicated last evening.

McLellan is coming back to Quincy again. His trade in Maine was not so large as he had hoped, and his wife thinks there is no place like Quincy, so they have decided to return. He has leased the store formerly occupied by Mr. Chas. N. Ditson for a term of years. Mr. Higgins is making the necessary repairs and changes required for the new business.

The store formerly occupied by Mr. McLellan, having been leased by Mr. G. F. Wilson, and fitted in a fine manner, will make one of the best markets to be found in this town or vicinity. Mr. Wilson intends moving in the first of next week.

SLEIGHING. We have had an abundance of snow the past week, and many have enjoyed a sleigh-ride. Several large parties were at the Hancock House on Thursday and appeared to be enjoying themselves.

A TOLL BRIDGE PROPOSED. Among the petitions recently presented in the lower branch of the Legislature, was one from parties desiring to be incorporated for the purpose of building and maintaining a toll bridge across Neponset river, from a convenient point near Fort Norfolk or Commercial Point, to Squantum, in the north part of this town. The petition is signed by John F. Dodge, George H. Burnett, George Clark, Jr., F. B. Beaumont, F. W. Cox, C. H. Smith, I. P. Clark, H. N. Holbrook, and J. Smith. They desire a capital stock of $50,000, divisible into shares of $100 each.

Mr. Chas. C. Brackett has commenced building a cottage for Mr. John J. Kemp, on the new street recently laid out by Mr. Seth Spear, leading from Sea to Coddington street. It is to cost about $2000.

The net proceeds of the Universalist Levee, held at the Town Hall last week, were near two hundred dollars.

Mr. Elliott is having a very pleasant dancing school at Lombard's Hall. The tuition is very reasonable, giving a fine opportunity to old and young to become familiar in the movements of this fashionable amusement.

We will give our readers next week a report of the Trustees of the Woodward Fund. Owing to a rush of matter this week we are unable to find room.

THE NEW TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT. An official call for a Temperance Convention, to be held in Boston on Wednesday next, for the purpose of forming a State Temperance Society to act on exclusively moral and religious principles, has been issued. It is to be a Mass Convention, and every citizen who is willing to co-operate in the movement is invited to be present. This new movement is receiving the hearty indorsement of the press of the State, and it is hoped and believed that it foreshadows an extensive and practical temperance reform throughout the Commonwealth.

TOWN REPORT.

The annual report of the Town Officers, is now in the hands of the printers and will be ready for distribution in a few days. The Auditors having completed their arduous duties in the short space of nine days. From the printers' copy we make the following extracts, viz:—

RAILROADS AND LOW FARES.

On Thursday a hearing was had before the Railway Committee upon the petition of Josiah Quincy for special trains for the transportation of the working classes at cheap rates.

His bill required that these passengers should be accommodated in special or regular trains within fifteen miles of the city at twenty-five cents per week. No one was to be afforded this privilege unless evidence had been furnished that he or she was dependent upon their daily labor for a livelihood, and unless the person had a season-ticket for such special train. The corporation not to be held liable for damages in any case beyond $1000.

The railroad companies were fully represented by their officers and counsel. It was urged that the Legislature—that it was unconstitutional to extend privileges to special classes. It was said that the only practicable mode would be to prescribe as to certain special trains or class cars,—that second class cars would not be patronized—that the rates suggested would not pay the running expense.

Mr. Choate offered a bill as a substitute which was understood to meet the approval of the railroad interest, authorizing these corporations to make any special contracts, with persons or associations, in relation to special trains or communication rates. The discussion occupied several hours.

It was not suggested at the hearing, but we have thought that the end in view could be reached in the most practicable manner by the following act:—

Be it enacted, &c. The territory within a radius of ten miles of the City Hall, in Boston, shall for the purposes of this act be declared a metropolitan railroad district.

SEC. 2. The Mayor and Aldermen may by contract with any steam railroad regulate the transportation of way passengers within said District, fixing the times of running of trains, the fares, and exercises like powers within said District, as they now exercise within the city limits.

SEC. 3. The Mayor and Aldermen shall within said District have all the powers conferred by law upon steam railroad corporations, with the right to locate, construct and operate any railroads within said District, or to charter companies for said purposes.

SEC. 4. The rights of existing corporations shall not be impaired by the provisions of this act.

MASQUERADE SURPRISE PARTY. A pleasant and quite a numerous party of ladies and gentlemen, met at Revere Hall, on Wednesday evening, and arraying themselves in sheets and pillow-cases, proceeded to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin A. Cass. As they passed from the hall to the street, in their robes they bore a strong resemblance to a small detachment of millerites or strayed away ghosts. The evening was passed very pleasantly by those who participated in the pleasures of the occasion, and was enlivened by vocal and instrumental music, games and social chat, and the occasion was one of much pleasure to all present.

The Unitarian Society of Hyde Park last week purchased for $4300, a house and 10,000 feet of land, for the purpose of erecting a church thereon.—The building will be commenced next summer.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Publisher of the Patriot.

WAKEFIELD, FEB. 8, 1871.

Sunday morning, Feb. 6th, 7 o'clock, thermometer 16 degrees below zero. How is that for cold? Josh Billings, our authority, said we were to have a freeze, but didn't state how much of a one. We were therefore taken by surprise. How our feelings are swayed by interest.

While you are probably deploring such events, and the drafts it makes on your fill of anthracite, many here are rejoicing at it. It is their capital,—every drop in the thermometer, is a drop in their bucket. It increases the volume of ice, and is as good as a layer of greenbacks to them.

If you should ever visit this place, and come by the way of the Maine railroad, the first object that will attract your attention, after passing the Highlands which separates us from our neighbors on the sea shore, will be the princely mansion of Cyrus Wakefield, Esq., a millionaire, who, out of his abundant means, has so often shown himself the friend of the place of his adoption, that he became quite a favorite of the people, and in town meetings they voted to abandon the old organization of the town, and adopt a new, by altering its name from "South Reading, to that of Wakefield. Mr. W. was not insensible to the honor conferred, and generously offered to build them a new Town House, which was accepted, and the work commenced. It is now nearly completed, and will be dedicated on the 22d of this month. It is a huge pile of brick and mortar,—three stories in height,—the first floor is intended for public offices, spacious and convenient,—the second is the Hall, sixty feet square with a gallery encircling it, except at the west end, over the speaker's stand,—it is admirably adapted for public meetings of all kinds, and if closely packed, would hold, I should think, two thousand people. For architectural beauty, external and internal appearance and finish, we venture to say it cannot be equalled in the State, outside of Boston. Its estimated cost is about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, but this does not give tax-payers any uneasiness, for Cyrus will take the bill, as he has promised they shall have a Town House, with which they will be satisfied, let it cost what it may.

Wakefield, like most New England towns, owes its prosperity principally to its manufacturing,—which generally are in a flourishing condition. But what gives an unusual activity here at the present time, is the harvesting of ice. A Boston Company last year, built on the banks of Lake Quannapowitt, which lies in the centre of the town two extensive ice-houses, which are now being filled. It is a novel process and well worth seeing, as all the work is done on the most approved method. After the ice is cleared of snow or other incumbrances, it is worked off into cakes by a horse and plow with a saw-shaped shave, but is not cut deep enough to separate it; it is then sawed into large floes, and drifted down to the mouth of the canal, and up to the base of the elevator,—here it is separated into blocks of about 450 pounds, when iron grapples attached to an endless chain constantly in motion, operated by steam, takes it, lifts it out of its watery bed, and carries it up an inclined plane, either to the first, second or third stories, and then it is sent sliding to any part of the building,—(as there are two tracks, one for each of the buildings), directed by men, stationed at certain intervals. In this way, it is said, 5,000 tons have been housed in a single day, and that already there is under their immense roofs over 50,000 tons of clear, transparent ice, averaging 12 inches in thickness—some have been secured 18 inches.

Reading, which lies two miles north, does not do much in this business, except for home consumption, although they have abundant facilities, but they manufacture articles for its use on a large scale. I find that this letter, is becoming lengthy, but still I have said only about half what I intended, therefore I will stop here, and endeavor to furnish the rest for your next issue. M. M. T.

You can get the 3 o'clock edition of the Boston Herald, at Souther's. See advertisement.

New Tea Store. Messrs. Cobb, Bates & Yerxa, 510 Washington street, Boston, have opened a splendid new store for the sale of teas, flour and all kinds of groceries at extremely low prices. They will fill all orders sent them by mail promptly, and those ordering fifteen dollars worth will have their goods sent free of charge to any part of this town. Read their price list carefully and give them a call.

The comedy and farce performed at the Town Hall, by a Boston company on Saturday evening last, were well enjoyed by quite a large audience. Mr. Geo. E. Hayden did finely and received numerous applause.

Summary Intelligence.

The amount of ice that will be cut in the vicinity of Boston this season will not be much less than 200,000 tons, the largest crop by far for many years.

The ice in Virginia is said to be the best and thickest ever gathered in that State.

The new Congregational churches organized in the last three years have averaged about two a week.

Mr. Willard E. Boyden, of Sandwich, during the month of January, obtained from fifty pullets, four hundred and forty-five eggs.

A North Easton school teacher left two young pupils locked up in his school-room recently, and but for their alarmed parents making urgent inquiry for the missing children, about nine o'clock the same evening, the forgetful teacher would have left them there all night. The parents are highly indignant.

The largest shaft ever made at the Bridgewater Iron Works is now being forged. It will weigh when finished thirty-two tons, and is to cost $11,000.

Among the frauds of the assessment for opening Broadway, New York, is an award of $150 a square foot allowed by the commissioners for 20 feet of real estate owned by Tammany. At this rate a lot 25 by 100 feet in the vicinity would be worth $387,500.

A boot-maker in North Bridgewater last year lasted 15,025 pairs, an average, omitting holidays, of nearly 49 pairs a day.

There was recently an exhibition at Binghamton, New York, a turkey that turned its scales at fifty pounds.

The net revenue of the Post Office Department of Massachusetts for the present year is estimated at about $900,000.

The Dorchester high school is to have an instructor in German.

The Vermont Central Railroad Company consumes ninety-four thousand cords of wood annually.

The joint resolution to make "Decoration Day" a national holiday was adversely reported upon in the United States Senate last week.

The North Adams Chinamen are organizing a band which is to consist of two drums, a gong, a pair of symbols and a clarinet.

Philadelphia has two hundred and five factories devoted to the production of carpets.

The Boston Ice Company exhibited on State street, Monday, ice fifteen inches in thickness, and so clear that a business card could be read through it.

Helmhold, one of the most successful business men in New York, has spent, it is said, within a single year, half a million dollars for advertising.

WHERE TO TRADE WHEN IN BOSTON.

We hardly think that our readers need to be introduced to the well known store of Messrs. Cushman & Brooks, 37 and 39 Temple Place, when on a shopping expedition in Boston, for those who are in any way posted, know where to go to get good bargains, and receive polite attention from attendants. This firm are now offering special attractions, and as their stock is very large, and they intend making some alterations in their store, every article will be sold much under their regular prices. Do not forget the numbers, 37 and 39 Temple Place.

THE TREASURE.

There is a treasure all should have,
And yet but few possess;
It is not owned by any knave,
Some claim it ne'er the less.
It is worth more than glittering wealth,
More than the diamond mine;
It can't be bought nor gathered by stealth,
The wit and wealth combine.
And yet 'tis free for you or I,
If truly we desire;
And with sincerity will try,
The treasure to acquire.
What can this priceless treasure be
That yet so few obtain;
It is a conscience pure and free
From every guilty stain.
It will repay a lifetime's aims
And sacrifice to win;
To more than any outward fame—
The purity within.
It is the consoling balm,
To check misfortune's power;
It is the death-defying charm,
In life's last trial hour.
F. M. ADLINGTON.

Farmers' Department.

PREPARE YOUR HOT BEDS.

Hot beds should now be filled with fresh stable manure and seeds of tomatoes, early cabbage, celery, pepper, lettuce, egg plant, etc., sown, if you would have an early supply of these vegetables.
A pit should be dug about two feet deep, which should be filled with fresh manure, horse preferred, pressing it firmly and if it is dry, wet it all through slightly. Over this put three inches of good, rich, light loam or chip manure, finely sifted, and in three or four days hereafter sow seed, and water immediately. Put on your sash, and every warm, bright day, elevate it a little, and give your rapidly growing plants plenty of air. Beside, however, to put down the sash tight before sundown; and if a cold spell comes on, throw hay or straw, or old clothes over the sash until the weather moderates.

INVEST IN REAL ESTATE.

Although an investment in real estate may not at once prove lucrative or yield an immediate income to the purchaser, we have found, from many years' experience, all judicious investments made, either in farming lands or suburban property adjoining a growing and prosperous city, invariably result in a fine speculation, or at all events in one that is doubly sure for a good paying investment.
In the products of the soil all wealth has its origin. The industrious farmer must always have a market for his wares. What he has to sell are the absolute necessities of life, and he that does not produce them must obtain them of him who does.

The possession of real estate is a substantial capital. If one's title is good no thief can steal it; it needs no insurance policy to make it safe; nothing short of an earthquake can swallow it. A good farm or suburban garden, with rich soil, judiciously managed, whether its commercial gold value go up or down, is still the source of a good and comfortable living. Whatever else a man may possess, he cannot afford to do without real estate sufficient to make himself and family, if he has one, a good home.—Memphis R. E. Bulletin.

MILKING IN SILENCE.

At a Farmers' Club in West Cornwall, Conn., a farmer observed that no talking should be allowed while milking was going on. He said that he had discharged a man because he would interrupt the milking by talking, and in three days the increase of milk was equal to the man's weekly wages.

Inedotes.

"How many children have I?" asked a woman of a spirit-rapper.
"Four."
"And how many have I?" asked her husband.
"Two," was the astonishing reply.—Mistake somewhere.

A friend of ours, who lives in the country, has a bright little "four-year-old," Willie by name, who often says things that are quite amusing. The other day the mother, noticing that he was chasing the "male chicken," called to him—"Willie, Willie, why are you chasing the rooster?"
"I'm going to kill him," responded Master William.
"Why what has he done?" asked the mother.
"Why," said Willie, "he has not laid an egg this year!"

A singing-master, while teaching his pupils, was visited by a brother of the tuncful art. The visitor observed that the chorister pitched the tune vocally, and said—"Sir, do you use a pipe?"
"No, sir," said Semibreve, with admirable gravity, "I chew."

The most useful Cooking Utensil Ever Invented! AMERICAN BROILER!

(Patented July 21, 1868, and Oct. 19, 1869.)
Operates upon the essential natural principles for broiling meats to perfection; prevents the escape of nutrients by evaporation, and retains all the rich juices and delicate flavor—which are mostly lost in all other Broilers, or by the process of frying.
Broils in less than half the time required by any other, and cooks the meat perfectly uniform, leaving no burned or raw spots.
Does away with all smoke and smell of grease; requires no preparation of fire; and makes broiling, heretofore so vexatious, the quickest and easiest, as it is the healthiest, of all modes of cooking meats.
Broils equally well over coal or wood; answers for all stoves, ranges, or open fires, and is equally good for BEEFSTEAK, CHICKEN, HAM, CROIS, FISH, AND OTHERS.

A GREAT MEDICAL DISCOVERY Dr. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS

Hundreds of Thousands Bear testimony to their Wonderful Effects. WHAT ARE THEY?
FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, such as Indigestion, Nervousness, Headache, &c., and for all cases of Female Weakness, these Bitters have no equal. Send for a Circular.

THEY ARE NOT A FANCY DRINK, Made of Pure Honey, Whisky, Peppermint, and Refine Licorice, distilled, ripened and seasoned to please the taste, called "Tonic." "Appetizer." "Restorer." &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcohol, Stimulants. They are the GREAT TONIC, PURIFIER and LIFE-GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Restorer and invigorator of the system, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to direction and remain long unwell, provided the disease are not destroyed by mineral poisons or other means, and the vital organs would beyond the point of repair.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, Biliousness, Headache, and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by decomposition of the Digestive organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sore Throat, and Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bileous Attacks, Puffiness of the Face, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offspring of Dyspepsia. They invigorate the stomach and stimulate the hepatic liver and bowels, which result in a rapid and efficient circulation of the blood, and thus remove all impurities and impart new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Itch, Rheum, Blisters, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Ring Worms, Eruptions, Itch, Scour, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever nature or cause, are instantly driven up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One Bottle in such cases will remove the most inveterate eruptions of the skin.

Caution the Vitiated Blood whenever you find it impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins, cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the bowels free, and a cure will follow.

PIN, TAPE AND OTHER WORMS, having the system of many thousands of children annually consumed by them, and are a source of great suffering and distress. For full directions, read carefully the circulars around each bottle, printed in four languages—English, German, French and Spanish. J. WALKER, Proprietor, Dr. H. McDONALD, Druggists and General Agents, San Francisco, Cal.

SEWING MACHINES.

KEATING & SPEAR Agents for the Original

Howe Sewing Machine Improved.

Its points of excellence are simplicity of

construction; symmetry of form; beauty of finish; rapidity and stiffness in operation, ease

with which it can be managed; non-liability to

miss stitches, having a movable head, which can be readily adjusted close to the shuttle, when

using either the finest or coarsest needle; a shorter

and smaller needle, in proportion to the size of the thread, than used with any other machine;

the Lock Stitch, alike on both sides of the fabric;

economy of thread; strength and firmness with

which the seams are drawn together; roundness,

fullness; regularity and beauty of stitch; adapt-

ability to the widest range of work, sewing the

finest and coarsest fabrics, and using equally well

the finest and coarsest thread.

Parties about purchasing a Machine are invited to call at their store and see them in operation.

Each Machine is furnished with a Hammer, Fel-

For the Patriot.

THE WIFE.

Forsook thee! Never! Though the mark

Of Cain was stamped upon thy brow,

Though thy whole soul with guilt were dark;

Fear not that I will leave thee now.

No, underneath the fluttering stars

I found my life, my all to thee;

Not crime and sin can break the band—

"Thy death alone can set me free."

Thine, thine for better or for worse

Through joy and sorrow, bliss and pain,

Thy claims I hate which bring a curse,

But love and cleave to thee the same.

And who is left thee now but me?

The world looks on in pride and scorn,

Oh dark indeed thy way would be

With little hope of brightening morn.

Alone to tread the downward road,

Without one pitying hand to save,

No, dearest, I will share the load;

Our parting spot shall be the grave.

And when remorse is on thy breast,

And dark thy brow with inward pain,

Oh be it mine to tell of rest,

And lead thee to the path again.

To smooth the narrow way to peace,

To cheer thy life, my all to thee;

Bid the remorseful anguish cease,

And wipe away thy bitter tears.

Or if my pleading love is vain,

And deeper, blacker crimes ascend;

My breaking heart shall tell no tale,

But steadfast follow to the end.

When shadowy death shall break the chain

That binds us in a life-long spell,

Then only will I say—farewell!

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are We."

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY.

The twenty-second passed off very quietly in this place. The banks, public schools, and some of the stores were closed, but many of them were opened nearly the whole day. The bells on several churches were jingled, but not with much enthusiasm. In the evening, a musical entertainment was given at Wollaston Heights, by the Kingston Glee Club. At an early hour Union Chapel was crowded to its utmost capacity by an appreciative audience, mostly friends and members of the Sabbath School, for the benefit of which the Concert was given. The singing was varied in style and effect. The grave and humorous being most agreeably blended, and fully sustained the high reputation which this Glee Club enjoys. Two dialogues by members of the School, entitled the "Plagues of Help" and an "Original Poem by a Charcoal Man" were well performed and afforded an agreeable variety. The whole entertainment was chaste in its conception and execution, and was enjoyed by all present. The school is growing and prosperous, fifty-five being present last Sabbath. The subject for the concert to-morrow evening, is the ninth of the graces—"Temperance." All are invited.

TOWN MEETING. The annual March meeting will take place a week from next Monday. A warrant of prodigious length will be found in our columns. It contains thirty-five articles—nine more than any previous warrant ever issued in this place. It will require a pretty smart Moderator to finish the business in one day. The citizens at Wollaston wish the town to hire a room, furnish the same, and provide a teacher. We learn that this is only expected to be a temporary thing, as they intend to erect a large handsome School House, at their own expense soon, perhaps next season.

GEOLOGY. Prof. Denton is delivering a very interesting course of lectures at Revere Hall, on Geology. The opening or introductory lecture was delivered one week ago last night, to an appreciating audience, and was pronounced by all to be a very able, instructive and entertaining lecture. If the remaining discourses by the Professor are as good in proportion as the first, they will certainly surpass anything ever delivered on Geology in Quincy.

The lecturer appears to be perfectly familiar with his subject, and does not stand before an audience to read some facts gathered from some old works, but many of his statements are obtained from study, travels and experiments of his own, and at the same time are convincing.

Tickets to the remainder of the course are now offered for sixty-five cents, as will be seen by a notice in another column.

BRIEF LOCALS. The Auditors' Report is printed ready for distribution. The town debt has been decreased a little the past year.

The ice and snow melted very rapidly yesterday. There was plenty of water in the streets.

The annual parish meeting of the First Universalist Society will be held on Thursday evening next.

The old Orthodox Church is advertised at auction.

Miss Copeland has a large assortment of white trimmings, black alpaca, &c., which she is selling very cheap.

Republicans caucus next Saturday evening.

DEDICATION. The Chapel connected with the new Congregational Church was dedicated with interesting exercises last Friday evening. Rev. J. H. Means, of Dorchester, preached a very appropriate discourse upon the social and domestic functions of a Church, suggested in part by the social features of the several rooms which were designed expressly to meet the family wants of the Society. The Chapel was occupied for public worship last Sabbath and the two rooms connected by folding doors were well filled, morning and afternoon. The old church edifice is to be sold at auction, on Tuesday, March 7th, and the Society will continue to worship in the Chapel until the main audience room is completed. The seats are free to all.

The large hog owned by Mr. Walker was killed on Saturday last, but did not weigh as much as many had estimated. It fell short of 700 pounds.

The prisoners in the Dedham house of correction, turn out 300 pairs of ladies' boots a day. They are made for a firm in Lynn.

THE WOODWARD FUND.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

By a provision in the will of Dr. Eben Woodward, giving a portion of his property to the town of Quincy, the Selectmen, Town Clerk and Treasurer were appointed Trustees for the care and management of said fund.

PERSONAL ESTATE.

On the 18th of February and 16th of April, 1870, Frederick Hudson, Esq., surviving executor, paid to said Trustees in stocks and notes, at an estimate value of thirty thousand and eighty-four dollars and eighty-three cents, $30,084 83

I have received for the sale of land, rents and interest on stocks and notes, after the expenses for the repairs on building and fences were paid, the sum of eighty thousand, eight hundred and eighty-one dollars and twenty-three cents, 88,881 23

Making with the stocks, estimated as above, $88,966 06

Also, pews No. 12 and 114 in the First Parish Church, and pew No. 30 in the Universalist Church.

REAL ESTATE.

The "Daniel Greenleaf farm," (with the exception of the reserved part described in the will) now occupied by Peter Butler.

Land with dwelling house on Spear st.

Land with dwelling house at German town.

Land on the corner of Hancock and Greenleaf streets, now improved by P. Butler, as an offset to lots sold from the farm for building purposes.

A SEA VOYAGE. E. W. Souther, son of Mr. Edward B. Souther of this place, sailed from New York on Monday last, in the bark Littleton, for Port Elizabeth, Algoa bay, South Africa. Mr. James Sherburne, a native of this place, and a highly respected citizen, is captain of the vessel. The voyage would not occupy over three or four months, if the vessel returned immediately, but there is a probability that she will sail for California or some other distant port, and in that case it may be a year or more, before he arrives home again.

The Murray Sunday School Union will hold its monthly meeting in the Universalist Church next Sunday evening. Services at 6 1-2 o'clock. Address by various clergymen and Superintendents. Singing by choir and school.—All interested are invited.

PHOTOGRAPHIC. Mr. E. Chamberlain has taken the Photograph Rooms at Weymouth Landing, formerly occupied by L. W. Cook, as will be seen by his card in to-day's paper. An examination of Mr. C.'s specimens of work convinces us that the public can safely rely on his producing good pictures, and we hope that our townsmen will remember him when they require photos, and give him a call.—Weymouth Gazette.

NEW AND VALUABLE SEEDS GIVEN AWAY. We have received from N. P. Boyer & Co., of Parkersburg, Chester Co. Pa., samples of Imported Norway Oats, Alsike Clover and Chester County Mammoth Corn; they generously offer to send sample packages free to all Farmers who send stamps to pay postage. Messrs. N. P. Boyer & Co., are the largest Importers of Thoroughbred Stock and Choice Seeds in the United States, and as there is so much bogus Norway Oats and other Seeds being sold, they wish to give every Farmer in the country a chance to test their Genuine Seeds, free of charge.—We hope all our farmer friends will avail themselves of this generous offer.

THE LADY'S FRIEND. A charming country scene, "At the Mill," forms the steelplate in this number. The Colored Fashions are brilliant and stylish, and the woodcuts, giving a great variety of the latest fashions, must be invaluable to the ladies. A plate of costumes for girls and one for boys supply all that can be needed for children; and as patterns for each garment are supplied easily and cheaply, nothing could be more convenient. For sale at Souther's Periodical Store.

"FACE THE MUSIC."

To the Publisher of the Patriot.

It seems to me that "Science," in last week's Patriot, is very illogical as well as illiberal. Mr. Denton is, as every one must be aware by this time, abundantly able to defend himself against any attack, and maintain any position he takes; but I wish to say a word about the attempt of "Science" to slur Mr. D.'s lectures on geology, because he happens to entertain views on religious matters different from the Christian church. Is "Science" taking the same stand that the Romish church did in Galileo's time? If the church cannot harmonize science and revelation, it had better stand aloof. If it is going to butt against astronomy, geology, &c., so much the worse for the church. "Science" is terribly worried because Mr. Denton refuses to notice Mr. Sunderland's challenge. Mr. Sunderland, as I understand his position, believes in no hereafter; that this life is the end of all things. Mr. Denton believes in a future of progression and happiness where people will occupy just such a state and place as their lives here have fitted them for. Does "Science," in his zeal lest the church be overthrown, taking up the cudgel for Mr. Sunderland against Mr. Denton, recollect the story about "straining out a gnat, and swallowing a camel?"

We hear it reported that a staunch church member of town, on being upbraided by his pastor for attending these lectures, asked him if, provided he had a Chinese cook in his house, he would refuse to eat her bread because she was a heathen. We hope the bigoted minister profited by the remark. Why should we refuse to hear Mr. Denton on geology simply because he don't belong to our church?

Summary Intelligence.

Thirteen thousand nine hundred and forty-two feet of tunneling have been completed through the mountain at Hoosac, and eleven thousand and eighty-five feet remain to be dug through.

Eighteen hundred and fifty-six volumes were taken from the public library, Boston, on the twenty-eighth of last month; the largest number ever taken out in one day.

A. T. Stewart has sent five thousand barrels of flour to the starving French.

The organ in the Royal Albert Hall, London, is the largest and most powerful in the world, having 9000 pipes and 120 stops, inflated by two steam-engines, built by Messrs. Penn.

An eccentric citizen of St. Louis died recently and left in his will $1000 to a man who, ten years before, had run away with his wife. One of the last things he said was that he never forgot a favor.

Col. Thomas Lang, of Augusta, Me., sold his stallion Gen. Knox, for ten thousand dollars, the highest price ever paid for a horse in that State.

The following well-known words of Governor Andrew are to be inscribed upon his statue at the State House: "I know not what record of sin awaits me in the other world; but this I do know, that I never was so mean as to despise any man because he was poor, because he was ignorant, or because he was black."

CORRESPONDENCE.

WAKEFIELD, Feb. 20, 1871.

To the Publisher of the Patriot.

With your permission I will now continue the correspondence commenced in your last issue. In the first place let me say a few words of Messrs. S. Harnden & Son's factory, at Reading, which I visited recently. They turn out from four to five thousand refrigerators a year. The work is principally done by machinery, and they turn them out at a rapid rate.

At this establishment I saw a novel contrivance for medical purposes. It consisted of a little frame house, between four and five feet high, made air tight, with windows in the sides, a seat to sit on, and an india rubber tube inserted to breathe through. The patient enters, in a nude state I suppose, takes a seat, and the pump is applied, a vacuum produced, and the weight of the atmosphere from the system is removed. Its effect must be powerful. The gentleman who is having it made, is a prominent physician of Charlestown, guarantees in certain diseases a cure, or no pay.

In a late visit to the same village, I made a call on Mr. Samuel Brown and lady, at their new mansion. Probably many of your readers will recollect when he was employed by Messrs. Tirrell & Sons in their wheelwright shop, and when the war's clarion sounded, and the cry came for men, he stepped boldly forward as a volunteer, and with knapsack on his back, marched to the front, served his time faithfully, received an honorable discharge, and returned to his home bearing the scars of a veteran.

About five years since Mr. Brown came to Reading to establish himself in business. He did not bring much capital, but a determination to make a beginning, and to lay the foundation for an honest living. He took an old established stand, patronage flowed in upon him, and industry and frugality soon made a competency to meet a cherished desire of his heart, to provide himself with a home. He selected an eligible site, well stock with fruit trees, put up a neat, commodious tenement and barn. The location is pleasant, and taken all in all, is as cozy a retreat, as any one need desire. Mr. Brown met with a reverse in his business, about two months since. His shop was burnt out, and he had scarcely time to save his tools. His stock, wagons, sleighs and shop were entirely consumed. It was a total loss as he had no insurance. He now occupies a shop in the yard of Messrs. Harnden & Son, but intends to build in the Spring. With better facilities and accommodations, and with his energy and perseverance, there is no doubt of his success.

Deaths.

In this town, on the 20th inst., Daniel, son of Mr. Charles and Mrs. Catherine Lyons, aged 5 years.

On the 20th inst., at National Sailors' Home, Mr. James Scannell, aged 45 years.

In Waltham, on the 13th inst., of typhoid fever, Mrs. Mary Currier, aged 57 years and 3 months.

A loving mother and tender friend has passed away.

Who would not be like her,
Like her to die?
In peace with God
She yielded up her breath,
Only the faintest breathings of a sigh
She gave to death,
Then the freed spirit
Soured from earth away,
And rising heavenward
Entered perfect day.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

WALTHAM

WATCHES.

The extensive use of these watches for the last fifteen years by Railway Conductors, Engineers and Expressmen, the most exacting of watch-wearers, has thoroughly demonstrated the strength, steadiness, durability and accuracy of the Waltham Watch. To satisfy that class in all these respects, is to decide the question as to the real value of these time-keepers.

More than 800,000 of these watches are now speaking for themselves in the pockets of the people—a proof and a guarantee of their superiority over all others.

The superior organization and great extent of the Company's Works at Waltham, enables them to produce watches at a price which renders competition futile, and those who buy any other watch, merely pay from 25 to 30 per cent. more for their watches than is necessary.

These timepieces combine every improvement that a long experience has proved of real practical use. Having had the refusal of nearly every invention in watch-making originating in this country, or in Europe, only those were finally adopted which severe testing by the most skillful artisans in our works, and long use on the part of the public, demonstrated to be essential to correct and enduring time-keeping.

Among the many improvements we would particularly mention:

The invention and use of a centre pin for peck construction, to prevent damage to the train by the breakage of main-springs, is original with the American Watch Company, who, having had the refusal of all other contrivances, adopted Fogg's patent pin as being the best and faultless.

Hardened and tempered hair-springs, now universally admitted by Watchmakers to be the best, are used in all grades of Waltham Watches.

All Waltham Watches have dust-proof cases, protecting the movements from dirt, and lessening the necessity of the frequent cleaning necessary in other watches.

A new patent jewel wind, or keyless watch is already a decided success, and a great improvement on any stem-winding watch in the American market, and by far the cheapest watch of its quality now offered to the public. To those living in portions of the United States where watchmakers do not abound, watches with the above mentioned improvements which tend to ensure accuracy, cleanliness, durability and convenience, must prove invaluable.

The trademarks of the various styles made by the Company are as follows:

Mortgagee's Sale. REAL ESTATE.

PURSUANT to a power of sale contained in a Mortgage Deed, given by GEORGE C. ANGELO, to the Trustee Savings Bank, dated August 18, 1868, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Lib. 370, Fol. 168, will be sold at Public Auction, on the premises in Hyde Park, for default in, and breach of the conditions of said Mortgage, on TUESDAY, the twenty-first day of March next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, a parcel of land, situated in the town of Hyde Park, containing 300 square feet with a dwelling house and outbuildings, and described as follows:—Southwesterly by Fairmount Avenue, there measuring 681 feet, Northwesterly by the lot of said Pond Street 125 feet, with all the improvements thereon, being the premises described in said Mortgage with all benefit and equity of redemption of said Mortgage or his Assigns therein.

EDWARD PIERCE, Treasurer of said Bank. Feb. 18, 1871. 3w

To the Honorable the Judge of the Probate Court in and for the County of Norfolk: I, BENJAMIN C. SANBORN, do hereby certify, that she is desirous of adopting

ADA HELEN BEASLEY, a child of John Beasley formerly of Boston in the County of Suffolk, mother dead, which said child was born in the City of Boston, County of Massachusetts, on the 15th day of April A. D. 1855.

The said Ada Helen Beasley has resided with your petitioner in said Quincy for over ten years last past, and still resides with your petitioner, and before she came to live with your petitioner, deserted by her father soon after the birth of said Ada.

Wherefore I pray for leave to adopt said child, and that her name may be changed to that of Ada Helen Sanborn.

Dated this Twenty-second day of December A. D. 1870. SARAH C. SANBORN.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Probate Court. Norfolk, ss.

On the foregoing petition, it is ordered, that the petitioner notify all persons interested in said child, to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Quincy in and for said County of Norfolk, on the second Wednesday of March next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted, by serving them, if found in this State, with a copy of said petition, and with this order, seven days at least before said Wednesday, and if not, by publishing the same three successive weeks in the newspaper called the Quincy Patriot, printed at Quincy, in said County of Norfolk, the last publication to be at least one week before said Wednesday.

Witness George White, Judge of said Court, this eleventh day of January in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one.

Copy—Attest, Feb. 11. J. H. COBB, Register. 3w

Copartnership Notice. THIS is to certify, that the undersigned have, pursuant to the provisions of the Statutes of the State of Massachusetts, formed a limited partnership, under the name or firm of John E. Stoddard; that the general nature of the business to be transacted is the manufacture and sale of Boots and Shoes, and that John E. Stoddard is the general partner and Alexis Torrey is the special partner, and Alexis Torrey has contributed the sum of five thousand dollars, as capital towards the common stock, and that the partnership is to commence on the thirty-first day of December eighteen hundred and seventy-one, and is to terminate on the thirty-first day of December eighteen hundred and seventy-one. Both of said parties reside in Weymouth, County of Norfolk, and said business is to be carried on in said town.

Dated this thirty-first day of December eighteen hundred and seventy-one.

JOHN E. STODDARD, ALEXIS TORREY.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts. County of Norfolk, ss.

On the second day of January eighteen hundred and seventy-one, before me John E. Stoddard, and Alexis Torrey, the individuals subscribed in, and who executed the above certificate, and severally acknowledged that they executed the same.

E. S. BEALS, Justice of the Peace.

LITTLE AND BIG.

"The child is father to the man."—Wordsworth.

Excuse me for turning my nose up
At sight of this paradox wild:
I assert that no son ever grows up
A bit like his father the child.
Just observe what mamma, among others,
Declare of nine babies in ten,
They are "sweet, pretty things," cry the mothers
Well, where are the sweet pretty men?
Then the babes, as a rule, are "so clever,"
They notice whatever takes place.
Do they make men of intellect? Never;
At least, such is rarely the case.
I myself was a genius—a beauty—
Past rivalry many degrees—
Has my father's own son done his duty?
Just look at me now, if you please!

Farmers' Department.

WORK OF THE HOUR.

It is now a good time to top dress lawns or mowing lands. The weather will be sufficiently cold to prevent fermentation, and if the dressing freezes or
is covered with snow, there will be little, or no loss by evaporation. The melting snow or rain will wash out the enriching matters, and carry them down among the roots of the grasses, where they will be ready for use by the plants when the earth is warmed by the spring sun. This work can be done without injuring the surface by wheels or feet of the team, and will be out of the way when other duties
are urgent.

Some persons object to hauling out manure in the winter, because it must be unloaded by hand from a sled. This,
however, is one of the operations which the manure needs. It is so much done towards making it fine. If the heap is slightly covered with loam, after being overhauled in the spring, little or no loss will occur from evaporation. If the ground remains bare, the teaming can be done on the frozen ground easier than on the soft ground in the spring.

Grape Vines. Neglected vines should be pruned at once. Or it should be pos-sioned until after they are leaved out.

Scions may still be cut. Pack them in fresh sawdust; or, if put in a tight tin box, and kept in a cool place, they will keep in good condition until it is time to set them.

Grafting should be done only when the swelling of the buds shows that vegetation is starting. Scions may be cut and preserved in moss or sawdust.

Pruning is to be done before growth begins. In pruning neglected trees, the object should be to get an open and well-balanced head. Take care that a bad wound is not made by the falling of the limb when partly sawed off. Pare wounds smooth, and cover them with melted grafting wax or brown paint,
which may be tinted, to be less conspicuous.

Bird-houses. Prepare neat houses for martins, bluebirds, and wrens, to be put up about the house, fruityard and farm.
The occupants will pay good rent by destroying insects.

Greeley on Silk and Broom Corn Culture.

A Missouri farmer recently wrote to Horace Greeley to know if silk culture
could be made profitable in Missouri.
The veteran agriculturist of the Tribune thought it could. He said it would not necessitate some trouble and expense to import the silk-bearing sheep from the mountainous regions of Central Asia, but thought they could be easily domesticated in Missouri. He said he presumed the rearing of the silk-bearing sheep would become such an important branch of agricultural industry in Missouri in five years in favor of a protective tariff, and quadruple the present circulation of the Tribune.

The same farmer also inquires as to the probable profit of raising broom corn in this State. Mr. Greeley felt assured that it would be profitable, but advised his correspondent to raise the plain handled variety of brooms, inasmuch as they were a more hardy variety than those with red and blue rings around the handles.

Anecdotes.

Johnny, the minister's son, went to his father one morning, directly after family worship, saying: "Father, while you were praying I saw a man stealing grapes."
"Well, answered the good man, "if you had been praying too, you would not have seen him."

"Well, Pat, Jimmy didn't quite kill you with that brickbat, did he?"
"No, but I wish he had."
"What for?"
"So I could have seen him hung, the villain!"

"Here's a man fallen into this slough!"
exclaimed one laborer to another; "hurry,
for he's up to his ankles."
"If that's all, there's no hurry."
"Yes, there is, for he's fallen in head first!"

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON.

"If twenty or twice twenty years hence,

he shall have passed away, may it not be till his glad ear has caught the jubilee of the emancipated millions whom his life

has been given to save."—Wendell Phillips in 1855.

Mark! There's a cry—'that can it be?

It is—it is the inspiring voice,—

The triumph voice of Liberty.

That bids a Nation's heart rejoice.

'Tis the cry Emancipation,

Strikes upon his longing ear,

Gives his blood a new pulsation,

Bounding with a heart-felt cheer.

Long and patiently he waited,

Laboring with a lover's zeal;

Badgered, bullied, wronged, and hated,

For the Nation's heart could feel.

Greatly are his toils rewarded,

That his trials were severe,

By that glorious act recorded:

Slavery is

THE TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT.

To the Publisher of the Patriot.

QUINCY, Feb. 27, 1871.

I was pleased to find the first move (in what may be called the right direction) made last Sabbath evening in the Chapel of the new meeting house on behalf of the Temperance movement. It seems to say in answer to resolutions passed last Wednesday the 22d, at the Temperance Convention in Tremont Temple, we Quincy folks will not be behind, we will come into the field at once, and face the enemy of the Bible,—intemperance. As I do not hear or know of any temperance organization in this town, could not some of our christian friends make a start at once, and unfurl the banner, surely every right minded Christian must see the direful effect of intemperance in our midst, and such action should arouse them from their slumber and prompt them to take such steps as will elevate the down trodden victim, restore peace and comfort to the homes of the inebriates, drive out Satan and build up the church of God. I would just say that if there is any church in our midst, that would like to start a Temperance Society on the moral suasion and Bible principles, I will render every service I can to them without fee or reward. If they will open their pulpits for me I will preach a temperance sermon, and show them it is scriptural, and that sooner or later they must adopt it. If they will give me the use of their platform, I will show them by an oration that it is temporal, political, and essential for us. For the love of the cause I have labored in old England for seventeen years, and still feel a pleasure in being thus occupied; for, after all, whether we labor in the pulpit, or on the platform, or through the press, our inward feelings should be with reference to our fellow creatures. We have done only what we ought. I trust my feeble efforts to contribute weekly are acceptable to your readers.

I am yours, respectfully,

G. JONES,

Late of London, England.

"THAT LITTLE CHURCH AROUND THE CORNER." The latest popular song, written by Dexter Smith, music by C. A. White, (authors of "Put Me in My Little Bed") is published entire in the Folio for March. A beautiful, full-page portrait of Ole Bull, the great Violinist, is also given as a Supplement. The Music, alone, is worth ten times the cost of the Folio, which is only One Dollar a Year! Specimen copies of the Folio, containing one dollar's worth of music, are sent free to all applicants. Address White, Smith and Perry, Boston.

Marriages.

In this town, on the 28th ult., by the Rev. Dr. John H. Morrison, of Milton, Mr. John R. Graham to Miss Mary E. B. Penman.

Our young friends will please accept our thanks for their generous remembrance, and our best wishes for their future welfare. May their pathway through this mundane sphere, be one of unalloyed happiness. May the gentle bride, find in her new station, all that her young heart pictured of wedded bliss.

In Dorchester on the 21st ult., by Rev. Nathaniel Hall, Mr. Joseph R. Churchill to Miss Mary Cushing.

The most useful

Cooking Utensil Ever Invented!

AMERICAN

(Patented July 21, 1868, and Oct. 19, 1869.

Operates upon the essential natural principles for broiling meats to perfection; prevents the escape of nutriment by evaporation, and retains all the rich juices in the meat, which is the most perfect of all broilers, and by the process of frying.

Broils in less than half the time required by any other, and cooks the meat perfectly uniform, leaving no burned or raw spots.

Does away with all smoke and smell of grease; requires no preparation of fire; and makes broiling, heretofore so vexatious, the quickest and easiest, as it is the healthiest, of all modes of cooking meats.

Broils equally well over coal or wood; answers for all stoves or range openings; and is equally good for BEEFSTEAK, CHICKEN, HAM, CHOPS, STEAK AND OYSTERS.

MONEY.

Money borrowed is a foe
Vellied in kindly seeming;
Money wasted is a friend
Lost beyond redeeming.
Hoarded, it is like a guest
Who with anxious seeking,
Gives nothing for his board,
Save the care of keeping.
Spent in good, it leaves a joy
Twice its worth behind it;
And who thus has lost it here
Shall hereafter find it.

Farmers' Department.

THE WIFE FOR A YOUNG FARMER.

All seem to agree that farming cannot be carried on very profitably by a man who has to depend upon hired labor and hired supervision inside the house. Why not? "Because no ordinarily paid house-keeper, will look after the old and ends with sufficient economy." Then an extraordinary house-keeper, who does attend to all the little details that save expenses, and add to the profits of farming, should receive more than ordinary compensation, should she not? even though she goes by the name of "wife." But a wife, you say, "will do all that for love, and not for money." "Yes she will, indeed, for love." There is no telling how much a woman will do if she is sure of her husband's love, and if she loves in return.

But, my dear young farmer on the lookout for a suitable helpmeet, I want to whisper a few sisterly words in your ear. Don't marry just for the sake of getting a house-keeper. Do you not see that it is the worst kind of cheating to tell a young woman that you love her when you are really intending to make of her an unpaid upper servant? Not that I want you to pay your wife a servant's wages. It would be better to give her the rank of a partner in the concern. But a true marriage is not a mere business transaction. It is a love affair. True love is amenable to reason. When any person of the opposite sex attracts you, ask yourself what part of your nature is moved, and whether the influence you feel is elevating or lowering. Love is something more than mere sexual passion. It is more than mere fancy. It is a choice in which the heart and intellect are agreed.

With this definition of love in mind, I should say, instead of giving a catalogue of the peculiar virtues a farmer's wife should possess, marry the woman you love, if, after an intimate acquaintance, you both believe, on reasonable grounds, that you can be happy together.—American Agriculturist.

ASPARAGUS.

Who is without an asparagus bed? We have one which must have been in bearing for more than thirty years. We have cropped it for sixteen years, and it seems to grow better and better. It is about twenty feet square, and it yields a sufficient supply for our own and the families of two or three neighbors. We like the way it is prepared at home far better than any that we have ever eaten elsewhere. It is chopped short, and cooked in milk. It then has the tenderness of young peas. The long, white portion of the stalk is tough and useless. Cut it when from one to two inches above the ground. A bed of the size above described will afford abundance for a large family for three months. Put out a bed of it. It is equal to green peas, and much earlier.—Exchange.

Inedotes.

A darkey was boasting to a grocer of the cheapness of ten pounds of sugar he had bought at a rival shop.
"Let me weigh the package," said the grocer. The darkey assented, and it was two pounds short. The "colored gentleman," looked perplexed for a moment and then said:
"Guess he didn't cheat his chile much, for while he was gettin' de sugar, I stole two pair of shoes."

In Indianapolis a charming young lady physician was called to administer to a gentleman down with a fever.
"You need good nursing," said the lady.
"Nurse me for life," replied the patient.
"I will," was the soft answer.

In a storm Dr. McLeod and Dr. Watson were crossing a lake in the West Highlands with several passengers, when one said the two ministers should begin to pray.
"Na, na," said the beaman, "The little one may pray if he like, but the big one may take an oar."

"Here, Alfred, is an apple; divide it politely with your little sister."
Alfred handed the apple to the other sister, saying, "Here, sis, you divide it yourself."

SEWING MACHINES.
KEATING & SPEAR Agents for the Original
Howe Sewing Machine Improved.
Its points of excellence are simplicity of
construction; symmetry of form; beauty of finish; rapidity and stillness in operation, ease with which it can be managed; not inclining to miss stitches, having a moveable head, which can
be readily adjusted close to the shuttle, when
using either the finest or coarsest needle; a shorter
and smaller needle, in proportion to the size of the thread, than used with any other machine;
the Lock Stitch, alike on both sides of the fabric;
economy of thread; strength and firmness with
which the seams are drawn together; roundness;
silence; regularity in the action of stitch; adapt-
ability to the widest range of work, sewing the
finest and coarsest fabrics, and using equally well
the finest and coarsest grades of Silk, Cotton and Linen Thread.
Parties about purchasing a Machine are invited to call at their store and see them in operation.
Each Machine is furnished with a Hammer, Fel-

Poetry.
CONSOLATION.
And this is all! The end of life,
Of human care and love?
A narrow chamber roofed with clay,
And daisied turf above;
A simple stone, a legend short,
A name, a date, an age—
The sad story writ once more
On Nature's open page.
This is not all! The grave has holds
The worn-out plowman's rest;
The friend we love hath reached the home
Of endless peace and rest.
That city hath no need of sun
To gild its radiant air;
It stands "with glory wrapped around,"
Jerusalem the fair.
Yet this is all! A lonely home
Where light and love are fled,
And when man is filled with grief,
Dumb relics of the dead;
A vacant hearth, an empty house,
Where names we call in vain
Await some breath of pain.
This is not all! A work divine Awaits our willing hands.
White, close beside us, helping all,
The dear Redeemer stands.
Take up the toil, endure the cross;
So shall the precious past
Be linked through pleasant, peaceful hours,
To endless joy at last.
Thou knowest not all! Poor wounded one,
It is so hard to see,
Through clouds and mists, and tears of earth,
God's perfect ways with thee.
Only at last the mists shall clear,
The blinding tears shall fall,
And, seeing as ourselves are seen,
We'll bless the Lord for all.

HUSBAND. The derivation of this word is exceedingly beautiful. It is formed by the Saxon words hus and bond, meaning the bond of the house,
and we find it spelled house-bond in some editions of the English Bible made since the discovery of the art of printing. It is a pity that its etymology has ever been changed, embodying as it does the beautiful idea that the husband is or should be the bond which unites his whole house or family in unity and love, encircling them
all in his embrace as the object of his special and tenderest care.

It is a curious fact, say some etymologists, that it is only the female mosquito that torments us. An old bac-chelor says it is not at all "curious."

He that waits for repentance, waits
for that which cannot be had as long as it is waited for. It is absurd for a man to wait for that which he himself has to do.

Anger will come, but resist it stoutly.
A spark may set a house on fire. A fit of passion may give you cause to mourn all the days of your life.

Could we see things as God sees them we should not have a solitary wish
for a single alteration in our circumstances; we should say, "It is well."

God made both tears and laughter,
and both for kind purposes; for as laughter enables mirth and surprise to breathe freely, so tears enable sorrow to vent itself patiently. Tears hinder sorrow from becoming despair and madness; and laughter is one of the very privileges of reason, being confined to the human species.

Faith and works are as necessary
to our spiritual life as Christians, as soul
and body are to our life as men; for faith
is the soul of religion, and works, the body.

An indiscreet man confided a secret to another, and begged him not to repeat it. "It's all right," was the reply;
"I will be as close as you were."

"Mr. Smith," said a lawyer to a landlord, "if a man were to give you five hundred dollars to keep for him, and he died, what would you do? Would you pay for him?" "No sir," replied Mr.
Smith, "I'd pay for another like him."

SICKNESS. Sickness takes us aside and sets us alone with God. We are taken into His private chamber, and there He converses with us, face to face. The world is far off, our selfishness is gone,
and we are alone with God.

Miscellany.
FIFTEEN MINUTES TOO SOON.
The sun had almost left the eastern window of Mrs. Grey's kitchen, as she sat on a low seat, with a willow basket
on the floor beside her, patiently assorting a huge pile of carpets, rugs, and putting the pieces of red, yellow, blue and black, in separate heaps, ready to be tied up in bundles. On the floor sat the two-year-old baby, watching the proceedings
with great interest, and sometimes working away busily as mamma herself,
but whose tiny fingers were unfortunately more of a hindrance than a help. Over the fire the kettle and dinner-pot were boiling briskly, while from the oven a savory odor issued forth of the good things within.

As the forenoon waned, Mrs. Grey glanced anxiously at the clock, from time to time, but kept steadily at work,
overseeing the cooking of the dinner at the same time. A look of satisfaction rested on her countenance as the great
pile of rags gradually diminished in size,
and finally disappeared and the pieces of different colors were all ready to be tied up and put away.
"Just a quarter to twelve," she said
to herself. "I shall have time to put these away, set the table, and have dinner precisely at twelve."

This had been a busy forenoon with Mrs. Grey. She had risen earlier than usual, had performed her household duties
with more than usual dispatch, and by a good deal of close calculation had gained an hour for this work. As every moment counts when the work of a family is to be done by one pair of hands, she thought that a little extra effort in making a carpet would save a vast deal of time now
spent in scrubbing and cleaning, and then,
too, the room would look so much more tasteful and pleasant. So it was with much satisfaction that she looked upon her morning's work, as being the first step toward such a desirable end.

But just as she rose from her seat she looked out of the window and saw her husband coming up the path to the house.
"O, dear," said she, "Henry has come,
and dinner is not ready. What shall I
do?"

Now, to most wives the coming of the husband a few moments before dinner is not a matter of such fearful importance
as to cause a disarrangement of the whole household economy, but Mr. Grey always expected dinner to be ready at the moment of his coming, whether before or after the usual hour, and his wife, who was a timid woman, stood greatly in awe,
of her husband, and deemed it the most awful thing in the world in any way to cross his wishes and thus offend him.

So she hurried to the stove, lifted the heavy dinner-pots, somewhat changed
their places that they might boil faster,
and gave the fire a vigorous stirring,
which by the way, was all unnecessary, for
the fire was burning before just as brightly
as it could, and the dinner was already cooked; then hastily brushing the carpet-rugs all up together, she crammed into the basket, and rushed with it into the bed-room. Little Annie playfully caught hold of her dress as she passed, and her mother being in too great a hurry to notice her she was dragged along a step
and fell over backward, hitting her head against a chair.

Now followed a scene of confusion.—
Baby's loud screams mingled with the mother's exclamation of pity and regret,
as she vainly tried to soothe her, in the midst of it all, Mr. Grey came in, with a frown on his brow, and in a stern tone said, "What is all this? Why isn't dinner ready?"

"It is all ready, Henry; you shall have it just as soon as I can take it up. But see how Annie has hurt herself!"
"Never mind her; she'll soon get over crying. I am in a hurry. Seems to me I never have any meals when I want them."

"O, yes, Henry, sometimes you do for yesterday I waited a full hour for you; but it isn't quite twelve yet; I didn't expect you before twelve."

"The clock is too slow, I know," said
he going to it and moving the hands.
"There, now it is twelve."

Mrs. Grey made no reply, but resolutely putting Annie, who was still sobbing and crying, down in the chair,
removed the cheap napkins, and sell only
the heavier, non-explosive oils. Of course
this requires the charging of higher prices,
and the mass of people will contrive to

child again in her arms, sat down to pour out the coffee.
Mr. Grey's stern features relaxed a little as he looked over the table. Everything was just right, and had evidently been cooked with a view to pleasing his own particular appetite. The roast beef was juicy and tender, the potatoes white
and mealy, the fragrant coffee, light, spongy bread and golden butter could not well be improved, while his favorite apple-pudding had turned out a perfect success. A good dinner naturally puts one in good humor with one's self and the world generally; thus it was with Mr. Grey. He was disposed to be quite social and communicative and to chat about the little affairs that had taken place during the forenoon.

But not so with the weary wife. The consciousness that fear of her husband had caused her to undress in a moment the toilsome work of the last hour, the uncomfortable reflection that one idea was uppermost in all her domestic arrangements, and that idea the gratification of all his whims at the expense of every thing besides roused up rather at her rebellious feelings for the time, while the nervous excitement she had felt for the last half hour caused a violent headache, which disinclined her to talk much.

Henry, being unable to sustain the conversation alone, hastily finished his meal and hurried off to work thinking all
the way how dull and commonplace
Mary had become, and wondering what had changed the bright-eyed, light-hearted
girl he had wooed and won three years
before, into such a sober, morose woman.
Then he settled it in his mind that it was the way with all married people. Of course their cares would make them grave and sad. But just then his memory served to remind him of Mrs. Morris, an intimate friend of his wife, who was married about the same time they were.
She looked not a whit older or sadder than on her wedding-day, and seemed to enjoy life just as well as in her girlhood.

It was strange; did he not provide bountifully for his family? Was not their every need supplied? He could not understand why it was, and not being a very pleasant subject on which to reflect, he put it out of his mind.

Mrs. Grey still sat by the table with a weary, desponding look on her countenance that would pain you to witness.— The tide of angry feelings had rolled away, and now the poor tired heartached
for sympathy; for a word, a look of tenderness and love; and unbidden tears streamed down her cheeks. Long, long she sobbed, but gradually the intensity of her feelings wore away, and she became calmer. Then her woman's heart pleaded for her husband, and she said, "Henry is not so considerate as some, but he doesn't mean to be unkind," and she tried to forget self in the absorbing interest
in what she felt to be her life-work; but still the incident of the day, trifling
though it seemed, was helping with many others to steal the bloom from her cheek,
the lustre from her eye, and the joy from
her heart.

Alas! husband, it is not the great, heart-crushing sorrows that imbitter life so much as the little, selfish exactions, the petty unkindness, the thoughtless neglect;
and the "small, sweet courtesies" of life,
are far more potent in their power to smooth the roughness of the way, than all the wealth of the Indies unaccompanied
by them.

DANGEROUS LIGHT.
It was stated at a Coroner's inquest Dec.
15th that 99 1-2 per cent. of the petroleum oils used in this city are dangerous—in other words, that only one gallon in every two hundred, is safe! This is a startling announcement, but it was based on a careful scientific examination of a very large number of samples gathered at random from the various dealers. And this city is no worse off than the rest of the country. From an observation of a large number of newspapers (of which about 4000 are regularly received at this office) we estimate that there is an average of at least one death a day resulting from the use of poor petroleum oil or "kerosene." There is no need of this.
Good, properly rectified oils do not explode, or even take fire at ordinary temperatures. A few manufacturers remove the cheap naphthalis, and sell only
the heavier, non-explosive oils. Of course
this requires the charging of higher prices,
and the mass of people will contrive to purchase those mixtures which cost a few cents less per gallon, and just here lies the whole difficulty. People will buy low-priced gun-powder, whiskey, and petroleum, unless the strong arm of Government is interposed and the sale of dangerous articles is prohibited by severe penalties. The ignorant masses are not proper judges, and competent inspectors should be appointed as much for petroleum oil, as for steam-engines.—

We commend this subject to the earnest attention of the various legislatures usually assembling this month. A word more. These low-priced oils are not really cheap. The better oils give about as much more light as their prices are higher.—American Agriculturist.

Thirst Quenched Without Drinking.
It may not be generally known to our readers that water, even salt water, imbibed through the skin appears thirst almost as well as fresh water taken inwardly. In illustration of this subject, a correspondent has sent us the following abridged quotation from a "Narrative of Captain Kennedy's losing his Vessel, and his Distresses afterwards," which was noticed in "Dialley's Annual Register for 1769." "I cannot conclude without making mention of the great advantage I received from soaking my clothes twice a day in salt water, and putting them on without wringing. It was a considerable time before I could make
the people comply with this measure,
although from seeing the good effect produced, they afterwards practiced it twice a day of their own accord. To this discovery I may with justice attribute the preservation of my own life and six other persons, who must have perished if it had not been put in use. The hint was first communicated to me from the personal of a treatise written by Dr. Lind. The water absorbed through the pores of the skin
produced in every respect the same effect
as would have resulted from the moderate drinking of any liquid. The saline particles, however, which remained in our clothes became incrustrated by the heat of the sun and that of our own bodies, increasing our skins and being otherwise inconvenient; but we found that by washing out these particles, and frequently wetting
our clothes without wringing twice in the course of a day, the skin became well in a short time. After these operations we uniformly found that the violent drought went off, and the parched tongue was cured in a few minutes after bathing and washing our clothes; and at the same time we found ourselves as much refreshed as if we had received some actual nourishment. Four persons in the boat who drank salt water went delirious and died; but those who avoided this and followed the above practice experienced no such symptoms."

HUSBANDING THE PENNIES.
There are but few excuses for an impecunious old age in this country, where labor is so well remunerated, and where the avenues of employment are so numerous. However moderate it may be, there is no one who does not receive a sufficient income to lay aside a few pennies daily;
and if an individual begins to save only four and a half cents a day, at twenty-one,
the amount so saved, including interest,
will foot up to fifty-eight hundred dollars
when he is three score and ten. If, instead of spending twelve cents a day for a cigar, he lays them aside, he will have nearly fourteen thousand dollars at the end of the same time. How few people there are who could not save fifty-five cents a day without discommoding themselves in the least, and yet this sum would amount at the end of the time
specified to fifty-eight thousand dollars.—
There are thousands of men who daily
throw away double and treble this sum
over the seven thousand bars of New York city. There are a few who suddenly acquire wealth, but look around and select
those who have secured a competence,
and it will be found that they have done so
by husbanding the pennies which others
carelessly let slip through their fingers.
—Exchange.

A gentleman lying on his deathbed called his concubine, who had been an old servant, and said: "Ah, Tom I'm going a long and rugged journey—worse
than ever you drove me." "Oh, dear
sir," replied the fellow, "let not that discourage you; it is all down hill."

ANNUAL TOWN MEETING.

On Monday last, the annual March meeting occupied the attention of the voters of this place. The day was mild and a large assembly gathered in the Town Hall, to transact the business, and to exchange a social greeting with any relative or friend whom one might chance to meet. The amount of business to be acted upon was larger than usual, but under the guiding hand of John Q. Adams, Esq., who was chosen Moderator, it was all transacted in a very orderly and becoming manner; closing about eight o'clock in the evening. Most of the old board of officers were re-elected. Mr. Charles N. Ditton, a young and active man, of strictly temperate habits, was elected for the first time as one of the Selectmen. We now have as "Fathers of the town," three retired merchants, who have in former times supplied many families in this place with all the groceries that might be desired.

The following is a full report of the doings, for which we are indebted to our worthy and accommodating Town Clerk, Geo. L. Gill, Esq.

JOHN Q. ADAMS, Esq., was elected Moderator.

Voted, To vote for a Town Clerk, Town Treasurer, three Selectmen and Assessors, two School Committees for three years, one Surveyor of Highways and seven Constables on one ballot.

The Office of Henry H. Faxon, Esq.

At the Republican caucus held in the Lyceum Room, on Saturday evening last, Henry H. Faxon, Esq., made the town a liberal offer, which we are invited to insert in our columns. The meeting was organized by the choice of H. Farnam Smith, Esq., as Moderator, and Chas. H. Porter, Secretary; after which Mr. Faxon addressed his fellow townsmen as follows:—

MR. MODERATOR. I presume this caucus is called to nominate town officers and discuss matters of interest relative to the town. I now have a proposition which I wish to bring before the meeting. It was my intention to have had it appear in the columns of the QUINCY PATRIOT a week or ten days ago, and after I have read it to you, I will give you my reasons for not having it appear at that time.

He then read the proposition as follows:—

Wishing to promote the welfare of the town in which I reside, and in which I am largely interested, I make the following proposition, which can be accepted by the voters of Quincy if they think it for the interest of the inhabitants, viz:—

I will pay, for the ensuing year, the salaries of all the officers of the town, and for the services when they are not salaried officers, a sum not exceeding the former expenditures on that account, provided that a citizens' caucus irrespective of party or sect, a list of active temperance men are nominated for candidates, and said candidates shall be chosen at the annual March meeting.

If the voters of the town issue a call for a meeting to consider this proposition, I will endeavor to be there, and fully define my views on such questions as may properly come before the meeting.

Hoping my fellow citizens will consider this proposition at the earliest opportunity, I remain the obedient servant of my fellow townsmen. HENRY H. FAXON.

Quincy, Feb. 14th 1870.

Thinking that the management of our town affairs was not conducted by some of its officers as it ought to be, I wrote the proposition read to you, in order that I might obtain the sentiments of good citizens and see if some change could not be made whereby the business of the town could be taken from the hands of what may properly be termed "the Whiskey Ring." I asked the opinions of quite a number of men, but I found that they were very much afraid to touch on moral questions in connection with town officers. In other words, it was as in the case of Mr. Barker, who represented you in the Legislature a few years ago. After his nomination a gentleman pretending to be strictly temperate (much more so than I pretend to be) made some allusion to his nomination, and said to me, "Do not say anything about his (Mr. Barker) being a temperance man; if you do, we cannot elect him." Now, Mr. Moderator and gentlemen, if a man who has a few virtues happens to be nominated for office, and we have got to stifle the fact and keep the knowledge of those virtues which he possesses from the voters, in order to have him elected, I think, for one, it is time to have a change. If a person, in order to be a successful candidate for a town officer, or any other office, has got to take his whiskey every day, and treat his constituents, a radical change is necessary.

Finding that this sentiment prevailed to some extent, I withdrew the proposition after it had been in type at the office of the PATRIOT. Since I took the matter from the paper I have consulted other friends of reform who are largely interested in the welfare of the town, and they have urged me to introduce this proposition to you to-night, promising me their hearty support if I would do so.

Now what I propose to do is this:—That you can take the intervening time from now until it is time to call a caucus for the nomination of officers for another year to consider the matter. Then if you will sustain me as I have proposed, I shall be pleased to perform my part as set forth in the proposition.

If you sustain me, you will not only make about three thousand dollars, that I propose to give, but I am confident that three thousand more can be saved, thus making a saving to the town of fully six thousand dollars.

Trusting that you will show by your actions and by your votes on Monday that you have already begun to think of the benefit it will be to the town and to its inhabitants to elect a new class of officers in part, I will give way for others to express their views as they think proper.

After addresses commending the proposition of Mr. Faxon, by Messrs. L. W. Anderson, A. W. Sprague, Edwin W. Marsh, the meeting, without a dissenting voice, voted to accept the sentiments of the proposition.

CROWDED. Our columns are badly pressed this week, owing to the full report of the town meeting, on Monday last. Several communications and other items of interest we are obliged to omit. They will receive our earliest attention.

LECTURES. We are glad to learn that a course of popular lectures—five in number—will be given in this town the present season, of which fuller notice will be given next week. Among the names of lecturers secured are those of Rev. Mr. Thwing, our former townsman, Rev. Mr. Murray of Boston, and Rev. Henry Morgan of Boston, who will open the course in the Town Hall, on Monday evening, March 20th. Giving his celebrated lecture on "Fast Young Men," which he has repeated twenty-seven times in Boston, the last time in Music Hall to an audience of over 2000 persons. The names of lecturers thus far secured would seem to guarantee an able and valuable course.

Tickets for the course, at one dollar each, are now ready and can be procured at the stores of E. Clapp and J. O. Holden.

WEYMOUTH. At the annual town meeting, held on Monday last, the following named gentlemen were elected officers for the year ensuing:—

Town Clerk, Francis Ambler.
Selectmen, James Humphrey, Z. L. Bicknell, E. Atherton Hunt, John Blanchard, and Noah Vining.

Overseers of the Poor, James Humphrey, Z. L. Bicknell, E. Atherton Hunt, John Blanchard, and Noah Vining.

Assessors, Oran White, Wm. W. Raymond, and Elias Richards.

Town Treasurer, Elias Richards, School Committee, John W. Loud, and C. C. Tover.

Surveyors of Highways, Eliza Pratt, Jacob French, Simon W. Guttersen, Joseph Hawes, and Ezra Reed.

Constables, Wilmont Cleverly, Noble Morse, Benj. H. Everett, Horace M. Makepeace, Christopher T. Bailey, Geo. W. White, Jr., S. Madison Holbrook, Isaac N. Tirrell, Chas. C. Tinkham, J. B. Howe, James C. Wendell, and Andrew J. Garey.

WEATHER. It has been delightful spring weather for the past week. The wild geese have been flying, the birds have sung their morning songs, the robin has made his appearance, and the indications are that Spring is coming rapidly forward.

Messrs. Keating & Spear have just received a splendid assortment of house papers which our citizens will do well to examine before purchasing elsewhere. A better collection is seldom seen in this place.

SOLD. The old Orthodox Church and land was sold on Tuesday last for $3,700, to Mr. Thomas A. Whitcher. The carpets, stoves, pew, &c., brought over $100 more. The bell has been retained by the society. It will not however probably be placed on the new Church.

Poetry.

Cling to Those who Cling to You.

There are many friends of summer
Who are kind while flowers bloom;
But when the winter chills the blossoms,
They depart with the perfume.
On the broad highway of action,
Friends of worth are far and few;
So when one has proved the friendship
Cling to him who clings to you.

Do not harshly judge your neighbor,
Do not deem his life untrue,
If he make no greater pretensions—
Deeds are great, but words are few.
Those who stand amidst the tempest,
Firm as when the skies are blue.
Will be friends while life endures—
Cling to those who cling to you.

When you see a worthy brother
Befitting the stormy main,
Lend a helping hand fraternal,
Till he reach the shore again.
Don't desert the old and true friend
When misfortune comes in view,
For he needs friendship's comfort—
Cling to those who cling to you.

HOW TO MAKE A LAWN.

The ground should be entirely free from stagnant water. It must be trenched ploughed to the depth of eighteen or twenty-four inches. A week of hot, dry weather will be sufficient to dry up the grass on a thin soil, a whole month of drought would fail to destroy the verdure. The depth, whatever it may be, should be uniform, for if it be deeper in some places than in others, the deep places will settle and make the ground uneven. Evenness of surface is of great importance. I do not mean level, for an undulating surface is quite as desirable for a lawn as a level one, but whether level or undulating it must be smooth and free from even the smallest stones, as these interfere with the operations of the mowing machine.

Red-top is the best grass for a lawn, about fifty or sixty pounds to the acre. Fifty pounds will be sufficient if the seed be clean and good, which it seldom is. Some people recommend white clover, say one-fourth, to be mixed with red-top, and this does very well, but I prefer the pure red-top. Early in the spring is the best time for seeding a lawn. All preparatory work should be performed in the fall, so that during winter the ground may settle, and any defects that may be developed can be corrected before sowing. In spring, at the fitting moment, give a light ploughing, and good harrowing, pick off all the stones, sow the seed, and give it a good rolling, which finishes the work. By sowing early in the spring you may have a respectable lawn before midsummer. —P. Barry's address before the Geneva, N. Y., Agricultural Society.

VEGETABLE SLICER AND GRATER.

A simple contrivance may be made by any neat carpenter, and by almost any one apt in the use of tools. It is a box, or trough, about 10 inches by 20 inches, open at one end and on the top, strongly made of inch stuff, furnished with strong cleats on the sides, upon which is a smaller box, without top or bottom, which may be moved back and forth through the box. Slides, very strongly made, to bear pressure, are fitted to rest upon the same cleats, but lower down, so as not to interfere with the free motion of the box over them. These slides are either graters for horse-radish, carrots, etc., or furnished with knives for slicing cabbage, or any other vegetables so used in the household economy. In use, the article to be sliced or grated—say a cabbage head—is placed in the little box, and the knife slide being inserted, it is shoved back and forth, bearing with the hand upon it until enough is cut off to enable the cover to be put in, and after this the slicing is continued until it is all cut up. A drawer beneath catches the shavings, or the gratings, and, if desirable, a place may be made to keep the slide which may be in use, but this should not add much to the bulk of the machine.—American Agricultural.

Anecdotes.

"Little boy, who stoned Stephen?"
"The Jews."
"Where did they stone him?"
"Beyond the limits of the city."
"What did they take him there for?"
"To get a good shot at him."

"Arthur," said a good-natured father to his young hopeful, "I did not know until to-day that you had been whipped last week."
"Didn't you, pa?" replied the young hopeful; "I knew it at the time."

"Ah, my good fellow, where have you been for a week back?"
"For a week back?" I have not been troubled with a week back, I thank you."
"No, no; where have you been long back?"
"Long back!" Don't call me long back, you scoundrel!"

Which is the strongest day in the week? Sunday, because all the rest are weak-days.

APPOINTMENTS. At a meeting of the Selectmen, held on the 11th inst., the following appointments were made for the year ensuing:—

Police Officers, William Parker, Jr., James E. Maxin, Joseph W. Lombard, Samuel T. Allen, Eliab Ramsdell, C. J. Oldham, Horace Felts, William Gragg, Frank A. Lane, Joshua H. Spear, Josiah Randlett, Edmund Fitzgerald, E. W. Underwood, George H. Locke, Charles N. Ditson.

Surveyors of Wood and Bark, Richard Newcomb, Richard Newcomb, Jr., Christopher A. Spear, Edward A. Adams, N. H. Beals, Frederick Hardwick, Harry H. Farnum, Hiram Prior, E. Ramsdell, S. F. Newcomb, Ebenezer Adams.

Superintendent of Town Hall, Daniel F. French.

Superintendent of Lock-up, Washington M. French.

Superintendent of Burials, Charles H. Kimball.

Weighers of Coal, George B. Pray, William Cushing, N. B. Fernald.

Weigher of Hay and Granite, N. B. Fernald.

Weigher of Vessels, Josiah Adams.

Scalers of Weights and Measures, Josiah Adams.

Sexton and Undertaker, John Hall.

Superintendent of Town Clock, John O. Holden.

Collector of Taxes, George H. Locke.

Rate for collecting, six mills on a dollar.

A CHANGE. We learn that Mr. Horace B. Spear has been chosen by the directors of the National Mt. Wollaston Bank as Cashier of said bank. He intends to accept of the office, it is said, and will enter upon the duties of the same, on the first of next month. This will leave a vacancy in a Cashier of the National Granite Bank. A good and honorable position for some trustworthy man.

MR. HENRY F. BARKER, the present Cashier of the Wollaston Bank, intends, we learn, to enter into company with his father and brother in the granite business.

THE NEW CHURCH. The carpenters have nearly or quite completed their labor on the exterior of the new Orthodox Church in this place; and the building is becoming quite attractive. There is yet a large amount of work to be done on the inside. The fresco painters have considerable to do; and none of the pews have yet been put in; and there is besides much other work. The stain glass windows, which have recently been put in their place, gives the church a very inviting appearance from within. The bell from the old church has been removed to the new one, and from the indications yesterday, we should judge it will be placed on the new church; still it was hoped by many that they would get a new bell to go with the new church.

RELIGIOUS. At the adjourned parish meeting of the Universalist Society in this place, held on Thursday evening, there was an unusual large number of persons present. Several new members were voted into the Society, and the Committee was instructed to invite their pastor,—Rev. Geo. W. Skinner,—to remain with them another year.

CONCERT AND BALL. We would call the attention of our readers to the grand testimonial concert and ball to be tendered to Mr. George Monk, at the Town Hall, on the 31st inst. The Shawmut Military Band of Boston, will appear in a splendid uniform, under the direction of Mr. Bates; the orchestra under the direction of Mr. Monk, thirty performers in all. It will be undoubtedly one of the largest parties of the kind given in this place for some time, as Mr. Monk's musical talent has won for him many friends.

REAL ESTATE SALE. Mr. Daniel Baxter has sold quite a large tract of land at the Point, known as the Point Holes, to the real estate Company at Wollaston Heights. The present indication is that carpenters, painters, and mechanics of nearly all the various trades will find enough to do in this place, for years to come; as the prospects are there will be a large number of houses erected during the next few years.

THE CHILDREN connected with the Universalist Sabbath School had a grand time at Revere Hall, on Wednesday afternoon and evening. The parents sent in a bountiful supply of refreshments; excellent music was furnished by Mr. Geo. Monk; and a jolly good time was had by the children. If any of our readers were troubled with the "blues," we think it would have done them good to have stepped in and looked at the innocent games of the young.

ENLARGING THE TOWN HOUSE.

To the Publisher of the Patriot.

You will remember at the last town meeting, after a long discussion, it was voted to accept the report of a Committee to whom was referred the matter of better arranging the Town House for the convenience of the citizens of the town. Being a listener to the discussion we would refer to several circumstances brought before the meeting at that time. We first would say a word on some of the remarks of Mr. H. H. Faxon. (not that we always agree with him in what he says,) yet, I would in candor say the ideas advanced by him at the meeting were good and truthful, notwithstanding the land adjoining the property of the town does belong to him. No matter who it belongs to,—the town as situated had better own the land. We mean the twelve feet north, and twenty to twenty-five feet west, or in the rear, than to have it in the hands of others, no matter who they may be. We speak as a taxpayer. We think as we said before the town can better afford to own that adjoining land than any individual. The cost to make the proposed alterations, as estimated by the Committee, was to be about seven thousand dollars. You, or any citizen, can see, notwithstanding the explanations, that it will be but a very short time before the town will again be called on to make more, and more thorough changes for the Town Hall. Whereas, if, at this time, the town should reconsider the vote passed, and vote to purchase the necessary amount of land in rear of present back wall of the Town Hall; extend the hall twenty or twenty-five feet, using the present wall stone for back wall, at a probable cost of not over fifteen thousand dollars. Arrange desk or platform for speakers on the side (either side) midway of the Hall instead of the end. We can imagine a much more easy place to hear, when all could hear, and be more convenient. How much better than proposed galleries, cannot but be plain to every one.

So far as ever changing location of Town House no one having the interest of the town in view would for one moment think of it. It is now central, near and convenient to most all of us, and to most of the principal places of resort, houses of worship, post office, depot, hotel, banks, &c. We do not speak on selfish grounds; we have no land to sell the town, nor to help any one else to do so; we expect nothing of gain any way, more than all of our fellow townsmen. But, we do hope it may be well thought of before we go too fast; and if it is necessary to have it enlarged, let it be well done, that we may not in three or five years have to undo, and change again.

DENTON'S LECTURES. The popularity of Prof. Denton's lectures has been so great that the Revere Hall is not large enough to accommodate the rush of people to hear him, and accordingly Mr. Richards has been obliged to engage the town Hall for the next lecture on Friday evening; and as that lecture, it is said, will be the best lecture of the course, and in order to allow every one the privilege of hearing it, he announced at the close of the lecture last evening that the price of admission will be reduced to the small pittance of ten cents.

There has been a general desire on the part of those attending the present course to hear the Professor deliver his second course at the Town Hall, which is announced to be the following:

First Lecture.—The Future of our Planet and its inhabitants as indicated by Geology.

Second and Third.—The origin of man.

Fourth.—The antiquity of man and his Primitive Condition.

Fifth.—The races of mankind and their destiny; illustrated by painted portraits of the different varieties of mankind.

Sixth.—The origin and cure of evil geologically considered.

If a sufficient number subscribe next Friday night for tickets at one dollar for the entire course the services of Prof. Denton will be secured.

SUPERINTENDENT OF ALMSHOUSE. We notice by the Herald, that the Overseers of the Poor have advertised for a Superintendent of the town farm in this place. A good situation for a man of the right stamp. The labor is not arduous, and the pay is quite remunerative. No doubt there will be quite a number of applicants.

PRESENTATION TO TEACHERS. On Wednesday of last week the students of the Union Business College in Boston, presented a gold watch to Mr. French, the senior principal, and gave a handsome chain to the junior principal, Mr. Chamberlain. The compliment was a well-deserved recognition of faithful instruction.

Our advertising friends are crowding us.

For the Patriot.
LOGIC AND TAXES.

We have been not a little interested in the logic used by certain citizens of Quincy in reference to the assessment of taxes in the town. It has been urged, for instance, that land bought for improvement for building purposes say—should be assessed for taxes quite differently from land in the same lot equally eligible for building purposes, but unimproved, or occupied only for agriculture. That is, if A buys a portion of B's field which is taxed for two hundred dollars per acre, and by shrewd management and personal effort in dividing it, and adorning it with a few trees or streets, so that he sells it for five hundred dollars per acre, in the season, he (A.) or the purchaser should be taxed for five hundred dollars per acre while B who refuses to sell the balance of his field for a like sum ($500), but prefers to hold it as a luxury for farming purposes, and thereby exclude improvements, shall still be taxed for only $200 per acre.

Again suppose a poor mechanic buys of some wealthy landowner a few rods of farm land on which he proposes to erect a cottage for himself and have a garden beside. For his efforts he must be heavily taxed, say four hundred per cent. more than the land just over the fence, held by his wealthy neighbor. That is, if wealth chooses to hold its land as a luxury, and exclude taxable property therefrom, it shall be taxed for this one-fourth only that assessed on the garden and grounds of enterprising poverty. What think you of such logic, humble dwellers in Quincy. What think you of such a premium on unimproved wealth? Such a barring out of enterprise.

Suppose again a millionaire on Beacon Street who should own Boston Common, should choose to hold this for a grass plot or potato field and should claim that the city had no right to tax this for other than its value for farming uses while he so occupied it. Would it be justice to assess the man of moderate means who has bought a lot adjoining for building purposes, at the rate of $50,000 per acre while the millionaire who bars out the taxable property of buildings, &c., is taxed only $500 per acre.

Property is worth what it will sell for in an open market, and should be so taxed regardless of the uses to which it is applied. Now, we claim that this rule has not been observed in assessing taxes in Quincy—that small estates—that struggling enterprise has been compelled to bear an unequal burden of taxation.

It is this which has induced much wealth and enterprise to pass by and around our beautiful town to neighboring towns, where land could be bought and taxes were more equally assessed.

Now, we do not of course object to the retaining of landed property unimproved for any lawful purpose where parties are able and choose to do so, but let it be fairly taxed for what it is capable of yielding its possessor, and the town. Don't pounce too eagerly on enterprise which may chance to stray among us. If our lands so long held and taxed for cow pastures begin to team with live improvements, don't forget too soon, Mr. Assessors, that they have been cow pastures and don't forget moreover, that there are other moving lands and cow pastures which are even more valuable, and which outside enterprise is eager to improve whenever they can be bought for this. Fiat justitia, &c. COMMON SENSE.

POLITICAL. The New Hampshire election has created considerable excitement the present week. The Democrats have made a decided change in political aspect of that State. At first it was supposed they had elected their Governor, Councilors and a majority of the Senators and Representatives; but from late returns it looks more favorable for the Republicans. There is probably no election of Governor by the people, which will throw the election into the Legislature.

PERSONAL. The Rev. Henry Giles, who a year or two ago was so seriously ill that his recovery seemed exceedingly improbable, is now in such improved physical condition that he purposes to appear again before the public as a lecturer.

LECTURE. We hope our readers will bear in mind the lecture to be given in the Town Hall, next Monday evening, by Rev. Henry Morgan of Boston, on "Fast Young Men," which is drawing crowded houses just now in our larger towns and cities. Tickets 25 cents, to be had at the door. Tickets for the course of five lectures can be procured until Monday evening at the stores of E. Clapp and J. O. Holden. See advertisement.

THE teachers and children connected with the St. John's Church gave a very fine dramatic entertainment at the Town Hall, last night. The songs and choruses were well received, and the tableaux were excellent.

WOMAN'S RIGHTS ON CAPE COD. At the town meeting in Pembroke last week, Mrs. Robert Barker and Mrs. N. K. Randall were elected Overseers of the Poor, and Miss Sarah J. Brown a member of the School Committee.

VERY CHEAP. Ladies, do not fail to read the advertisement of Cushman & Brooks, as you will find every thing needed for a handsome wardrobe at the very lowest prices.

NEW GOLD LOAN. We would call the attention of our readers to the new 7-30 gold loan of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, secured by first mortgage on railroad and land grant. It appears to be safe and very profitable investment. The amount of land granted to the Company by the charter is immense, and is said to exceed fifty million acres. This superb estate is larger by 10,000 square miles than the six New England States. There is room in it for ten States as large as Massachusetts, each of them with a soil, a climate, and resources of coal, timber, ores of metals, and perpetual water-power, altogether superior to those upon which Massachusetts has become populous, rich, refined and politically powerful. The Charter grants to the Company the right of way for their road and telegraph line through the public domain, to the extent of 200 feet in width on each side of the track, and all necessary ground for station buildings, workshops, depots, machine-shops, switches, side-tracks, turn-tables, and water-stations. See advertisement.

Poetry.

HAVE COURAGE TO SAY NO.

You're starting to-day on life's journey,
Alone on the highway of life;
You'll meet with a thousand temptations;
Each city with evil is rife.
There's danger wherever you go;
But if you are tempted to enter,
Have courage, my boy, to say No.
The siren's song may allure you;
Beware of her cunning and art;
Whenever you see her approaching,
Be guarded and have to depart.
The billiard saloons are inviting,
Ducked out in their sin and show;
You may be invited to enter;
Have courage, my boy, to say No.
The bright rube wile may be offered—
No matter how tempting it be,
From poison that stings like an adder,
My boy, have courage to flee—
The gambling halls are below you,
Their lights bow they dance to and fro,
If you should be tempted to enter,
Think twice, even thrice, ere you go.
In courage alone lies your safety
When you the long journey begin,
And trust in a Heavenly Father,
Who will keep you unspotted from sin.
Temptations will go on increasing,
As streams from a rivulet flow;
But if you are true to your machad,
Have courage, my boy, to say No.

RUNNING A TIME TABLE.

I have been a "railroad man" for a great many years—have, as the expression goes, grown gray in the service. I am certain, however, in all my experience,
I never saw a road that was the equal of the Valley Air Line, upon which I was,
at the time of the incident about to be related, a brakeman.
The Valley Air Line was one of those roads that spring up suddenly out of the imagination of a few men. One cannot say that it sprung from their purses, for if they had the seed in them to grow anything, it was never put in the Valley.
There was, as nearly as I can now remember, a capital stock, which was never paid up, a little town and village credit,
and a large amount of preferred stock,
first and second mortgages, etc. As a result the road was built wretchedly,
grades were bad, road-bed was poor bridges and culverts were thrown together in the worst possible manner,
because the worst was the cheapest.
The iron was a light and frail mass,
manufactured in England especially for the American market, while the rolling stock had been worn out in services on other roads and sold to the Valley Air Line on credit and long time.

The reader will see from this truthful statement that the Valley was not the safest road for travelers in the country.
It was not. Innumerable were the accidents we had, and it is a wonder to me that none of them were serious. While we had many narrow escapes, we still managed through sheer good luck, slow
time, and great care, to get on without breaking bones; but I positively assure you that time did not accustom us to the road, and we never ran into the depot at night without feeling thankful that we were alive. When I say we, I mean the conductor, engineer, baggage-man, fireman and myself. How the passengers felt I do not know, but I do know they ought to have felt as thankful as the road
men that their bones were in good condition to allow them to walk from the depot to their homes. Ignorance may have been perfect bliss to them, however.

The engineer of our train—the Lightning Express—was one of the most sober,
careful, thoughtful and industrious men that ever handled a throttle. He possessed more than the ordinary share of thoughtful prudence, of his class, and it was owing to this fact that so great a degree of good fortune came to us.

A few moments before the train was to start one morning, Gardiner, the engineer, called me to his cab. He appeared unusually downcast that morning, though at the best he was by no means a "gay"
fellow.

"Bob," said Gardiner after a few seconds talk about general matters.
"Bob I want you to be very careful today. I know you're a good fellow and always do your duty well; but to-day I want you to do more. I want you to stand by your brake every second of the trip—not to leave it for a moment, and when I signal I want you to set them up
as you never did before, and promptly
too. I know you will do it for me, won't you, Bob?"

I was too astonished to speak for a second, and then I asked: "Why, what under the sun is the matter with you, Gardiner? You know the brakes are so nearly worn out that it is impossible to set them up, and you know too—"
"I know it all, Bob, and that is the reason why I want you to be careful. I am going to try and make the time table to-day; if it is possible, I will do so. I feel just as though something was going to happen, and am more than half sorry that I promised; but I'll do it though—Now promise me, Bob, and off to your brakes."

I promised and took my post, not a little mystified at Gardiner's words, looks and actions.

We left the depot and went rattling on over the iron. Passengers looked at each other in surprise and wondered what under the sun was the matter with the Valley—if it had suddenly awakened from its long sleep, and now proposed to be a railroad in earnest.

When the conductor came through the train and came along by me, I asked:
"What is the matter with Gardiner
this morning?"
"Oh," was the reply, "he and the old man have had a blow out this morning."

You see our train never makes connections—passengers always lay over and,
of course, they growl. This morning the old man called us into the office and the whole thing was out. Gardiner talked like a father to them, and as he grew excited, he said that it was criminal running the road in the condition it was.
He told them the time table as made up was fast even for a first-class road, and if we undertook to run it, a frightful accident would not be avoided. When Gardiner said it was criminal to run the road as it was, Supt. Brown was very hot. He fairly boiled over. He declared that there was no better road in the country,
and that Gardiner was a coward who ought to go on to a gravel train, and if he didn't make time he'd have him there, too. The road was losing its business and there had got to be a change. Brown also said that in Valley Creek, where he lived, he had noticed that the train always slowed and lost time enough there to lose the connection. Gardiner replied to this, that at the Creek there was a down grade, the bridge was unsafe, and he was obliged to slack up for safety. More than this, the track passed through the play ground of the Creek school, was not fenced in, and they could not go through at a rapid speed without danger to the children.

"Then Brown burst out with an oath, that if parents did not want their children run over, they must keep them off the track. It would be a good thing to run over one or two of them, as it would teach them a lesson. Of course, he didn't mean this, but he was 'hot'
you see, and did not know what he did say. He added, that Gardiner's family lived near the track, and that Gardiner's sole reason for slowing, was to have a chance to chat with them as he went through. This set Gardiner's anger on fire, and he then and there declared that he would make time, let the consequences
be what they might, and if disaster happened, Brown must assume the responsibility. You see he is keeping his word,
but the old fellow feels bad though."

We dashed on over the frail iron at a frightful speed. You could almost hear the bars crackle as we went. The cars surged from East to West, forcing passengers to fairly cling to their seats.—
Not for a second did I leave my brake.

We were nearly down to Valley Creek on time. As we approached the long stretch of down grade, I felt by the shaking that Gardiner had slackened up,
as if the danger were really to great; and then, as if his promise had come full upon his mind, had again carefully opened his throttle. Down the Valley we went,
our rapid speed startling the birds, the cattle, and even the staid old forest trees into new and strange ideas. I grasped the brake firmly; the engine whistled and screamed, warning all to keep clear of it. I held my breath, well knowing that if we left the track it would be to go to destruction. Suddenly the whistle ceased, and then there came three unearthly yells from it; they pierced my ears and made them ache.

THE CALF SKIN ROBBERY.

Most of our readers are probably aware from notices published in the PATRIOT at the time, that one of the heaviest and most successful robberies, which has been committed in this place for several years, occurred on last Christmas night.

The currying shop of Mr. John Page, Jr., was broken into and forty-eight dozen of finished calf skins, valued at twelve hundred dollars, were stolen. Posters were sent far and near offering a reward of $200 for the leather, and fifty dollars extra for the thieves. Nothing definite however could be gathered about the stolen property, although Mr. Page was confident in his own mind, who one of the robbers were. He has accordingly worked diligently from that time to the present to bring the rogues to justice; and it was with much surprise and joy to many of our citizens, on Sunday last, to learn that one of the thieves had been captured.

It appears that Mr. Page had mistrusted from the day after the robbery a young man, of foreign birth, by the name of Daniel O'Hern, who had worked for him previous to the robbery, and since. But nothing sufficient to cause his arrest occurred until last week. About ten days previous to that time he was shot through the side of the face while in a larger beer saloon, on Hanover street, Boston, and was obliged to be carried to the hospital. When able to leave he was taken to a police station, where detective W. L. Armour was employed to work the case out. Mr. Armour showed Mr. O'Hern a roll of calf skin that was carried by Mr. Page and asked him if he could tell whose work it was. After carefully examining the leather he said he thought it looked as though it was carried at Mr. Page's at Quincy. After some other conversation, the direct question was asked, Where is the rest of the leather you helped steal from there on Christmas night? At first he denied knowing anything about it, but being informed by the detective that he knew all about the affair, and only wanted to see if his story would agree with his accomplice, he (O'Hern) swore about Madden (his companion in the deed) and went on to tell all the facts concerning it.

This was last Saturday night, the next morning, Detective Armour came to Quincy and by the aid of the officers here succeeded in arresting Joseph W. Madden, who was visiting his mother, a widow woman who resides in this place. He was placed in the lock-up under the Town Hall to wait for his trial on the following day. But, if it had not been for a vigilant watch kept on the outside of the building, he would have got clear. As it was he succeeded in tearing up the planks in his cell, and by the aid of a piece of gas pipe, to dig a small hole under the door in the earth, seven and a half inches in depth by twelve broad, through which he successfully crawled, after a difficult task of some two hours, having first removed all his clothing. But in getting through a petition in the cellar, the noise aroused the watch, and a larger police force was called, who kept guard the remainder of the night. The next day there was a complete rush to the Town Hall to see Madden, and hear the trial. But as he had not been able to procure counsel the trial was postponed to the following day.

At the trial on Tuesday, Daniel O'Hern stated that the robbery was planned, arranged and accomplished by Madden and himself. That they went twice for their booty in a light wagon, and delivered the leather to one John McGuire of So. Braintree. But as O'Hern stated that he had never seen McGuire but four times in his life to know him, and each of these times were in the night, the Court considered the evidence not sufficient to hold McGuire, so he was discharged.

O'Hern stated that McGuire gave Madden $20, on the night of the robbery, of which he had $18; and that he received $15 at another time, and several smaller sums at subsequent times, amounting in all to about $65. It was agreed, however, that he should have $250.

Madden was placed under $2000 bonds to appear before the Grand Jury. Being unable to procure the bonds he was carried to jail to wait his trial, which will probably take place at the April term of the Superior Court, which meets on the first Monday in April.

We are obliged to omit this week many advertisements—both new and old—but will endeavor to accommodate our friends next week by issuing a supplement.

THE ASSESSMENT OF FARMS.

A writer upon "Logic and Taxes" in your paper of last week seems to hold the opinion that the farms of Quincy should be taxed at about the price at which small lots for building have been sold in their vicinity. Let us test his logic by another example. Last Autumn the price of single apples in the fruit shops was three cents. Suppose a tax was to be raised upon that fruit and Common Sense had twenty barrels in his cellar, would he think it just to tax them at a valuation of three cents per apple? "I do not doubt," he would say, "that a limited number of persons pay three cents for a single apple just when they want it and where they want it. Three cents fairly represents the taxable value of a single apple to a hungry man, who saves a thirty cent soup at Parker's by buying it. But to tax my twenty barrels at that rate is preposterous. I can get but a dollar and a half a barrel for them, out of which I must pay for barrels and expressing." Now for the application. Your correspondent assumes that people are kept out of the town because Farmers are unwilling to sell their land. I deny that this is the case. There is more land in the market to-day than will be built upon in ten years. We have all read a long advertisement of houses in different parts of Quincy offered at about two-thirds of their cost, and judging from the length of time it has appeared, there would seem to be no very pressing demand for them even at that ruinous sacrifice. There are a number of recently-built houses in the town that cannot be sold for what it cost to put them up reckoning the land as worth nothing. Some of the best building land in Quincy has been sold by Farmers to the Wollaston Land Company at one hundred and fifty dollars per acre. Small lots of it will undoubtedly be sold at a much greater price. But, be it remembered, the purchaser pays, not for the land alone, but for the capital used in dividing, advertising, planting and grading it. He pays for the privilege of a three years free railroad ticket, for being delivered from the nuisance of a grog shop round the corner, and for the general character of the neighborhood which the Company is pledged to secure. These considerations give their taxable value to any small building lots that may be sold. There are, I suppose, at least five hundred building lots for sale by the Company I have mentioned. Adjoining this Wollaston settlement are the farms of two well known citizens who have recently represented the town on our board of Selectmen. Does Common Sense propose to tax these farms at the rate at which the Company may sell a few of their five hundred small lots? That is what his communication seems to point to. Any loose talk about wealthy landholders is nothing to the purpose. All the farming land in Quincy should be taxed as building lots, or it should not.

Finally, I believe that almost any land in this town may be bought as soon as it is clearly demanded for the class of dwellings that it is for the interest of the town should cover it. Farmers are not so enamoured of their calling as to refuse building-lot price for their acres, when it is offered them. In the mean-time they pay the lion's share of taxes. Their lands, barns, cattle and tools are all numbered upon the Assessors books, while the mortgages and stocks of their wealthy neighbors remain in modest seclusion. Indeed it might be argued that it would be truly humane to tax them out of their misery at once, as Common Sense proposes to do. But could we give up our prize State statistician with his figures to convince all men that turnips invariably pay fifty per cent. upon the investment, while hens were never known to return less than seventy-five? Could we resign our agricultural politician with his annual cattle-show oration? Humanity would be poor indeed without these amusing personages. So, Mr. Common Sense, spare us a few farmers.

Eggs. The warm and pleasant weather for the last six or eight weeks has set the hens to work with a will, and the quantity of eggs they have turned out has really frightened the dealers in this article; and in some instances the effect on the market has touched the pocket of dealers to the tune of hundreds of dollars. Good fresh eggs are now bringing in this place from twenty-five to thirty cents per dozen. In Easton and some of the towns south of us, they are offered as low as twenty cents.

We would invite our citizens having animals, vehicles or other articles for sale, to place their notices in our advertising columns; believing they will find them to give good results from small investments.

HORSES. Those in want of horses are invited to read the new advertisements in to-day's paper.

FAST DAY PROCLAMATION.

The people of this Commonwealth have ever in the past been ready to acknowledge their dependence on the goodness of God; and, conscious of their immeasurable obligations to him, and in view of their sinfulness and ingratitude, have been accustomed to supplicate his forgiveness. We of the present day are not less in need of his mercy than were the fathers, feeling as we must that we have failed to meet his requirements.

National sins have ever been followed by national judgments, and our sins are aggravated by the peculiar blessings which we have enjoyed from the hand of our Creator. As a people we have been forgetful of him, abusing the gifts of his bounty, missing the nobler intellectual moral powers with which he has endowed us, and failing to honor his name by reverence and spiritual worship. It becomes us, therefore, to unite in making humble confession and offering penitential prayer, in the name of our Great Mediator, entreating him to avert political dangers, to remove social evils, to give us all temporal prosperity, and to establish righteousness, charity and peace in the land.

I do therefore, by and with the advice and consent of the council, hereby appoint THURSDAY, the sixth day of April next, to be observed as a day of fasting, humiliation and prayer; and I invite the people of the Commonwealth, abstaining from all secular occupations, to assemble in their several houses of public worship, and devote that day to religious services.

WILLIAM CLAPLIN.

MORGAN'S LECTURE. Rev. Mr. Morgan delivered his lecture on "Fast Young Men" last Monday evening in Town Hall.

While the speaker's style of delivering might not have pleased every one, his lecture was an interesting one, full of excellent points, and the general effect of it could not have been otherwise than good. The audience was large, quiet and attentive.

JURORS. Mr. John Faxon has been drawn by the Selectmen as Grand Juror for the year. Messrs. Josiah Baxter and Charles H. Porter as Jurors for the Criminal Session, Superior Court, Norfolk County for the April term.

FROST. There was a slight frost in this place on Thursday morning, the first we have seen here for several weeks.

We learn that Mr. John M. Falk, formerly of this town, has been appointed Actuary and Chief Inspector of the National Life Insurance Company of New York.

PERSONAL. We are sorry to learn that Mrs. Seth Burrell, who in the early part of the winter met with quite a serious accident in Granite street, is still a great sufferer. Mrs. Burrell, is widely known and respected in this town, having taught school for a great many years; in some cases three generations received their first instructions by her side. She has the sympathy of her numerous friends in this sad affliction, and they trust that as the warm, pleasant spring weather comes, she may be restored to health and happiness.

MONK'S CONCERT. We would like to speak of the grand musical concert, to be tendered to Mr. George Monk, at the Town Hall, on Friday evening next. It will undoubtedly be one of the finest concerts given in this place this season, and if room permitted we would be pleased to say a few words in its favor, but we are so completely pressed with notices from our advertising friends we cannot find space to do so.

A notice for proposals for filling Quantum Causeway will be found in to-day's paper.

TOWN MEETING. A call for an April meeting will be issued we learn in a few days.

AUCTION.

Will be held at Public Auction, on THURSDAY, April 6th, at four o'clock P. M. about four acres of grass land situated on South St., at the junction of Main St. Also, at the same time, two acres of Salt Marsh at Hough's Neck, south from the residence of Mr. Belcher. Terms made known at time of sale.

For the Patriot. SOCIAL GATHERING. One of those old fashioned gatherings, which makes the heart feel glad to dwell upon, was held at the residence of Mrs. Thomas Pratt, on Thursday of last week, when about forty of her relatives and friends met to congratulate her upon her eighty-fourth birthday.

Although fortune has been varied and life a checkered scene, still she looks as though the hand of Time had dealt gently with her, and she appears as smart as hundreds who have not seen so many years by a score. After spending a few hours in speech and merry making the company dispersed hoping that the same be renewed until they could celebrate her one hundredth birthday.

QUINCY SAVINGS BANK.

In the controvery now going on relative to the changes in the Quincy Savings Bank, we hope that the Trustees will not get so enthusiastic as to forget the interest of its

Depositors to gain their own private ends.

HONESTY BEFORE SELFISHNESS.

GROCERIES. We would call the attention of our readers, who are in the habit of buying goods in Boston, to a first class grocery store, on the corner of

Beach and Lincoln streets, only a few steps from the Old Colony depot. Their goods are excellent and their prices very reasonable as will be seen by their advertisement in the next column.

A GOOD INVESTMENT. We would call the attention of capitalists and others

to the new 7-30 gold loan of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company. Investment

in these bonds will be permanent and profitable, and at the same time perfectly reliable. The immense land granted to the Company by the government will certainly put the road on a sure and permanent foundation. The bonds are free from United States tax and pay an interest of seven and three-tenths per cent.

per annum,—payable the first of January

and July. For further particulars read the advertisement in another column.

A GOOD FERTILIZER. Bradley's

Phosphate has become the standard fertilizer in the markets of the United States,

having a wider reputation from Maine

to Louisiana than any other concentrated manure. Since its first introduction it has grown rapidly in favor with the agricultural community generally, and

where once introduced has never failed to hold the first position among fertilizers.

Combining as it does the quick action of

Peruvian Guano, and the lasting properties of Bone, it cannot fail to continue to be the favorite manure. We know of several instances in this town, where the crops would have been nearly or quite a total failure last season, owing to the

drough if it had not been for this excellent fertilizer. See advertisement in another column.

KIND WORDS.

Let us say a kind word when we can,

and encourage the poor man every day.

Kindly treat every man,

Never mind what others may say.

Farmers' Department.

MARCH.

In this month we finish up winter work, lay out for spring operations, and plan for the summer.

The memorandum-book is one of the farmer's best friends, if he will only make it so. It is nearly half any job to undertake it just at the right time, and a farmer whose work-wait for him to see what his neighbors are going to do, may as well "lay down the shovel and the hoe." It requires but a modicum of experience, if a little thought be given to work, to be able to judge thus of the best time to do every common kind of farm-work. The hints which we give, cannot of course, have other than a general application, and are to be followed with common sense. It is well to remember that the simplest forethought has a greater practical value than the profoundest afterthought. Our best plans often escape our memories in the hurry of pressing farm-work, or are thought of when too late to carry them out, unless put upon paper and systematically referred to. If the memorandum-book shows just what work to do, it will matter little if the farmer is drawn on a jury, or otherwise necessarily absent; the oldest boy or the good wife will be able to see that the work goes on.

Rainy-day Work. There are the potatoes to be looked over, those fit for seed selected, the decayed ones thrown out, and all "sprouted"—that is have the sprouts removed. It may be well, also, to cut or rub the tops off from rutabagas and other roots. (These young turnip sprouts, by the way, make delicious greens.) Cellars may be cleaned out and whitewashed.

Fences. When the frost has come out of the ground, and before it is dry, fence-posts may be set with great ease. All the fences of the farm should be examined and the posts straightened; if need be, weak rails removed, and new ones put in.—American Agriculturist.

WHITENESS TREES.

Don't whitewash the bark upon the bodies of fruit and ornamental trees.—We are at a loss to know for what purpose some persons thus coat the bark of fruit and shade trees about their premises with lime unless it is to make them look nice. It certainly does them more harm than good, as it serves to obstruct the respiratory organs, and in a measure prevents a thrifty growth. Should the bark become diseased and rough, or covered with moss, scrape it thoroughly with a hoe or scraper of some suitable description; after which wash thoroughly with a strong solution of soap and water. If this is done properly every season, it will prove a great benefit, by destroying the insects which prey upon the bark, and otherwise promoting a healthy condition thereof, and increasing the vigor and vitality of the tree.—Farm Journal.

Incidents.

A lady walking down town, saw a little boy pinching his younger brother, who was crying bitterly.

"Why, my boy," said she to the young tormentor, "don't you know you're doing very wrong? What would you do if you should kill your little brother?"

"Why," he replied, "I should put on my new black pants and go to the funeral."

"Sally, what time does your folks dine?"

"Soon as you go away; them's missus's orders."

Two gentlemen, slightly acquainted, met a young lady not noted for her personal charms. "Jack," remarked one, "here comes the craziest-looking girl in New York."

"Yes, I'm engaged to her," was the rather crushing reply.

"Bub, which is the quickest way for me to get to the depot?"

"Accompanying you"—Run!
